ST. NEOTS.

ST. NEOTS is a market town, parish, head of a union and county court district, a polling-place for the county, and station on the Great Northern railway, 51 miles from London, 24 from Peterborough, 12 from Bedford, 9 south-west from Huntingdon, 14 from St. Ives and 18 from Cambridge, in the hundred of Toseland, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The town is situated on the east bank of the Ouse, which is crossed by a stone bridge of three arches (built in 1589 from the ruins of the Priory), which connects this county with Bedfordshire; the town consists chiefly of two wide streets, crossing each other at right angles, and spacious market place. A local board of twelve members was established here in 1876.

The church of the Blessed Virgin Mary is spacious and an elegant example of the Perpendicular style: the building consists of chancel, with vestry, clerestoried nave of five bays, aisles prolonged two bays into the chancel, north and south porch and a western tower containing a peal of 8 bells; the body of the church was completed about 1496; the porches were added and the tower of Weldon stone begun about 1489; the work had advanced as far as the belfry in 1493 and the pinnacles were built between 1526 and 1535; the roof, of the same age as the church, is bordered by a cornice of oak, upon which, between mouldings of vine leaves, are various grotesque figures carved in fine relief, the whole fabric, save the chancel, is embattled, and at the north-east angle of the nave is an octagonal stair turret;

the tower is of four stages, surrounded at intervals by belts of quatrefoils; at the angles are square pannelled turrets, buttressed up to the belfry storey, which is lighted by two tall windows on each face, over which is rich quatrefoil work, finished with a counter-embattled parapet, 100 feet from the ground; the turrets, rising above this, are crowned with crocketed spires, surrounded by pinnacles which reach a height of 128 feet; the pinnacles and battlements of the tower were thoroughly repaired in 1880, at a cost of about £180, raised by subscription: the church was restored in 1847, when the pews were replaced by open benches of oak with carved panels and poppy-heads on the ends; the organ was built in 1855: all the 29 windows were originally filled with stained glass, of which a very few mutilated fragments now remain; the east and south windows of the chancel have been filled with stained glass, the one by subscription in 1864 and the other in memory of David Rowley esq. who died in 1855; and in the Jesus Chapel is a window placed by Mrs. Dawson Rowley in memory of her husband, George Dawson Rowley esq. who died in 1878: one window of exquisite design and workmanship was in the Paris Exhibition, and is now at the east end of the south aisle; the beautiful glass in the west window of the tower and in the five windows of the south clerestory was placed there by subscription in memory of the Rev. Charles Hale Collier, vicar of the parish in 1865-6, to whose memory a window in the Lady Chapel has also been inserted by an anonymous friend; more recently a stained memorial window has been erected by the parishioners to the late Dr. Rix, and others have been inserted at the cost of C. P. Rowley esq. J.P. of Priory park, St. Neots: nearly all the windows are now stained. The registers of the church commence in 1691, the vestry records in 1656. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £200 including residence, in the gift of Mrs. Rowley, of Priory park, St. Neots, who is also the lay impropriator of the rectory, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Richard Corker Meade B.D. of Trinity College, Dublin, and surrogate.

Here are Baptist, Congregational and Wesleyan Methodist chapels.

A Cemetery of three acres situated at the south side of the town was formed in 1879, at a cost of £2,500. It is under the control of a burial board of 9 members.

The Boys' Free school founded in 1760 and rebuilt in 1860 has an endowment, derived partly from stock in the £3 per Cent. Consols left by Mr. Robert Hatley in the year 1782, and partly from a bequest of the late Alderman Newton, of Leicester; the total income is about £59; 24 boys, from 7 to 14 years of age, are clothed and educated with this sum; by the will of the founder the Free scholars must be children of respectable parents who are members of the Church of England and have never received parochial relief: the account book of the charities, dating from about 1760, contains the receipts and expenditure for 110 years, and the autographs of most of the trustees who have governed the school during that period.

The Corn Exchange, a fine structure in a semi-Elizabethan style, opened in August, 1863, was erected by a company, at a cost of £4,000, from designs by Messrs. Bellamy and Hardy, architects, of Lincoln. The business of the County Court is transacted here.

The Police Station, situated in New street, contains a magistrates' room, in which the petty sessions are held every Thursday at one o'clock, and here also are held the meetings of the local board.

The Public Rooms, situated on the east side of the river Ouse, and on that portion of the river which directly divides the county of Huntingdon from that of Beds, form an oblong building of spacious character, well adapted for public meetings and seating about 500 persons: the parish vestry meetings are held here.

The Library and Literary Institute, situated in High street and established in 1863, is well supplied with the

London and Provincial newspapers and the leading periodicals; the library contains upwards of 2,000 volumes, and there is a separate room for chess, draughts and billiards: the institute is managed by a committee appointed annually: concerts and other entertainments are given during the winter: there are now (1885) 110 members.

The Working Men's Club, situate in High street and established in 1882, contains reading, smoking and recreation rooms; the daily and trade newspapers are taken in, and there is a library of upwards of 200 volumes; attached is also a quiet ground, and entertainments are held here during the winter months: there are now (1885) 120 members.

The St. Neots Gas and Coke Company's Works were established in 1846.

The market day is Thursday. There are weekly sales of fat and store cattle, and fairs are held on Ascension day, on that day three weeks, on the first Thursday after the 11th of October and on the Thursday previous to the 17th of December.

On the river Ouse, about a mile from the town, are the paper mills of Messrs. Towgood Brothers, in which a large number of females are employed. There are also large breweries, steam flour mills and some maltings. The engineering works of Mr. G. Bower employ a large number of hands. There are several good inns.

There are the following charities:—In 1707, John Dryden bequeathed £100, which, with an additional £10, was laid out in the purchase of a message and land for the poor, which now produces £34 a year; Hugh Wye, in 1648, left £40 to purchase land, the rent thereof to buy bread, now producing £12 yearly; this is given away weekly during the winter months to poor widows not receiving parochial relief; in 1772, Joseph Eayre made a bequest of £100, which now produces £4 a year; this is laid out in bread for the poor on St. Thomas' day, together with the proceeds of Dryden's charity; in 1620, Joan Cromwell gave a rent-charge of 40s. for the benefit of poor widows; in 1831, Elizabeth Smith gave £100; in 1850, Mary Musgrave £100: the late William Medland, who died in 1873, left £1,000, the interest of which is given away yearly on his birthday (March 15th) in bread and coals; William Anderson, formerly a pupil in the boys' school, who died in 1874, left £100, the interest to be distributed in coals to six poor widows.

A mile from the town is Priory Park, the seat of Mrs. Rowley, widow of G. W. Rowley esq.; the mansion is situated on a gentle eminence in a park of 100 acres well studded with trees; the approach to the house is through a fine avenue of elms.

The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Earl of Sandwich, Mrs. Rowley and Thomas Day esq. There is a common of 145 acres, over which some of the inhabitants have rights of common.

The chief crops are wheat, beans, roots and barley. The land is chiefly arable. The soil is clay, gravel and loam. The area is 4,750 acres; rateable value, £18,420; the population in 1881 was 3,136.

MONKS HARDWICK is a manor and hamlet on the north-east side of the parish, about 2½ miles distant from the town; it consists of 672 acres, belonging to Mrs. Rowley; the house stands within a large rectangular area, encompassed by a broad and deep moat; in 1558 it was the property and probably the abode of Henry Cromwell esq. second cousin of Oliver Cromwell, the Lord Protector.

WINTINGHAM is also a hamlet on the south-east side of the parish, and now consists of two farms, Upper and Lower. There was formerly a chapel here, founded by William Brito of Winttingham in the year 1288. About a mile from the town of St. Neots, to the west, is the Great North road, and at the same distance to the east is the Great Northern railway station.

SAWTRY is a town comprising three parishes, viz. All Saints, St. Andrew's and St. Judith's, in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Leightonstone, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situate on the Great North Road, 8 miles north-north-west from Huntingdon and 4 south-west from the Holme station on the Great Northern railway. Until the year 1880 there were two churches here, All Saints' and St. Andrew's; but both were demolished in that year and the materials used in the erection of the new church of All Saints, which is in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Mr. Bromfield, architect, and consists of chancel and nave and a western turret containing 1 bell, formerly belonging to Sawtry Abbey: there is a brass in the church, with three effigies, supposed to represent Sir William Moyné, his wife and a monk, and dated April, 1401; in the chancel is a stained window to the memory of G. Newton esq. of this place. The inhabitants of St. Judith's attend this church. The register of All Saints dates from the year 1591; that of St. Andrew's from the year 1662. The living is a rectory annexed to St. Andrew's, net yearly value £460, including 450 acres of glebe, with residence, in the alternate gift of the Duke of Devonshire and Viscount Valentia, and held since 1876 by the Rev. David Frederick Bradley M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. A clothing charity is supported by voluntary subscription. Many Roman coins have been dug up near here: it was the site of an abbey of the Cistercian order, founded by the Earl of Northampton in 1147, and colonised from the monastery of Warden, Beds; at its dissolution the revenues were estimated at £141; there are now no remains. Lord Chesham is lord of the manor, which comprehends the three parishes. The principal landowners are Lord Chesham and John Moyer Heathcote D.L., J.P. of Conington Castle. The soil is principally clay; subsoil, strong clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, beans and peas. The area is 6,168 acres; rateable value, £8,554; the population in 1881 was—St. Andrew, 368; All Saints, 679; St. Judith, 215.

SOMERSHAM is a parish and large village in the hundred of Huntingdon, union of St. Ives, county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, 5 miles north-east-by-north from St. Ives, on the road to March and Wisbech, and 78 from London. The village consists principally of one street, about a mile in length, running from east to west, crossed by a shorter street near the centre; the houses are mostly good. Somersham is well paved, for which purpose Mr. William Harrey left an estate nearly 300 years ago, called the Peefsee Estate, providing for the repairs of the churchway and other public and charitable uses. A company was formed to supply the inhabitants with gas in 1869. The Great Eastern railway from Cambridge to St. Ives and Wisbech has a station here. The church of St. John the Baptist is an ancient structure, in the Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, north and south porches and an embattled western tower containing 6 bells and a very good set of chimies; at the east end is a fine triplet lancet window; there are two stained windows in the chancel, one erected by William Mason esq. of this place, in memory of his sister Miss Bertha Elinor Davies Mason; and another by the Rev. Frank Duerdin Perrott R.A. in memory of his mother (1833): in the pavement within the communion rails are three large slabs, once enclosing brass effigies of priests, only one of which now remains: the figure is habited in eucharistic vestments, with chalice and wafer, but the inscription is lost: another slab, now placed near the font, once bore the brass effigy of a knight with five shields of arms, and probably commemorated Sir Richard Thwaytes, who died in September, 1467; the columns and stone work of the church were restored in 1883; the font was given by Dr. Ollivant, late Bishop of Llandaff, and formerly rector here. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from 1558; burials, 1563. The living was formerly a rectory annexed to the Regius professorship of Divinity at Cambridge, but by Act of Parliament 45 & 46 Vict. cap. 31, the rectory of Somersham, with Pideley-cum-Fenton and Holme, has been transferred to the University of Cambridge, who are to receive the profits of the rectory of Cambridge, who are hereinafter stated, and a vicarage constituted, with cure of souls, the patronage of which is vested in the Bishop of Ely: one half of the total net income of the rectory after paying all outgoings is appointed to be paid by the University to the Regius Professor of Divinity, and the other half to the vicar of Somersham, who has, out of the income assigned to him, to pay two curates, in the proportion of three-tenths to the curate assigned to Pideley and two-tenths to the curate assigned to Colne. The vicarage, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, has been held since Feb. 1883, by the Rev. Arnold Kirke Smith M.A. of University College, Oxford, being the first vicar appointed under the act above mentioned. Here is a Baptist chapel and a

Wesleyan chapel, built in 1847, and two Sunday schools. Charities: Pernes gift, 13s. 4d. yearly, paid by St. Peter's College, Cambridge, also the interest of £20 to be given to the poor annually, as well as £2 yearly, the bequest of W. P. Wilson, on St. Thomas' day. Fire engine is kept at the engine house, Church walk; keys kept at E. Pentelow and E. Williamson. A feast is held here annually on St. John the Baptist's day, the 24th June and a fair the Friday before the 22nd of November: the privilege of holding a market in the village every Thursday was granted to the Bishops of Ely by Richard I. but the proximity of the superior market of St. Ives has rendered this market obsolete. Somersham was once celebrated for its chalybeate spa: the well may still be recognized in a field near the St. Ives road: it was the residence of the Moseley family for three quarters of a century, and the late Jeremiah Moseley esq. who died in 1875, lived here for many years. A short distance southward from the church formerly stood the palace of the Bishops of Ely, the ruins of which have been pulled down; the site is now occupied by a residence called "Somersham Park farm," and held by Frederic Street esq. The fine meadows which extend from the village to Cuckoo bridge at the foot of Somersham heath are still called "The Parks." John Garrard Elgood esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are George Wilson esq. the Rev. Brooke Foss Westcott D.D. William Mason esq. the Rev. George Johnston M.A., J.P. William Nix esq. and William Robert Gamul Farmer esq. of Nonsuch park, Cheam, Surrey. The soil is gravel and clay; subsoil, green sandstone. The area is 4,119 acres; rateable value, £10,126; and the population in 1881 was 1,109.

SOUTHOE is a small village and parish adjacent to the Great North Road from London to York, 3 miles north from St. Neots and 6 south-west from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The parish is bounded on the east by the Ouse, over which is a ferry to Great Paxton. The church of St. Leonard is a handsome and very ancient building of brick, stone and rubble, in the Early Norman, Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled tower of brick, with pinnacles, at the end of the north aisle, containing 4 bells and a clock; within the south porch is a beautiful Norman doorway in excellent preservation: the church was restored in 1859, at a cost of £1,400, raised by subscriptions and a church rate. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory with the vicarage of Hail Weston annexed, joint gross yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1848 by the Rev. Joseph Robertson Moorson M.A. of University College, Oxford. The principal land proprietors and owners of the manor are Col. Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. Arthur John Thornhill esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. of Diddington, and the rector. The soil is gravelly; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 1,860 acres; rateable value, £2,139; the population in 1881 was 272.

BOUGHTON, near the Ouse, is partly in this parish and partly in Diddington.

SPALDWICK is a parish and village 7 miles west from Huntingdon and $\frac{1}{2}$ north-west from Graffham station on the Midland railway, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Kimbolton, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situate on the road from Huntingdon to Thrapston.
The church of St. James is a noble structure of stone in the Transition Norman, Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, south aisle, with arcade of four bays, porch and a western tower with lofty broach spire containing a peal of 5 bells and a clock: the north doorway is Norman, the arcade of the aisles and some other portions Transition Norman; the chancel and three lower stages of the tower are Early Decorated work; the spire, which is later in the same style, is relieved by three tiers of dormers; part of the south aisle and the Lady chapel are perpendicular; an ancient oak screen divides the Lady chapel from the aisle: there are piscina in the chapel and in the chancel: the interior was restored in 1866. The register dates from the year 1660. The living is a vicarage, and with Barham was in the year 1869 formed into a consolidated benefice named Spaldwick-cum-Barham, joint gross yearly value £250 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Ely, and held since 1876 by the Rev. George Thomas Sharland M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1844 and holding 400 persons.
A charity of £10 yearly, derived from the "Poor's land,"
is distributed in bread by the churchwardens at Christmas:
in 1735 Ann, relict of Matthew Goodwin, a former rector of Buckworth and prebendary of Stow Longa, left an annuity of £3 yearly derived from land in Barham to be distributed as follows:—10s. to the vicar to preach a sermon on St.

children; average attendance, 55; & is supported by subscriptions; Mrs. Emma Baxter, mistress

Matthew's day, 1s. to the clerk, £1 10s. to be distributed in bibles and prayer-books to ten poor children, to be selected by ballot, Spaldwick choosing two-fifths of the candidates, and Stow, Easton and Barham one-fifth each; 10s. in bread to ten poor persons, chosen in like proportion from the same parishes, the remainder to be expended on a dinner for six neighbouring clergy, but this sum and the vicar and clerk's fees are now given to the school; the trustees of the charity are the rectors of Buckworth and Great Catworth for the time being. The Duke of Manchester K.P., D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duke of Manchester and Colonel Beadon. A cattle fair is held on the wednesday before Whit Sunday. The soil is partly a stiff clay and partly a gravelly loam; subsoil, gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,442 acres; rate-able value, £2,558; the population in 1881 was 355.

UPTHORPE, a quarter of a mile south, formerly a large hamlet, now consists of one farm only.

STANGROUND is an extensive village and parish partly in Cambridgeshire, 18 miles north-east from Huntingdon, and one mile and a quarter from the Peterborough station of the Great Eastern, London and North-Western and Midland Railway Companies, having from its proximity to the same and the navigable river Nene a rapid and direct means of conveyance to all parts of the kingdom; it is in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. John the Baptist is a fine structure of Barnack stone, consisting of chancel with chantry on the north side, clerestoried nave of four bays, aisles, south porch and a western tower with octagonal broach spire, relieved by two tiers of dormers and containing 4 bells: with the exception of a few remains of an Early English character, the edifice is wholly in the Decorated style; the chancel has three graduated sedilia under a canopy, a large double piscina, a low side window with a canopied seat near it in the chancel wall and a blocked square aperture looking to the nave: on the north side is a long stone seat and an ambury and in the chantry a hagiocope: the westernmost pier has for its base a massive inverted Norman capital, removed from the church at Fletton: on the floor is a ledger stone with a floriated cross and a partially legible inscription round the margin, with the date MCCCCLXVI.
The stone has another inscription 200 years later date, to a member of the Covey family: in the south wall of the chancel is a brass inscribed to Robert Smith, 1558; and Alice, wife of Thomas, his son, 1595; on the wall opposite is a brass to Elias Petit, vicar of this place, and fourth son of Valentine Petit, of Dent-de-Iyon, in the Isle of Thanet, 1634; within the communion rails is a ledger inscribed to

William Makerness s.r.n. vicar here only thirteen days
1680: there are other memorials to the Covey, Sly, Thompson, Benyon and Forster families: the stained east window was inserted in 1863, in memory of Susannah Apthorp, in the north aisle is another stained window to the widow of Robert Towerson Cory d.n.m. master of Emmanuel College, Cambridge: the edifice was partially restored in 1872 and the south porch was rebuilt in 1876 in memory of John Broughton, by Sarah, his widow. The register dates from the year 1538, but is imperfect. The living is a vicarage with residence, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and now vacant. The chapel of Farcet was formerly annexed to this living, but by order in Council, 27th February, 1882, the parishes are now separated and the tithe rent-charge apportioned to Stanground is £435 2s. There is a small chapel for General Baptists, built by the late Barnard Landard Ward esq. in the year 1823. The Primitive Methodists have a place of worship here. The charities amount to about £24 yearly.
Edward Bellamy, left in 1557 a rent-charge of £3 yearly to apprentice one boy alternately in this parish and Fletton; Thomas and John Covey, in 1680, gave money producing 30s. yearly; William Bellamy, in 1704 and Robert Bellamy, in 1779 gave rent-charges producing £2 each yearly; Mary Walsham's bequest of 1744 realizes £7 10s. and there are a few smaller sums: these charities are distributed annually among the poor of the parish. At the south-eastern border of the parish are the remains of a fortification, supposed to have been erected about the time of Oliver Cromwell, now called Horsey Grange. The Manor House, the property of Major Charles Isham Strong J.P. of Thorpe hall, Peterborough, is at present occupied by Edward Augustus

Skrimshire esq. J.P. Edward Westwood esq. is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Charles Isham Strong esq. and the vicar. In the vicarage garden is an ancient cross, discovered on the Parcet road, where, till 1865, it formed a bridge over a ditch. The soil is a rich loam; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is 969 acres in Huntingdonshire and 1,321 acres in Cambridgeshire; rateable value, £3,261; the population in 1831 was—in the former 1,298 and in the latter 10.

GREAT STAUGHTON is a village and parish: the latter contains the following hamlets—STAUGHTON MOOR, WEST PERRY, DILLINGTON and AGERN GREEN: it is 5 miles north-north-west from St. Neots on the Great Northern railway, 5½ south-east from the Kimbolton station of the Midland railway and 9 south-west from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, situated on the border of Bedfordshire. The parish is watered by the river Kym, a tributary of the Ouse, which passing through the village on one side of the churchyard gives a very pleasing and picturesque appearance to the place. By the roadside, in the eastern portion of the village known as "the highway," is a sun-dial on a stone column, erected in 1637. The church of St. Andrew, with the exception of the tower, is an embattled structure of cobble stones with freestone dressings, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, and consists of a chancel, with chapel and vestry on the north side, clerestoried nave of five bays, aisles, south porch and a massive western tower with crocketed pinnacles, containing 5 bells and a clock: the south elevation, south porch and westernmost piers of the south aisle are decorated with florid window tracery; the rest of the edifice is principally Perpendicular; the steps and doors of the roof loft remain: over the eastern gable of the nave is a bell-cote still containing a fine sanctus bell: on the parapet of the vestry is the date 1526: the stained window of the chapel was erected in 1870 to the late James Duberly esq. of Gaynes Hall, by his widow: in the south aisle is a handsome monument with recumbent effigy to Sir George Wauton kt. in mail armour with ruff and with helmet at feet, he died in 1606, and was formerly lord of the manor; it appears by a Latin inscription to have been erected in remembrance of his deceased friend by Sir Oliver Cromwell, an uncle of the Protector; in the chancel chapel, at the east end of the north aisle, is a mural monument to Major-General Handasyd, who was Governor of Jamaica, and died in 1720; another to his eldest son the Hon. General Roger Handasyd, General-in-Chief of all His Majesty's foot forces, Governor of Port Phillip in Minorca and Governor of Berwick in the rebellion of 1745, who died in 1763; there is also an altar-tomb of black marble to one of the Beverley family, formerly lords of the manor, dated 1670, and several mural tablets of the last century to the Duberly family: in the chancel is an elaborate mural monument to Sir James Dyer kt. Lord Chief Justice of the Common Pleas, 1582, and Margaret his wife, 1500; Sir Richard Dyer kt. Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to King James I. 1605, and Marie (Fitzwilliams) his wife, 1601, with full-sized kneeling effigies and shields of arms; there is also an elaborately sculptured mural monument of marble to Sir Baldwin Conyers bart. 1731, and his family. The register dates, with some inter-rumptions, from the year 1548. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from 288s. 2s. 2d. of glebe, about £480 with residence, in the gift of St. John's College, Oxford, and held since 1850 by the Rev. Henry Bristow Wilson B.D. formerly fellow of that college, who is non-resident. The Rev. Henry Matthews M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford, is curate in charge. The rectorial estate belongs to W. J. Raffety esq. There are two chapels, one belonging to the Baptists and one to the Primitive Methodists. An additional burying-ground opposite the church was consecrated in 1863, the land being given by the Crown, and the expenses defrayed by a voluntary rate amongst the inhabitants. There is a yearly income of about £100, arising from numerous small bequests, which is applied, under an order of the Charity Commissioners, chiefly in the distribution of bread to the poor; the trustees are the vicar, the churchwardens and the guardians for the time being. Place House, an interesting building, dating from the fourteenth century, is situated near the church on the north-west; it was partially destroyed by fire in the reign of Charles I.; traces of the moat are still to be seen: this was the manor house of the Wautons, Leders and Baldwyns in the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, and afterwards of the Conyers and Walters families: in 1882 it became the property of the Duberly family; what remains of it is now a private residence and a farm house. The manor of Gaynes dates from John de Engaine kt. temp. Edward III. and was the property of Sir Thomas Cromwell, uncle of the 'Protector' in 1607: it was purchased by the late Sir James Duberly in 1797. Gaynes Hall, a handsome mansion situated in a well-wooded park, is the seat of Capt. William Duberly D.L. J.P. who is lord of the manors of Gaynes, Dillington, Perry and Beachampstead. Staughton House, for many years the seat of the Onslow family, is a pleasant mansion situated near to the church on the south side, and surrounded by park-like grounds of upwards of 500 acres; it is now the property of Wm. J. Raffety esq. who is lord of the manor of Staughton rectory. The principal landowners are the Crown, Captain William Duberly D.L. J.P. W. J. Raffety esq. and the trustees of the late Rev. H. Wade-Gery. The land is arable (wheat and bean land) and pasture. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, southern portion gravel, northern clay. The area of the parish is 6,140 acres; rateable value, £7,488; and the population in 1881 was 1,090.

Great Staughton Moor is a hamlet, mostly the property of the trustees of the late Rev. H. Wade-Gery, of Great Staughton, about 2 miles south from the village and 5 north-west from St. Neots.

Perry is a hamlet, mostly belonging to Gt. Staughton parish, about 2½ miles north-north-east from the village. The eastern portion is in the parish of Grafham.

Dillington, mentioned in the records of the Abbey of Ramsey as belonging to Leofwine, a Saxon, ob. 1056, is a hamlet of Great Staughton, about 1 mile north-east from the village. Here was formerly a church on a site known as "Hale Orchard;" no traces of it remain except such fragments as are to be found built into neighbouring houses.

Agden Green is a hamlet of Great Staughton about a mile north of the village.

STILTON.—The village and parish of Stilton, well known as giving name to the finest English cheese, is in Norman Cross hundred, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon and diocese of Ely, 75 miles from London, on the Great North Road and the supposed British Ermine Street, afterwards a Roman road, 121 north-west from Huntingdon, about 6 south-west from Peterborough, 8 south-east from

Oundle and 4 north-west from Holme station, on the Great Northern railway. The church of St. Mary is an ancient building of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch, north door and a western embattled tower containing two bells: the nave and piers are Early English and the tower Perpendicular: the east window is a memorial to William Worthington, of this parish, who died in 1866, and was erected by his widow; at the entrance to the chancel are two brasses to Richard Curthoys, 1573; Anne, his wife, 1606; and to Thomas and John Curthoys, sons of above, dated respectively, 1590, and 1618; each brass has effigies in the attitude of devotion. The register dates from the year 1660. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £313, including 24½ acres of glebe, and rent of cottages, besides 20 acres in hand, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1859 by the Rev. Thomas Hutton M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. A Cemetery of 1 acre with a mortuary chapel, was formed in 1883, at a cost of £100; it is under the control of a burial board of 7 members. There are two chapels for Wesleyans, and Gospel and Temperance Halls. Apreece's charity of £4 12s. 6d. yearly, left in 1821 for distribution to seven poor widows, 60 years of age or more. The late William Worthington, of this parish, left £300 for the support of the National school and also £500, the interest to be distributed in bread and coal on St. Thomas' day. Mrs. Worthington, widow of the late William Worthington, erected, in 1874, six almshouses, for three widows and three widowers, each of whom receives 4s.

Huntingdon and 63 from London, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Martin is chiefly in the Perpendicular style, with some portions of earlier date, and was probably erected soon after the year 1377, if not partly at the transition period immediately antecedent to that date, temp. Richard II. or Henry IV.; it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, extending the full length of the church, south porch, and a low embattled western tower with pinnacles, containing a clock and 4 bells; the south aisle and porch were restored some years ago, and there is a modern stained east window; it is now (1885) proposed to effect further repairs, at a cost of £1,000; the font is of the Decorated style and richly ornamented. The register dates from the year 1666. The living is a rectory, yearly value from 270 acres of glebe, £110 with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Manchester, and held since 1860 by the Rev. presented by members of the Astell and Kaye families. The register, included in that of Everton, dates from the year 1650; parish account books from 1628. The living, which includes Everton (Beds), is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £70, net yearly value £200, inclusive of 130 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Clare College, Cambridge, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Thomas Henry Shaw M.A. late fellow of that college. This was the birthplace of Silvester de Everton, Bishop of Carlisle (1246-53) and John Lord Tiptoft, created Earl of Worcester by Henry VI. Here are brick and tile works. Captain Walter Henry Octavius Duncombe J.P. of Waresley Park, who is lord of the manor, the Eyre trustees and the Master and Fellows of Clare College, are the principal landowners. The soil is a stiff clay in the valley and a light sand on the hill. The crops are wheat, barley, beans and potatoes. The area is 1,445 acres; rateable value, £1,815; the population in 1881 was 206.

interesting edifice of stone, in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a small western tower, with a short broach spire and containing 2 bells: the stained east window was erected in 1874 by subscription, in memory of the Rev. William Whall M.A. a former rector; the whole structure, with the exception of the arcades of the nave and the chancel, was taken down in 1880, and rebuilt as nearly as possible in accordance with the previous design, under the direction of Messrs. Carpenter and Ingelow, architects, of London, at a total cost of £1,759, defrayed chiefly by public subscription; the church was reopened June 24th, 1881. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £180, net yearly value £195, including 60 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and held since 1884 by the TOSELAND is a village and parish adjoining Cambridgeshire, 4 miles north-east from St. Neots, and 8 south from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Toseland, union and county court district of St. Neots, rural deanery of St. Neots, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. This parish was once a place of some importance; it is believed to have been a town. The ruins of several early churches have been discovered. The church of St. Michael, built about 1130, is a small edifice, consisting of chancel and nave and on the western gable, a bell-cot containing 1 bell; it was restored in 1873, at a cost of £933, by A. W. Blomfield esq. M.A. architect, of London; in the south wall is a curious Norman doorway. The register, portions of which, of earlier date, are included in those of Great and Little Paxton, dates locally from the year 1702. The living is a chapelry, consolidated with Great and Little Paxton, joint net yearly value £270, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Lincoln, and held since 1840 by the Rev. Henry Isaac Nicholson B.A.

UPTON is a parish and village 6 miles north-west from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Leightonstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of Leightonstone, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, near the Great North Road. The church of St. Margaret is partly in the Early English style, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch, and a western embattled tower with spire containing 2 bells; the church was built about the year 1200, but the tower and spire were not added till 1500; one of the doorways of Early English date has a singular trefoiled head, and the font is also of very curious character; in 1871 the church was thoroughly restored, under the direction of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A. at a cost of nearly £3,000; the north aisle was then enlarged, the old pews removed and replaced by open oak seats; the east window is stained, and there are also three lancet windows in the chancel. The register, including Coppingford, dates from the year 1813. The living is a rectory with that of Coppingford annexed, joint gross yearly value from 255 acres of glebe £220 with residence, in UPWOOD (anciently called Upwode) is a parish 3 miles south-west from Ramsey station and 8 north-east from Huntingdon, in the hundred of Hurstingstone, union and county court district of Huntingdon, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely. The church of St. Peter is an edifice in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower containing 3 bells, one of which originally belonged to Great Raveley church; several of the Cromwell family were buried here, but there is no memorial of them; the church, which had become very dilapidated, is now (1885) undergoing a thorough restoration. The register, including Great Raveley, dates from the year 1558. The living is a vicarage united with that of Great Raveley, tithe rent-charge £30, joint gross yearly value £100, with residence, in the gift of Richard Hussey esq. and held since 1805 by the Rev. William O'Farrell Hughes M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. The charities include a sum of about £15 a year, left in 1841 by Mrs.

Rev. John Carter Browne B.D. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge and D.D. of Trinity College, Dublin. Wells' charity of £1 yearly is for fuel. The Earl of Sandwich is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the rector and Messrs. James Porteus, Charles Borrett Bletsoe, Henry H. Bletsoe, Lewis George Porteus and Daniel H. Hipwell. The soil is of a clayey nature; subsoil, strong clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 1,000 acres; rateable value, £1,180; and the population in 1881 was 186, of which 66 are in Northamptonshire.

WARBOYS or WARBOIS (formerly spelt WARDEBOIS) is a parish in Huntingdonshire, hundred, union of St. Ives, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of St. Ives, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, 7 miles north-east from Huntingdon and 4 south-east from Ramsey on the London road. The church of St. Mary Magdalene is a handsome and spacious structure in the Early English style, consisting of chancel and nave and a tower with spire, containing 5 bells: the chancel was restored about 1832 and is separated from the nave by a Norman arch: the tower is a beautiful specimen of the nineteenth century Early English: the east window is partially stained: there are monuments by Bacon to John Leman esq. and Mrs. Strod. The registers of baptisms dates from 1557; marriages, 1565, and burials, 1556. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £200, net yearly value £1,000, including 957 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1871 by the Rev. Charles Gray Hill M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The school building in the Fen district has attached to it a consecrated burial ground. Divine service is held in the school-room every Sunday. There is a Baptist chapel in the village. The Rev. Robert Fowler, by will dated August 3, 1824, left £200, the interest thereof to be disposed of yearly amongst such of the poor of the parish as should regularly attend church; the interest is distributed in meat on St. Thomas' day. The church estate produces about £40 yearly, which is received by the churchwardens and applied for incidental expenses in lieu of a church rate. The chief landowners are the trustees of the late Sir H. Cartairs Pelly (lords of the manor), the rector, Edward Fellowes esq. WOODSTONE is a village and parish (a large portion of the parish was incorporated in the borough of Peterborough in 1874) in the hundred of Norman Cross, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Yaxley, archdeaconry of Huntingdon, and diocese of Ely, on the Oundle and Peterborough road, 12 miles east from the former, 1 mile south-west from the latter, situate on the borders of Northamptonshire and bounded on the north by the river Nene and near the Peterborough branch of the London and North-Western railway. The church of St. Augustine, an ancient cruciform building of stone, was in 1844 almost entirely rebuilt after the original design, and consists of chancel, nave, transepts, aisles, north porch and a western tower with pannelled parapet, containing 3 bells: in 1884 the edifice was again thoroughly restored and considerably enlarged from designs by A. W. Hornfield esq. M.A. at a cost of £2,000, raised by subscriptions, when the aisles were widened to the almost entire absorption of the transepts, and an organ chamber, north chapel and vestry added; the south porch was also demolished; the tower, three sides of which are within the nave, is Norman with a Perpendicular parapet; over the western door there remains a considerable portion of well preserved Saxon masonry; the north arcade is Transition Norman; the south arcade rather later; the chancel is Early Decorated; during the restoration a fine trefoil-headed piscina was discovered and restored, and several good crosses were also found and placed on the gables: in the chancel chapel is an inscription to John Dickinson (1730) who bequeathed his house and garden in Westgate to the vicar of St. John the Baptist, Peterborough; and a massive marble mural monument to Mary Walsham, his mother, who left £2,000 for charitable purposes to this and other parishes: there are numerous other memorials dating from the middle of the seventeenth century; many of them to the Wright family; in the south wall is an inscribed stone to the Rev. Robert Smyth, rector in 1730 and a noted antiquary; and a singular one to Ann Booth Thomas Ingram, Palmerston rd

The register dates from the year 1558, and is singularly perfect, being deficient only from 1590 to 1597. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £270, including 3¼ acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Maj.-Gen. William Dalrymple Tompson C.B. and held since 1871 by the Rev. Reginald Tompson M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. A cemetery of one acre was formed in 1833; it contains a mortuary chapel, and is under the control of a Burial Board of 7 members. The charities for the poor of this parish consist of £432, left by Mary Walsham in 1744, the interest of which, amounting to £17 5s. 7d. is distributed on St. Thomas' day; she also gave during her life £100 to the living, and founded a school. Mary and John Walsham in 1728 gave land in Whitlesses field and elsewhere for the endowment of a school, now (1885) producing £30 yearly; in 1731 John Wright left £30 and in 1733 his brother Thomas left £5 the interest for the poor; there is also some "poor's land" producing a small sum. The principal landowners are Maj.-Gen. William Dalrymple Tompson C.B. who is lord of the manor, and the trustees of the late Lady George Gordon. The soil is various; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, oats, peas, beans and barley. The area is 1,027 acres; rateable value, £3,366; the population in 1881 was 915.

Scale of Miles

Northamptonshire contains 1211 Square Miles

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

NORTHAMPTONSHIRE is an inland shire, in the midlands, near the centre of England, and is of a long but irregular shape, bounded on the north by the river Welland, dividing it from Leicestershire, Rutland and Lincolnshire, on the east by Cambridgeshire, on the south-east by Huntingdonshire and Bedfordshire, on the south by Buckinghamshire and Oxfordshire, and on the west by Warwickshire and Oxfordshire. Its length from north-east to south-west is about 70 miles; its width varies from 7 or 8 miles to 25 miles. Its area is 629,912 acres, and its population in 1841 was 199,308; in 1851, 213,844; in 1861, 227,704; in 1871, 243,891; and in 1881, 272,555, viz.: males, 135,662; females, 136,893. The soil and climate are good. None of the hills are very high, though near Daventry they reach 800 feet. A range of tolerable height begins at Wakerley, towards the north, and runs south-west towards Braybrook; another range proceeds by Great Oxendon to Cold Ashby, and thence by Welford westward to West Haddon and Barby, and thence to Daventry; there are other smaller ranges branching from this. Between West Haddon and Barby the London and North Western railway and Union canal pass through tunnels of considerable length.

The chief rivers are those which flow into the North Sea, being the Nene and the Welland. The Nene has two heads, the streams from which join at Northampton, and thence form a river navigable to the sea, and which, passing to Peterborough, runs along the southern border of the shire near Daventry. The Welland, which rises at Sibbertoft, forms the northern boundary of the county, flowing easterly to Stamford, Crowland and the sea. The Bedfordshire Ouse rises in this county and flows through Bucks, Beds and Cambs, and passes into the Wash through the Eaubrink cut at Lynn, Norfolk. The Tove rises at Sulgrave and flows through Towcester to the Ouse. The Warwickshire Avon also rises in Northamptonshire, but is not navigable within its bounds. The Warwickshire Leam also rises in this county at Helidon. The Cherwell rises at Charwelton near Daventry, and flows south through Banbury on the borders of the county. The Grand Junction canal passes through the shire, in the west, for about 25 miles, and joins the Oxford canal, having a branch to Stony Stratford and a branch also to Northampton, and so by the Nene to the sea at Wisbech. The Grand Union canal begins in the Grand Junction canal, near Daventry, and runs north to the Leicester canal, having a branch to Market Harborough.

The railways traversing this county are the London and North Western, Great Northern and Midland. The main line of the London and North Western passes through the county parallel with the Grand Junction canal, through Blisworth, Weedon and Welton, to Rugby; a great branch proceeds from Blisworth through Northampton, Wellingborough, Higham Ferrers, Thrapston and Oundle to Peterborough; from Northampton is a line to Crick and Rugby, also a branch to Market Harborough, and from Wansford is a short line to Stamford, and another to Seaton and Uppingham (Rutland); the Rugby and Stamford branch belonging to this Company skirts the northern boundary of the county; the Buckingham, Brackley and Banbury junction passes through the southern extremity of the county; on the main line are the Blisworth and Kilsby tunnels; Wolverton and Blisworth are first-class stations. The Great Northern main line passes through Peterborough, whence it has a branch to Stamford and another to Spalding and Boston, and thence to Great Grimsby. The Midland Company's main line from St. Pancras through Bedford enters the county at Wellingborough, and passes thence to Kettering, Market Harborough, Leicester and the north; from Kettering is a branch of this line to Thrapston, Huntingdon and Cambridge, and another to Manton (Rutland), there joining the line from Leicester to Stamford in Lincolnshire, and thence through Helpstone and Walton to Peterborough; from this city is a branch belonging to this Company to Wisbech and Lynn. The Great Western, from Oxford to Banbury, passes through the extreme south-west of the county. The Great Eastern railway branch line from Ely terminates at Peterborough, which, will be seen, is a great railway centre. The Northampton and Banbury Junction railway passes from Blisworth through Towcester and the East and West Junction railway comes from Stratford-on-Avon to Blisworth, thus connecting the Great Western and North Western systems.

Northamptonshire belongs to the lower oolite formation, and is well supplied with limestone and lime, and freestone for building; it has also some workable slate. Iron ore occurs throughout a large portion of the county; it appears to have been largely worked in ancient times, certainly in many parts during the Roman period, and we read that William the Norman erected a castle at Rockingham for the protection of the extensive iron works; from the destruction of forests, or some other cause, the manufacture fell into disuse, but has recently been resumed in many places on a very extensive scale. Glass is made at Little Harrowden from iron slag for bottles and other like purposes. Sand of a peculiarly fine quality, which is used for pottery, is found at Cogenhoe. The produce is chiefly grass and corn. There are very large grazing establishments for fattening cattle, and many dairies. There are the remains of Salcey, Whittlebury and Rockingham forests, which produce oak, ash, beech and elm, and various sorts of underwood. Between Peterborough and Crowland is some low land belonging to the Bedford Level, and which is very rich.

The principal manufacture of the county is that of boots and shoes, which is carried on at Northampton, Kettering, Daventry, Towcester, Higham Ferrers, Wellingborough, Rushden, Raunds and Irthlingborough. The manufacturers reside in these towns, but much of the work is done in the surrounding villages. The making of closed boots and shoe uppers for the London market has sprung up of late years. Lace was formerly made largely, and is still so to some extent, but is giving way under the influence of the cheap machine-made lace. At a village called King's Cliffe, near Wansford, wooden spoons and butter prints are manufactured. There are some paper mills. There is a good deal of malting, many corn mills and breweries; there are also a few iron foundries for agricultural implements.

Northamptonshire is in the Midland circuit, and the diocese of Peterborough, comprising the archdeaconries of Northampton and Oakham. Northampton archdeaconry is sub-divided into the rural deaneries of Brackley, first, second and third portions, Daventry, Haddon, first and second portions, Northampton, Preston, first and second portions, Rothwell, first, second and third portions and Weedon; Oakham archdeaconry into the rural deaneries of Higham first and second portions, Oundle, first and second portions, Peterborough, first and second portions, and Weldon, first and second portions. There are two courts of quarter sessions, one for the county and the other for the liberty or soke of Peterborough, which has a commission of the peace, and a treasurer, and makes its own levy in the nature of a county rate. There are 10 petty sessional divisions. The shire town is Northampton, a municipal borough, where the assizes are held, which has some good buildings and contains a population of 51,881. Peterborough is an ancient city, with a fine cathedral, and a population of 21,228. Daventry is a municipal borough and manufacturing town of 3,859 inhabitants; Wellingborough with 13,794 and Kettering, 11,095, are market towns; Towcester, 2,834; Brackley, 2,504; Oundle, 2,953; Higham Ferrers (a corporate town), 1,468; Thrapston, 1,366; and Rockingham, 277, are other market towns. Weedon is a great military depot.

but by the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, (48 & 49 Vict., c. 23), Northampton will continue to return two members, the city of Peterborough will return one member only, & the county will return four members, but in four divisions. No. 1, the northern division, will comprise the sessional divisions of Oundle & Thrapstone, so much of Kettering district as is not comprised in divisions Nos. 2 & 3, the liberty of the sake of Peterborough, & so much of the municipal borough of Stamford as is included in the county of Northampton. No. 2, the eastern division, will comprise the sessional division of Wellingborough & the parishes of Broughton, Cranley, Kettering & Pytchley in Kettering sessional division. No. 3, the mid division, will comprise the sessional divisions of Little Bowden & Northampton & the parishes of Draughton, Faxton, Glendon, Harrington, Loddington, Mawsley, Orton, Rothwell & Thorpe Malzor, in the sessional division of Kettering, & the parishes of Ashby St. Ledgers, Barby, Claydon, Crick, Elkington, Kilsby, Lilbourne, Long Buckby, Stanford, Watford, West Hatton, Winwick & Yelvertoft, in the sessional division of Daventry & the municipal borough of Northampton. No. 4, the southern division, will comprise the sessional divisions of Brackley, Daventry (except so much as is comprised in division No. 3) & Towcester.

The places in each sessional division are given under the places giving name to the division in this book.

THE GEOLOGY OF NORTHAMPTONSHIRE.

GEOLOGICALLY speaking Northamptonshire cannot be called a neglected county. Maps of the southern and central divisions coloured so as to show where each rock occupies the surface, were issued by the Geological Survey between 1859 and 1864, and these, together with the accompanying descriptive memoirs by Messrs. Green, Aveine, and Hull, should be obtained by all who wish to have a thorough knowledge of the district. Of the northern portion Professor Judd's admirable Map and Memoir, published in 1872, have given us an exhaustive account, while Mr. Sharp has also worked indefatigably and has formed a grand collection of local fossils.

The rocks that compose this county are in age and character midway between those older beds which lie to the west, forming the coal fields of Warwickshire &c. and the newer chalk deposits which occur to the east. The strata run in long bands of varying width from north-east to south-west, coinciding almost exactly with the longest axis of the county, which is much elongated in this direction. The dip or slant of the rock-masses is towards the south-east, so that they overlie one another in this direction. Thus if we were to make a very deep boring, say at Stony Stratford or Peterborough, we should find at a considerable depth, the same blue clays (lias) which occupy the surface on the west, near Market Harborough and Rugby.

The coincidence of the form of the county with the strike or direction of the strata, is thus favourable to the display of any particular bed or beds, as we can trace them over great distances and compare them at many points, but it is not favourable to the occurrence of any considerable series of beds. In fact Northamptonshire may be designated an Oolitic county, i.e. one in which the oolitic strata are most interestingly shown, but to the almost entire exclusion of anything else. Owing to the tilting of the rock-beds, the oldest or lowest come to the surface in the extreme west of the county, and we shall commence with them, as they form the foundation or base upon which the others are deposited. It should be remembered that the term "rock" is applied geologically to a mass of any substance which enters into the composition of the earth's crust, whether it be soft or shifting, as sand or clay, or of the hardness of granite and slate.

THE LIAS.—This term is applied to a thick series of clays, shales, and limestones, which stretch across England from Dorset to the Yorkshire coast. The total thickness is about 800 feet, but this is divided into three parts by variations in the character of the rocks and by the different fossils we find, according as we examine the lower, middle, or upper part of the series.

Lower Lias Clay.—These are bluish clay, in thickness not less than 500 or 600 feet, which form the western side of the county, stretching in from Warwickshire and Leicestershire, where their lowest beds occur. From Banbury northwards by the Cropredy, Claydon, Priors Hardwick, Braunston, Kilsby, Claycote and on to Market Harborough we find these blue slaty clays forming a flat and uninteresting country, sparsely habited and chiefly in pasture. In all the upper part of the valley of the Nen too, from Rislingbury to Badby, the bed of the river is formed by an inlier of the Lower Lias, the stream having cut its way down through the overlying formations.

The Marlstone (or Middle Lias).—The hard "Rock-bed" as it is termed, is very thin in the north, near Harborough, not more than a foot or two thick, but it thickens southwards to about 20 feet where it crosses the Cherwell; its junction with the Lower Lias is easily traced, as being harder it has better withstood denudation, and so forms a low escarpment facing to the west. The rock-bed is a ferruginous limestone, reddish-brown where exposed to the weather, but green or blue when dug at any depth. Fossils are very numerous but of a few species only, Rhynchonella tetrahedra and Terebratula punctata occurring in beds or masses. From a well 168 feet deep the marlstone furnishes to the town of Northampton a supply of pure water. Long Buckby, Daventry, Brockhall, Bugbrook, Middleton Cheney and Thénor may be indicated as standing on the marlstone: it is frequently quarried for building purposes, when its rich brown hue forms a pleasing contrast with the white oolitic limestone generally used in conjunction with it.

Upper Lias Clays.—These are between 150 and 200 feet thick: owing to their softness they have been much denuded, so that their western outcrop is very irregular, and they form numerous outliers scattered over the marlstone plateau. Many of the streams which drain to the east have cut down to these tenacious clays, which thus form the lower parts of the valleys of the Tove and its numerous tributaries, the valley of the Nene from below Northampton to Thrapston &c.

The clays are worked in many places for brick making. Fossils are not uncommon, chiefly remains of large saurians with Ammonites, Belemnites, Ostrea &c.

THE OOLITES.—This formation is composed of alternating beds of sandstone, limestone, and clay, of considerable thickness: it is named from the resemblance of the texture of many of the limestones to the roe of a fish (Gor-con, an egg).

INFERIOR OOLITE. The Northampton Sand.—In comparatively recent geographies we were told that the mineral wealth of England lay west of a line drawn from the mouth of the Tees through Chesterfield to the mouth of the Exe. But the extensive iron workings opened in the formation we are about to describe have necessitated a modification of this statement. Since 1853 a valuable bed of iron ore has been worked in Northamptonshire, the amount raised in 1860 being 95,664 tons; in 1870 this had increased to 887,020 tons and to 1,412,256 tons in 1873; the next year however saw a decrease, consequent on the depression of trade generally, and only 1,056,478 tons were got in 1874, of an estimated value of £211,295, and in 1879 there were raised 1,211,406 tons of iron ore, valued at £175,558. Much of the ore is sent away to Merthyr in South Wales, to Staffordshire and to the north, because being of a siliceous character it acts as a flux when mixed with the clay ironstone of the coal-measures. There were however 14 blast furnaces in work in 1874, which produced 53,760 tons of pig iron, in 1879 there were 17 furnaces in blast, and 165,317 tons of pig iron were made.

Examining in detail this valuable bed we find it to be a sandstone, more or less compact, impregnated with varying amounts of oxide of iron and yielding in a few spots good building stone, whilst at Duston the limestone parts into such thin regular laminae as to be denominated and used as "slates." We find it comparatively thin in the south-west, where it enters the county near Aynho. Then ranging by Newbottle and Farthinghoe it is cut back to Brackley by the Ouse Valley. North of the Tove the Northampton Sand spreads over a wide tract from Eyclon (an outlier), Adston and Maidford to Stowe Nine Churches, Grayton and Blisworth; it is in this region more developed, and it is here largely worked for iron ore. North of Northampton it attains its full thickness of 80 feet, and at Duston it yields good building stone. Spreading out widely we find outliers on the west round Spratton, Hazlebeech, and Cold Ashby, whilst a peninsula of singularly serrated form stretches past Church Brampton to East and West Haddon and Gulsborough. Eastwards we find it on both sides of the Nen valley at Wellington, Irchester, Irthlingborough and Thrapston, and passing round to the north-west by Kettering, Rushon and Desborough. The most northerly point where the iron ore is worked is at Burleigh Park, near Stamford.

Fossils are not common in the Northampton Sand, but plant-markings and both marine and fresh-water shells occur. These facts would lead us to infer that it is an estuarine formation deposited by a great river probably flowing from the north-west, for as we trace the deposit to the south-east it gradually thins out until it disappears altogether, as near Grafton Regis, Grendon, and east of Oundle.

It is not probable that the iron was present with the sand at its first formation, but rather that this important ingredient was afterwards deposited from water highly charged with carbonate of iron slowly percolating through the rock. In fact when the ironstone is followed to any depth we find it as the blue carbonate still, but in the surface portions, which have been exposed for long ages to the action of the weather, the carbonate has been converted into the hydrated peroxide, which is of a rich brown tint and occurs in cakes and layers. The Northampton Sand forms a rich but rather light soil.

THE LINCOLNSHIRE OOLITE LIMESTONE, WITH THE COLLYWESTON SLATE.—North of Harrington and Maidwell, and west of Kettering and Water Newton, we find an important bed of limestone, which gradually thickens as we follow it northwards until in the county whence it takes its name it is as much as 200 feet thick.

At the base the beds of limestone are thin and fissile, splitting under the hammer (after having been exposed to frost) into thin layers, which are used for roofing purposes. These lower beds are called the Collyweston Slates, from the name of the village where they have long been worked; they are of local occurrence only, but are also met with at Kirby. They are of a yellowish white tint and have been used by Sir Gilbert Scott and other eminent architects for the roofs of churches and Gothic buildings generally. As to fossils the surfaces of the slates often bear ripple-markings, worm-tracks and plant remains, whilst shells of the genera Pinna, Gervillia, Lucina, &c. occur.

The Lincolnshire Limestone proper has very commonly an oolitic structure, and where the little rounded grains constitute the mass of the rock as at Ketton and Weldon, it furnishes a first-class freestone; it is easily worked, is of a rich creamy tint, and hardens on exposure to the air. The famous quarries at Barnack are now quite worked out, but in the Middle Ages they furnished the stone for Burleigh House, Peterborough Cathedral, and indeed most of the churches in Lincolnshire and Cambridge. This bed of limestone together with the underlying Northampton Sand, was formerly assigned to the period of the Great Oolite, an error which was confirmed by the Geological Survey in their examinations of the southern part of the county. In fact the relations of the strata were very difficult to make out from an examination of the Southern Oolites only, but when Mr. (now Professor) Judd came to map the northern portion he had had much previous experience of the same beds in Lincolnshire, and he has clearly proved that both the above-named divisions belong to the Inferior Oolite, the lowest member of the Oolitic system.

The Great Oolite.—This division is composed of four members, two bands of limestone separated by two beds of clay, the lowest of these four sub-divisions is the—

Upper Estuarine Series.—This is a sandy clay, and where the Lincolnshire Limestone is absent is seen resting upon the Northampton Sand. The junction is usually very irregular, and is always marked by a band of ironstone nodules, indicating a line of unconformity. This is well seen in the pit on the Racecourse at Northampton, and in similar sections at Weekley and Old Head Wood. Wood is not uncommon, and bones of that huge reptile the Cetiosaurus also occur. The clay is dug for brick making.

Great Oolite Limestone.—This bed occupies much ground in the south about Radston and Biddleden, and thence by Whittle Wood to Stony Stratford. We meet with it again round Tiffeld, and it forms the ridge to the north-west of Irthlingborough and that from Twywell by Briggstock and Great Oakley. The nearly beds are much valued and largely dug for lime burning, and here and there hard blue shelled bands occur, which take a fair polish and are called "Alwalton Marble." It forms a blackish soil, which produces excellent crops. Notwithstanding its name it is seldom of an oolitic texture, and it frequently contains beds of small smooth oysters—Ostrea Sowerbyi and O. subrugulosa.

Great Oolite Clays.—These are variegated in colour and vary in thickness from one or two to 20 or 30 feet. They represent the "Forest Marble" of the Cotteswold Hills. In South Northamptonshire they appear to be absent. Sections are rare, but Lillford Park, Oundle and Peterborough afford fair exposures in cuttings or brickyards. They form a cold and wet soil, often constituting the slope of the hills capped with cornbrash, which are dotted over the Great Oolite Limestone plateau. Fossils are rare, but mostly such as occur in the limestone below. Placynopsis socialis is a characteristic shell.

The Cornbrash.—This is the last bed of the lower oolites and occurs only in the north-east of the county: it is an iron limestone, weathering red, very fossiliferous and not more than 15 feet thick: it contains a band of the thick rugose oyster—Ostrea marshii—at its summit, by which it Peterborough) and spines of fishes, together with Belemnites (Orcut) and hastatus are most common.

THE DRIFT.—The reader must not suppose that all the preceding rocks occupy the surface in the regions over which they are said to extend. They are frequently covered over by irregular masses of sand and clay which we term drift, because they are supposed to have been brought from a distance, chiefly by the agency of glaciers and icebergs, and strewn without order over the surface of the country at the termination or during the retreat of the glaciers, or on the melting of the icebergs. The lowest beds are gravels or sands, perhaps mid-glacial, and marking a cessation in the period of intense cold to which this country was then subjected: such deposits are to be seen near Upper Benefield and Moulton: above these is the chalky boulder clay, full of flints, pebbles of limestone &c. and often containing well-preserved Liassic or Oolitic fossils.

RIVER GRAVELS.—Lastly in the deposits made by existing rivers we come upon traces of early man. Such is the can usually be recognised, as well as by the wall-like appearance it presents in sections. Ammonites Herveyi and A. macrocephalus are also common. The outcrop may be traced from near Wimmington by Raunds, Lillford, Warrington and Elton to Peterborough. North and west of this town it occupies a considerable tract, and it occurs on both sides of the valleys of the numerous brooks which run from the west into the Nene between Wansford and Oundle: it is very hard and is quarried for road-metal, but furnishes a poor soil.

The Oxford Clay.—Overlying the rock last described we find thick blue clays, which at their base however are frequently hard and sandy. These lowest beds, representing the Kellaway's Rock of Wiltshire, are worked in the brickpits at Oundle, Southwick, Benefield &c. The dark-blue clays above stretch eastward right out of the county from Ludington and Barnwell to Luton and again by Gilton, Werrington and Eye. There is also an extensive outlier west of Oundle and a small one in Brigstock Park. Good exposures except in the brickpits are rare, as the Oxford clay is usually overlaid by a considerable thickness of drift. As fossils, bones of large saurians, wood (near tapering celt or stone axe-head found near Towcester, also a somewhat similar one from Gilsborough, now in the Northampton Museum, with another 7 inches long and 2½ inches broad, found in that town. At Oundle, flint scrapers have been found by Mr. John Evans, and leaf-shaped arrow-heads and spear-heads are recorded from the same place.

In an old proverb Northamptonshire is said to be famous for "springs, spires and squires;" now all these owe their importance more or less directly to the geological structure of the county. The excellent springs result from the alternation of porous sands and limestones with impermeable clays. Everywhere we find the junction of two such formations marked by a line of springs, which have plainly determined the sites of the villages and towns.

The beauty of the churches is largely owing to the excellent building-stones which abound, together with the fertility of the soil, which enabled the district to support a large and prosperous population.

To this last cause and also to the fine scenery and pleasant sites are due the many old mansions which form the homes of a landed gentry of ancient name and good repute.

ABINGTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, 1½ miles east-north-east from Northampton, on the road to Wellingborough; it is bounded on the south by the river Nene. The church of SS. Peter and Paul was originally erected in the thirteenth century; but having been partially blown down, whilst undergoing repair, in 1821 it was rebuilt, with the exception of the tower, by T. H. Thursby esq. then patron of the living; the existing church is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel with chapels on either side, nave, aisles, south porch, and an embattled western tower containing 3 bells; the east window is stained: in the old chancel triple sedilia, very much defaced, were discovered in 1874 and also an early piscina: the tower retains traces of Transitional work, but has a Perpendicular belfry and some insertions of the same date; the richly carved oaken pulpit is of the seventeenth century: against the east wall of the south chapel, enclosed by iron railings, is a monument of white and grey marble, consisting of a canopy supported on fluted pilasters, within which is a statue in the robes of a barrister-at-law, and below an inscription to William Thursby esq. M.P. 1700; in the north chapel is a mural monument, with arms, to Downhall Thursby esq. 1706; and near it another, elaborately executed, to Richard Thursby esq. 1736; here, also, on the south side, are two altar-tombs, covered by thick slabs of black marble, bearing shields of arms, the one inscribed to Sir Edmund Hampden, kt. 1627; and the other to Elinor his Longhurst Rev. Alfred Aug. M.A. [rector] Campion Joseph, farmer

ABTHORPE is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Brackley second, archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, 3 miles south-west from Towcester, and one mile south-west from Wappenham station; it is bounded on the north-west by the river Soar, which on reaching Towcester is called the Tove. Abthorpe was originally a chapelry in Towcester parish but was constituted a distinct parish in 1736. The church of St. John is an edifice of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, vestry, and a north-west tower with pinnacles and spire, and containing a clock and 1 bell; the chancel has a piscina; the stained east window was inserted by the vicar in 1873, as a memorial to members of his family. The church was rebuilt in 1870-1, from designs by Mr. Ewan Christian, architect of London, and was reopened April 12th, 1871, by William Connor D.D. Lord Bishop of Peterborough. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value about £220, including 17½ acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough and the trustees of Mrs. Jane Leeson's charity alternately, and held since 1872 by the Rev. Serocol Clarke Skeels M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Mrs. Jane Leeson, by will dated 27th May 1646, devised her message and lands in this parish to feoffees upon trust to pay yearly the sum of £30 towards the relief of the poor in certain towns and villages in such proportions as therein directed: the lands devised by Mrs. Leeson are now of the yearly value of £275 7s. 11d. and are, under the authority of an Act of Parliament, let to the wife, 1634; the latter has also twelve rhyming lines: in the chancel is a tablet to J. H. Thursby esq. 1764, and Honor Harvey (Pigott) his wife, 1781, with quartered shield: on the south wall is a monument with Ionic pilasters and arms, to Sir Robert Bernard kt. sergeant-at-law, 1666, and Elizabeth (Tallakarne) and Elizabeth (Digby) his wives. The register dates from the year 1637. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value, from title rent-charge £347, including 45½ acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. and held since 1880 by the Rev. Alfred Augustus Longhurst M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. The charities are of £2 12s. yearly value. Abington Abbey, the seat of the Thursby family for 200 years, till purchased by the late Lord Overstone, has been converted into a private lunatic asylum, Henry Shutt Prichard, proprietor. Col. Sir Robert Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone, is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is loamy and marl; subsoil, lime, sandstone and clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,112 acres; rateable value, £2,682; the population in 1881 was 118.

2 miles north of the village, locally in Earls Barton. The church of St. Mary Magdalene, situated close to the castle, from which it is entered by the north porch, is an edifice of stone, chiefly in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, with north chapel, clerestoried nave, aisles, porches and an embattled western tower containing a clock and 5 bells; there is a double piscina with a stone shelf above it; the north porch is Late Norman or Transitional work with dog-tooth ornament, and has a parvise in which, according to a current tradition, an old woman lived so late as 1624; the pulpit of oak, is an elaborate work of the Jacobean period; the north chancel chapel is divided from the chancel and aisle by a beautiful oak screen, and its east window is filled with glass painted by Lady Marian Alford; the organ was given by the late rector and the late Marquess of Northampton; in the chancel is a remarkably fine brass of an ecclesiastic, arrayed in a cope, the border of which is enriched with the figures of saints under canopies; four shields, one at each corner of the slab, are lost; on the floor of the chapel is a recumbent effigy of Purbeck marble, of a knight in chain armour, cross-legged, and wearing a long surcoat; it is said to represent Sir David de Esseby, probably slain at the battle of Evesham, in 1265; there are also several mural tablets to the members of the Compton family and others; in the north wall is a recumbent figure of Lady Margaret Leveson Gower, wife of the Hon. F. Leveson Gower M.P. and on the west a colossal marble figure, erected by the late Marquess of Northampton to the memory of his father; the church was restored in 1870, at a cost of about £5,000, under the superintendence of the late Mr. J. E. Street R.A.; the actual cost of the work was £4,709 11s. 5d. of which £3,809 11s. 4d. was given by the Marquess of Northampton, £600 by the Very Rev. Lord Alwyne Compton D.D. dean of Worcester, late rector, for the chancel, and £300 by the parish. In the churchyard is a cross 20 feet high, in the Gothic style, erected in 1883 as a memorial to the late Marquess; also a marble figure of an angel erected in 1885 by the Marquess of Northampton to the memory of his wife. The register dates from the year 1564. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £260, gross yearly value about £440, including 122 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Marquess of Northampton, and held since 1880 by the Rev. London and North Western railway: the Union canal and the Grand Junction canal are also about 2 miles distant. The church of St. Leodegarius is a fine edifice of stone, chiefly in the Perpendicular style, with some earlier portions, and consists of chancel with chapel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 4 bells; a very rich rood screen of light and beautiful execution, spreading out into curves of delicate fan tracery and surmounted by an elaborately carved cresting, separates the chancel from the nave, and there are three piscine, and an sunbury; within the chancel is a monument to Sir William and Lady Johanna Catesby, and within the communion rails is a very fine canopied brass with effigies in heraldic costume, figures of children and shields of arms, commemorating Sir William Catesby esq. the favourite of Richard III. 1485, and Margaret (Zouche) his wife, 1494; there is also a kneeling brass effigy of a knight in armour, over which is a tunic bearing the arms of Catesby; this figure is believed to represent George, son of the preceding, ob. 1505; a second but plainer canopied brass has effigies of a civilian and his wife, four sons and twelve daughters, and is inscribed to Thomas Stokes esq. 1416, and Elena his wife; one other brass exhibits an effigy of a priest in long loose surplice and hood, and below is an inscription to Thomas Smyth, rector of Oxhlyffe and Eldtoft, 1510: on the north wall of the chancel is a marble monument, undated and with an unfinished inscription, to Brian Panson esq. formerly alderman of London; he died 10th Nov. 1634: there is another marble monument, with figures symbolical of Justice and Mercy, to John Bentley Ashley esq. 1761: the pews and seats throughout the church are of carved oak, and the windows still retain remnants of their original stained glass. The register dates from the year 1554. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £140, in the gift of William Senhouse esq. and held since 1807 by the Rev. Jenkin Jenkins M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford, who resides at Kilsby. Here is a Catholic chapel, Rev. Robert Middleton, priest in charge. A small charity, being the interest of £39 4s. 6d. £3 per Cent. Consols, left by Mrs.

Jane Ashley, is annually divided amongst the most constant attendants at church. The poor's estate consists of 21a. 0s. 15p. and 10 cottages; the former lets for about £42 a year and the latter are generally occupied by the poor at low rents; also the interest of £103 1s. 10d. Consols, the bequest of Lady Senhouse, to be given to the most deserving poor. Thomasine Jason, by deed bearing date 1658, gave a yearly rent-charge of £10 10s. and 12s. for preaching a sermon on the first Tuesday of every month, but the latter sum is now allowed to the parish clerk. The Manor House, for many centuries the residence of the Catesby family, is now the seat of William Senhouse esq. J.P. lord of the manor and principal landowner; the house is an ancient and interesting building, the principal front being of the time of Edward III.; the hall is finely panelled and contains some good portraits of the Ashley family; over an old gateway between the church and the manor house is a room where tradition says the conspirators of the Gunpowder Plot held their meetings. This manor was granted by William the Conqueror to Hugh de Grentemaisnil, who died in 1004. Ashby Lodge, the property and seat of Paul Edgar Tichborne Hibbert esq. J.P. was erected in 1722 by G. Arnold esq.; the mansion is pleasantly situated in a park of 170 acres; near to the house is a lake of about 25 acres, with a fine plantation in the background; the mansion is approached through an avenue nearly a mile in length. The soil is of a mixed character and very productive, and about two-thirds pasture; on the north of the parish the soil is deep clay and towards the south and west it is light and gravelly. The chief crops are barley, oats, wheat, beans and peas. The area is 2,050 acres; rateable value, £4,840; the population in 1881 was 261.

ASTON-LE-WALLS is a village and parish on the borders of Oxfordshire and Warwickshire, situated in a wooded valley, 4 miles north-east from Cropredy station on the Great Western line from Banbury to Leamington and 4 south-west from Byfield station on the East and West Junction railway, about 8 miles north-north-east from Banbury, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Chipping Warden, union and county court district of Banbury, rural deanery of Brackley first, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Leonard, erected in 1240, is a building of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and tower containing 3 bells and a clock: the chancel retains a double piscina: in the north wall of the chancel, under a plain arch, and resting on a raised slab, is the recumbent stone effigy of an ecclesiastic fully vested, with his hands raised and his head on a cushion, and in the nave are brasses to the Butler family, including kneeling effigies of Alban Butler, 1609, his two wives and fourteen children; and others to Alban Butler esq. 1617; and George Butler esq. 1685; these brasses are about to be cleaned and placed on the south wall of the chancel: in the north aisle is a marble monument with the bust of a female, and the arms and crest of the Orme family, to a daughter of Thomas Orme, of Hanch hall, Lichfield, 1692: the font is Norman and curious: the south aisle and porch were rebuilt in 1875; in 1877 the chancel was restored, at a cost of over £400, defrayed by the patron and the late Lord Overstone: in 1881-2, under the direction of Mr. J. M. Townsend, architect, of Peterborough, the chancel was new roofed, refitted with oak choir stalls and a stone reredos erected; new desks, pulpit and lectern were also introduced, the nave entirely re-seated and a new organ placed at the west end; various repairs were also effected, the total cost amounting to £1,500, of which £1,233 was furnished by the rector's sister, and £167 by St. John's College, Oxford, patrons of the living. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1540; marriages, 1558. The living is a

the body of the church is modern and was rebuilt about 1723; the east window is stained: on the north side of the churchyard is a marble tomb, to the memory of General William Cartwright, who died June 5th, 1873, and Mary Ann, his wife, who died Nov. 15, 1860, and to Major Fairfax William Cartwright, their eldest son, who died Feb. 2nd, 1881. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1502; marriages, 1573; burials, 1570. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of William Cornwallis Cartwright esq. M.P. and held since 1862 by the Rev. Frederic William Cartwright M.A. of St. Mary Hall, Oxford. John Baker, glazier, of Oxford, bequeathed 3rd Feb. 1816, a sum of money for charitable purposes, with which the trustees, in 1822, erected a range of eight almshouses, of excellent stone, from a quarry on the Lordship, in the Magdalen College estate near Walton; each contains two rooms and has a garden: they are occupied by four men and women; the men receive 8s. and the women 7s. per week : the trust fund consists of £800 New Four Per Cents and £4352 6s. 4d. Three per Cent Consols, producing about £161 yearly. The poor's land :—Thomas Drope, a former vicar, purchased land in the Mead, of the yearly value of £120s. for use of the poor ; Sir Ralph Winwood gave £20; Sir Edward Richardson £5; and Mr. Drope £5, of the purchase-money ; an allotment was awarded, of one acre, by the Commissioners of Inclosure, in lieu of those pieces of meadow called doles, and is now let for £2 yearly : the rent is added to the communion money, and distributed at Christmas, among the poor of the parish, at the discretion of the vicar and churchwardens. There is a charity left by Richard Cartwright esq. in 1633, of a rent-charge of £5 4s. which is distributed in bread to the poor of the parish. There are good quarries here and the Lordship abounds in springs, of which the chief are the Town well, Friars' well and Puckwell, a strong chalybeate and Painter's well, a petrifying spring. Sales for cattle are held on the first Wednesday and third Tuesday in the month, at Aynho station, which is one mile south-west of the village. Aynho Park, the seat of William Cornwallis Cartwright esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. now occupied by Thomas Robert Brooke Leslie Melville Cartwright esq. J.P. is a handsome mansion of freestone, situated north of the church and in a deer park extending over 200 acres, ornamented with extensive plantations : the old manor house was burnt down by the Royalists in 1645, on their return from Naseby to Oxford : the present mansion contains some beautiful bronze figures and vases, and a fine collection of pictures, brought principally from the continent by John Blackwood esq. William Cornwallis Cartwright esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is generally brash ; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 2,405 acres ; rateable value, £5,205 ; the population in 1881 was 562.

BADBY is a village and parish adjacent to the high road from Daventry to Banbury, pleasantly situated in a deep and extensive valley, 2½ miles south from Daventry, 12 south-west-by-west from Northampton and 4½ west from the Weedon station on the London and North Western railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Fawsley, union and county court district of Daventry, rural deanery of Daventry, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone, partly in the Perpendicular style, with some Earlier portions, and consists of chancel, nave of five bays, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock ; the tower was built in 1707, the former steeple having fallen down a year or two previously : there is a memorial window at the east end of the south aisle, erected by his brother officers, to the late Major C. ff. Uniacke, Scots Greys : on the south side of the chancel are memorial tablets to the Rev. Thomas Green M.A. 55 years vicar of this parish, who died July 14th, 1871, aged 85 ; Mary Ann, his wife, and their grandson ; opposite is another tablet to John Francis, their youngest son : in the north aisle is a piscina formed in the easternmost pillar of the arcade, and the chancel retains two sedilia and a piscina. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, with the chapelry of Newnham annexed, joint gross yearly value from 165 acres of glebe £273 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Scrutton M.A. late student of Christ Church, Oxford. Cole's charity of £3 18s. yearly, left in 1733 by Thomas Cole, is for bread, to be distributed in three-penny loaves to six of the poorest inhabitants of the parish. Arbury Hill, situated in this parish, is 804 feet above the level of the sea ; the top is flat and has probably been a Roman encampment ; from the summit beautiful and extensive views are obtained. Badby House is a pleasant residence situated in this parish about one mile from Daventry, and is occupied by Capt. The Hon. William Charles Wentworth Fitzwilliam. The principal landowners are Charles Fitzgerald Watkins esq. and Sir Rinaldo Knightley bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor. The soil is red land and clay ; subsoil, blue clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats and barley. The area is 2,370 acres ; rateable value, £3,340 ; the population in 1881 was 530.

BARNACK is a parish in the liberty of Peterborough, 4 miles south-east from Stamford, 9 north-west from Peterborough, 1½ from Uffington and Barnack station on the Leicester and Peterborough branch of the Midland railway and in the Northern division of the county, union and county court district of Stamford, rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. John the Baptist is an ancient edifice of stone in the Norman, Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel with side chapels, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with short spire; the lower part of the tower is of supposed Saxon work, built, as it were, to imitate wood-work, with projecting ribs on the outside and other remarkable peculiarities; the arch opening from the tower into the nave has singular horizontal impost, and apparently intended to imitate Roman work; the nave is of mixed character, some of the piers being Norman and others Early English; the south porch is Early English with a singularly acute gable and a fine and lofty doorway; the interior is groined and arcaded; the chancel is Decorated, and the south chapel fine Perpendicular; the east window has crocketed canopies over the heads of the lights; and there is a very curious Early English font, some beautiful mural niches and a piscina; there are five stained windows and a mosaic reredos, all of which were presented by the rector. The register, including Pilgate, Southorpe and Wolcot, dates from the year 1696 for baptisms and marriages, burials, 1695. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £884, net yearly value £651, including 69 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1851 by the Rev. Marsham Argles M.A. of Merton College, Oxford, Canon of Peterborough, proctor in convocation and rural dean and J.P. Here is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel. The poor's estate of 50 acres produces £80 yearly, derived from land in the parish. Ragstone of fine quality used to be dug in the neighbourhood and was extensively used for building purposes; originally the quarries were very productive, but are now considered to be exhausted. "Barnack," says Bridges, "hath been famous for its stone quarries, the largest perhaps of any inland place in the kingdom." Peterborough and Ely cathedrals, Thorney, Crowland and Bury St. Edmunds abbeys and several beautiful churches in the counties of Northampton, Rutland and Lincoln, amongst others, the church of Holland in Lincolnshire and Marshland in the county of Norfolk, are built almost entirely of this stone, which is very hard and durable but not easy to dress. Walcot Hall, the property of Ralph Henry Christopher Nevile esq. J.P. of Wellington Hall, Grantham, at present in the occupation of Sir Peter Arthur Halkett bart. is an ancient building, and was formerly the residence of the Earl of Gainsborough. The principal landowners are the Marquess of Exeter P.C., M.A., D.L., J.P., who is lord of the manor, Ralph Henry Christopher Nevile esq. and the Rev. Canon Marsham Argles M.A., J.P. There was formerly in this parish a summer palace of the Abbots of Peterborough, and the foundations of the buildings can yet be traced. The soil is of a light gravelly nature; subsoil, gravel and rock; the land is principally arable. The area with the hamlets is 4,440 acres; rateable value, £8,113; the population, including Pilgate and Southorpe, in 1881, was 885.

PILGATE is a small hamlet about one mile from Barnack and nearly 3 miles from Stamford: population, 125.

SOUTHORPE, also a hamlet, is one mile south from Barnack and five miles from Stamford: population 174.

BARNWELL ST. ANDREW and ALL SAINTS are consolidated parishes of 2½ miles south-east from Uundle, in the Northern division of the county, hundreds of Polebrook, Uundle union and county court district, rural deanery of Uundle first, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient and very curious structure of stone chiefly in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, with chapel on the north side, with clerestoried nave, aisles and a western tower with spire containing 2 bells; the chancel is Perpendicular, the remainder of the building mostly Early English; the old piscina found under Latham's monument has been placed in the south wall to form a credence table; there are some stone stalls, one or two niches, and remains of screen work and stained glass; the font is octagonal, and is adorned with canopies and pinnacles; the monument of the Rev. Nicholas Latham, rector of the church in 1600, and founder of the almshouses and Free schools, has been placed in the chapel on the north side of chancel; there is also a mural tablet inscribed to William Bigley, of Edmonton, a merchant, and founder of the girls' school, who died in 1824: the organ was the gift of the present rector. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value (including glebe) £338, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and held since 1872 by the Rev. George William Huntingford M.A. late fellow of New College, Oxford.

The rectory house which adjoins the church, was restored and embellished in 1874 by the late Duke of Buccleuch. Here is an endowed girls' school, erected on a site given by the late Duke of Buccleuch out of moneys bequeathed by William Bigley. A school, also endowed, for boys and girls with master's residence attached was built in 1874 at a cost of about £2,300; the site was given by Lord James Montagu, and the cost of building &c. was defrayed solely by the Duke of Buccleuch. Here also are almshouses, founded in the year 1604 by the Rev. N. Latham, of Brigstock, Northamptonshire, and formerly rector here, for 12 aged and infirm persons of the parishes of Barnwell All Saints and St. Andrew, Old Weston and Kimbolton, each of whom receives 7s. per week, the men also a coat, and women a gown annually; there is a quarterly allowance for fuel; the almshouses were rebuilt in 1875 at a cost of about £2,000, of which £800 was defrayed by the Charity, and the remainder by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.O. A castle is supposed to have been erected here by Reginald le Moigne in the reign of Henry I. (A.D. 1132), but according to best authorities the castle, of which some portion still exists, was built in the reign of Henry III. (1264), by Berengarius le Moigne, who being afterwards found to have forfeited all right to the estate was compelled in 1279 to cede the castle and manor to William, Abbot of Ramsey, in the county of Hunts, to which abbey it belonged till the general suppression in the reign of Henry VIII. Sir Edward Montagu, then Lord Chief Justice of the King's Bench, purchased it of that monarch in 1540 and it became the baronial residence of his descendants; the only remains now (1885) standing are four bastions, the southern gate and the walls, which are 3 feet in thickness: the ruins of the castle are open to visitors on application to the resident steward. Roman coins and other antiquities have been found in the neighbourhood. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is lord of the manor and sole landowner.

The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay and rock. The chief crops are hay, wheat, barley and beans. The area is 1,740 acres; rateable value, £2,508; the population in 1881 was 257.

BARNWELL ALL SAINTS (or King's Barnwell) is a parish extending to the borders of Hunts, 3 miles south-east from Oundle, consolidated with Barnwell St. Andrew, which it adjoins. The Peterborough branch of the London and North Western Railway has a station here. The church of All Saints, an edifice of the Early English and Decorated periods, was pulled down about 1825, and the only portion now remaining is the chancel, which is used as the vault of the Sandwich family and contains a very curious marble monument to the memory of Henry Montagu esq. only son of Sir Sidney Montagu, who was drowned 28th April, 1627; and tablets to other members of the Montagu family and an ancient stone font. The register dates from the year 1558. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The area is 1,680 acres; rateable value, £1,997; the population in 1881 was 137.

BARTON SEAGRAVE is a parish and village one mile and three quarters south-east from Kettering, 7 miles west from Thrapston and 14 north-east from Northampton, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Huxloe, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Weldon (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough, situate on the road from Kettering to Huntingdon. The river Ise flows through the parish. The church of St. Botolph is a building of stone in the Norman and Later styles, consisting of chancel, nave, large south aisle and has a low but massive embattled central tower containing 4 bells and a clock; the south doorway, a Norman work, c. 1350, is enriched in the tympanum with a mask of a human face and figures of monsters. In 1878 this church underwent extensive restoration, at a cost of nearly £4,000, under the direction of Messrs. Carpenter and Ingelow, of London. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1609, burials 1610. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £492; net yearly value £530, including 64 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Marquis. The Rev. the Hon. John B.A. Chamberlain Sarah

A Boys' School was established in the year 1604 by a former rector, the Rev. Nicholas Latham, who also erected a small building comprising a school-room & a master's residence

In 1838 a Girls' School was founded by William Bigley, who had received his education in Latham's school & afterwards became a rich merchant in London

The buildings of both these schools were replaced in 1874 by new school premises erected by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.O. at a cost of £2,000. Both schools are now under one roof; but each is still a separate Free School: the new buildings are arranged to hold 45 boys & as many girls; the average attendance being 24 boys & 35 girls; 15 boys receive a blue coat each & 10 boys a green coat & vest annually. The master resides in the new building, & the mistress in the house attached to the old building of Bigley's school stone: the communion table is also of stone, the front of which, as well as the reredos, is richly gilded: there are several stained windows: the Bible, which cost 80 guineas, was presented by the patron on the rebuilding of the church: the organ has been enlarged at a cost of £160. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £22; net yearly value £535, derived from 470 acres of land and a modulus of £15 per annum, with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Watts Russell of Biggin, Oundle and held since 1876 by the Rev. Edward Marham Moore M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. The rectory house, which stands close to the church, was partially rebuilt in 1877-8. The charities for distribution amount to £10 yearly. Bennington's endowment of £22 5s. yearly, derived from the rent of 15 acres of land situated in Upper Benefield, is for the repairs of the church. In this parish are a number of

holes called "the Swallow Holes," through which the land floods occasionally flow and disappear. On a mound near the west end of the church is the site of Benefield Castle and an old moat. Mrs. Watts-Russell, of Biggin Hall, Oundle, is lady of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clayey; subsoil, rock and sand. The chief crops are hay, barley and wheat. GREAT BILLING is a parish 4 miles north-east from Northampton and 1 mile north from the Billing Road station, which is situated in the parish of Little Houghton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, situate a little to the south of the road from Northampton to Wellesborough. The church of St. Andrew is a building of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, with some remains of Norman work, and Perpendicular insertions, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave of four bays, aisles, south porch and a western tower containing 3 bells; the latter was originally surmounted by a spire, but this was destroyed by lightning. Ap. 12, 1759, and in its fall greatly damaged the church; both the tower and nave are adorned with incongruous parapets and other ornamental work, transferred here from the mansion of the Earls of Thomond at Billing, when that structure was taken down by Lord John Cavendish in 1776: the font is late Perpendicular: the chancel is separated from the nave by a wooden screen: the east window and one in the tower are stained: in the north chapel is a large and costly monument, erected by Sarah, Countess of Thomond, to her husband, Henry, Earl of Thomond (ob. 1691), and their children: it consists of a table tomb of marble, at the back of which are kneeling effigies of the Earl and Countess, and around it figures of children; above the monument is a shield of arms and other decorative additions: there is also a marble tablet, with a female figure in relief, by Flaxman, and inscribed to Caroline, wife of R. C. Elwes, 1812; and there are various other memorials to members of this family, dating from 1850 to 1868: at the west end is an inscribed tablet to the Rev. George Buckley Bower M.A. a former rector, who died Dec. 26, 1800: the interior of the church was restored, the nave and chancel re-seated with open sittings and an organ supplied in 1867, at a total cost of about £800, defrayed principally by the lord of the manor and the rector, aided by subscriptions. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1662; marriages, 1644. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 223 acres of glebe £550 with residence, in the gift of the Principal and Fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, and held since 1843 by the Rev. Joseph Walker M.A. formerly of Trinity College, Cambridge, and afterwards fellow of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a Catholic chapel, formerly a school, built by the late Robert Elwes esq.

and converted to its present purpose about 1873, by V. D. H. Cary-Elwes esq. There is also a small Wesleyan chapel. An almshouse was founded here by John Freeman esq. in the reign of James I. for four women, each of whom receives several small sums during the year: the church land now (1885) produces about £6 yearly and Lovell's charity about £4 a year, which is distributed at Christmas for meat. The Billing Horticultural and Cottage Garden Society, established in 1872, has for its object the encouragement of gardening amongst the cottagers of the villages, and holds an annual exhibition, at which prizes are awarded. Billing Hall, the seat of Valentine Dudley Henry Cary-Elwes esq. D.L., J.P., F.S.A. is a mansion of Dunston stone, erected about 1757 by Lord John Cavendish, from the designs of John Carr, a distinguished architect and twice Lord Mayor of York: it stands on a commanding position close to the village, nearly on the site of the old mansion of the O'Briens, Earls of Thomond, and has a Catholic chapel adjoining it; on the lawn, 10 acres in extent, are three trees worthy of particular mention—a beech containing about 900 feet of timber; a holly whose trunk has a girth of 8 feet and is about 35 feet high; and an elm whose hollow trunk affords ample room for 6 persons. Valentine Dudley Henry Cary-Elwes esq. J.P., D.L., F.S.A. is lord of the manor and owns the principal part of the land, with the exception of that held by the rector and John Perkins esq. The soil, which varies much, is principally red loam; subsoil, ironstone with some limestone. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 1,290 acres; rateable value, £3,071; the population in 1881 was 390.

LITTLE BILLING is a parish 3½ miles east-by-north from Northampton and one mile from the Billing Road station on the London and North Western railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough; it is bounded on the south by the river Nene. The church of All Saints is a small building of stone, in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel with north chantry, north aisle, south porch, nave and a tower on the north side, with small spire, containing clock and 3 bells: the chancel and north chapel are divided from the rest of the church by wooden screens under open arches: the north chapel was rebuilt in 1849 by the late Lewis Loyd esq. to whom it belonged, and in 1854 he also restored the church, at a cost of about £800: at the same time Dr. Geldart, the late rector, resigned the chapel at a further cost of £200: the church is chiefly interesting on account of its singular font—a work of the Early Norman period, irregular in shape and rude in workmanship, and bearing, in characters precisely similar to those on the great seal of William the Conqueror, the following curious legend:—“Wilberhts artifex atq: cementsarivs hvic fabricavit qvisqv: arvm venit mergere corvps pvoiv dvbio capit.” The register dates from the year 1635. BLAKESLEY with WOODEND is a large village and parish, situated in the midst of a thickly-wooded country, 5 miles west from Towcester and 12 south-west from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Green's Norton, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Brackley second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough: here is a station on the East and West Junction railway. A tributary of the Tove, locally known as “the Black Ouse,” flows through the parish. The church of the Blessed Virgin is an ancient edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing a clock and 5 bells; in the chancel is a brass, with effigy in armour, to Matthew Swetenham, bow-bearer to Henry IV. 1416, and on the north chancel wall a curious old monument, with mutilated effigies, to William Wates, dated 16th June, 1614: the church (with the exception of the chancel) was thoroughly restored in 1874, at a cost of nearly £1,400, under the direction of Messrs. Law and Son, of Northampton. A burial ground of two roods, given by the Duke of Grafton K.G., C.B. was opened in 1884. The register, including Woodend, dates from the year 1538. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £320 with residence, in the gift of Hertford College, Oxford, and held since 1865 by the Rev. James Jenkins, of St. Aidans. There is a small Wesleyan chapel here, built in 1868, and a Baptist chapel at Woodend. The charities amount to about £300 a year, derived chiefly from land at Foxley, devised 21st Feb. 1679, by Lady Katharine Leveson, and distributed to the poor in various ways. Blakesley Hall, the property of Charles Bartholomew esq. of Castle Hill House, Ealing, who is lord of the manor, and occupied by Charles W. Bartholomew esq. M.A. is an ancient and substantial building of stone, standing in grounds of about 25 acres; it formerly belonged to the Knights of the Order of St. John of Jerusalem; at the dissolution of the monasteries it was granted to the Princess Elizabeth, and in the time of Edward VI. was given to the Duke of Northumberland in exchange for Tonbridge, in Kent; in the grounds is a chalybeate spring, dence and glebe of 8 acres of meadow land, in the gift of Earl Brownlow, and held since 1872 by the Rev. Thomas Collingwood Hughes B.A. of Downing College, Cambridge. Col. Sir Robert Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone, is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The chief crops are cereals. The area is 856 acres; rateable value, £1,571; and the population in 1881 was 78.

BLATHERWYCKE is a parish comprising the parishes of the Holy Trinity and St. Mary Magdalene, united in 1448, 9 miles north-west from Oundle and 3 south-west from King's Cliffe station, on the London and North Western railway, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, Oundle union and county court district, rural deanery of Oundle (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough.

The church of the Holy Trinity is a very ancient building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel with north chapel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, south porch and a western tower with plain parapet containing 2 bells; there are several stained windows; it was partially restored in 1855, and a new south porch erected in 1868. The register dates from the year 1621 and is in good condition. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £295, net yearly value £418, including 133 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Horace Stafford O'Brien esq. and held since 1876 by the Rev. Alexander Lendrum M.A. of King's College, Aberdeen. The rectory house, partly erected in the year 1836 by the Rev. Henry Corrie, then rector, is a substantial building of stone. Healey's charity of £5 yearly, left in 1684 by Benjamin Healey, of King's Cliffe, is for bread; Cole's of £9, is for providing plum puddings at Christmas, for the six oldest men. Blatherwycke Hall, a fine mansion, the seat of Horace Stafford O'Brien esq. is delightfully situated on an eminence, in a park of about 400 acres, well stocked with deer; there is a fish pond covering an area of 68 acres. Horace Stafford O'Brien esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, oolite. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats, beans &c. The area is 2,053 acres; rateable value, £2,794; the population in 1881 was 142.

BLISWORTH is a large village and parish, with a station on the London and North Western railway, which passes through a cutting averaging 50 feet deep for 2 miles in length, and constructed at a cost of £200,000; it is situated about a mile from the village, at the junction of the Peterborough branch and also of the line to Towcester, Banbury and Stratford-on-Avon; it is 4 miles south from Northampton and 4 north-east from Towcester, on the road to Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymersley, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Preston second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The Grand Junction canal runs through the village and passes to the neighbouring parish of Stoke Bruern by a tunnel one mile and three quarters in length. The church of St. John the Baptist is a spacious edifice of stone, in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock; there are memorial windows to a son of the late rector and to G. Stone esq. and his wife, erected by their family; in the south aisle is an altar tomb, with inscribed brass, to Roger Wake esq. lord of the manor, 1403, and Elizabeth (Catesby), his wife, with 10 children: the chancel is separated from the nave by an oak screen; the church was restored in 1856, at a cost of £870, under the direction of the late Mr. Law, of Northampton, and has sittings for 400 persons; the gallery removed and the pews thrown open. A new burial ground was enclosed and consecrated in 1863. The register dates from the year 1551. The living is a rectory, tithes rent-charge £3, net yearly value £420, including 313 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1884 by the Rev. Henry Thomas Barry M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. The rectory house, situated at the west end of the church, was erected in 1841. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1825; a residence for the minister and new vestries were erected and a graveyard added in 1865 and school rooms were built in 1871, at a cost of £1,350. There is a charity of 30s. yearly derived from land at Abthorpe, left 27th May, 1646, by Mrs. Jane Leeson, and given to the poor in money; there is also an allotment of land, the rent of which now (1885), amounting to about £40 a year, is appropriated to the repair and maintenance of the church. There are several stone quarries worked in this parish, and a large quantity of iron ore is produced. The Duke of Grafton K.G., C.B. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. Blisworth House, the seat of Capt. Thomas Cockayne Maunsell J.P. is an ancient building of stone, situated near the church; the grounds are about 13 acres in extent. The soil is a light soil; subsoil, limestone and ironstone. The chief crops are wheat, oats &c. The area is 1,980 acres; rateable value, £8,202; and the population in 1881 was 1,060.

UPPER BODDINGTON is a parish and village on the borders of Warwickshire, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Chipping Warden, union and county court district of Banbury, rural deanery of Brackley first, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles east from Byfield station on the East and West Junction railway, 9½ south-south-west from Daventry and 10 north from Banbury. The church of St. John the Baptist is a building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and low western tower containing a clock and 5 bells: the stained east window is a memorial to the Rev. Thomas Goughly, late rector, who died in 1867, there is another memorial window in the north aisle, to George Payne, who died in 1883; in the western entrance is an ancient wooden chest, hewn out of one piece of wood and bound with iron: in 1874 the church was new roofed and re-seated throughout; there is a brass, with effigy in academic dress, to William Proctor, a former rector, 1627. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 468 acres of glebe £400 with residence, in the gift of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, and held since 1867 by the Rev. Edward Townsend Sale B.D. and late fellow of that college. Here is a Wesleyan chapel, built in 1865. Richard Lamprey in 1758 gave a tenement for a school-house, the rent of which is applied to the support of the present school. Here are 18 acres of poor's land let in allotments, the rents of which are distributed about Christmas to poor widows and others belonging to the parish; Goughly's charity, being interest

BOUGHTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 3 miles north from Northampton, near the road from Northampton to Market Harborough and 1½ miles from the Brampton station. The ancient church of St. John the Baptist, a structure of the Decorated period, has now been for some centuries in ruins and stands in the churchyard by the green, distant about half-a-mile from the village: the tower and spire fell about 1785: the existing parish church, formerly a chapel, situated in the village, was enlarged in the year 1846, and is an edifice of mixed styles, consisting of nave, with vestry, and low western tower containing 3 bells: the tower, of late and poor perpendicular work, is the only part of the original building remaining, and was repaired in 1599; the rest of the church was rebuilt and lengthened in 1806, and again enlarged, refitted and a vestry added in 1847: the stained east window was given by a former rector. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1549; marriages, 1559; burials, 1560. The living

LITTLE BOWDEN, a parish and village adjacent to Market Harborough, 11 miles north-west from Kettering, 14 north-west from Northampton, is a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Rothwell, union and county court district of Market Harborough, rural deanery of Rothwell, second porton, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, situate on the river Welland, which separates it from Leicestershire. The church of St. Nicholas is an edifice of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, south porch and a wooden tower, 35 feet in height, at the west end, containing 3 bells; there are memorial windows to Sir Robert Barlow O.C.B. uncle, and to the Rev. Thomas William Barlow, father of the late rector. The register dates from about the year 1580. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £4, net yearly value £110, including 150 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late T. J. Jerwood esq. and held since 1874 by the Rev. Thomas Frederick Jerwood M.A. of Trinity Hall, Cambridge. The rectory house, a good specimen of the unpretending parsonage of the seventeenth century, was built by Richard Mowse, an ancestor of the late rector. The cemetery for Market Harborough, situated on the Northampton road and 4 acres in extent, was opened in 1878, at a cost of £4,000, and has two mortuary chapels. A Burial Board of 7 members was formed in 1878; meetings are held at the Clerk's office, Market Harborough, every first Tuesday in the month, at 7.30 p.m. There is a Wesleyan chapel. An estate producing £106 a year, to be applied in charity, which had been lost, has been recovered; one half of the yearly income, now amounting to £106, is appropriated for apprenticing, and the remainder is applied to the relief of sick and poor people; £4 10s. derived from three other charities is distributed in bread. Viscount Downe is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are Messrs. William Thomas West, H. Gatty and F. Hewson. The soil is a rich loam; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The area is 1,670 acres; rateable value, £9,690; the population in 1881 was 960.

LITTLE OXENOVY is a hamlet of this parish, but maintains its own highways and appoints wardens. The village is said to have been burnt at the time of the battle of Naseby, and coins, pottery and tiles which have been found tend to confirm this tradition. Thomas Tertius

BOZEAT, mentioned in Domesday as "Boisete," is a plebeian parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers first, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough, 5½ miles north from Olney, 11 east from Northampton and 6 south on the London road from Wellingborough on the borders of Bedfordshire and Bucks. The church of St. Mary is an edifice of stone consisting of chancel, nave of three bays, with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower of Norman date surmounted by an octagonal broach spire and containing a clock and 5 bells: the chancel is divided from the nave by a Late Decorated oak screen, formerly painted with a representation of the visit of the Magi, one panel of which is still preserved at the vicarage; on the eastern wall is a painting of a monk; at the north end of the screen is the staircase of a rood-loft; the side windows of the chancel are Perpendicular; the Decorated east window is stained as a memorial to the only son of Thomas Revis esq.; on the south side of the chancel is a double piscina, and at the east end of the aisles are brackets, canopies and piscines, denoting the former existence here of altars; the south porch is Perpendicular, but the doorway Early English: the chancel was restored chiefly at the cost of the Rev. F. J. Pizey, a former vicar, in 1873, 1874 and 1875, when an organ was built, at a cost of about £200: in 1883 the tower was rebuilt, the oldest bell recast, the whole peal relunged, and the clock repaired, at a cost of £1,000: during the removal of a quantity of rubbish on the south side of the tower in 1883, the remains of a body were discovered about 12 inches underground, with the head facing eastward; the spot is now marked by a red brick cross: the communion plate dates from 1566. The register dates from the year 1729 only; the earlier registers were destroyed by fire on the 9th September in that year. The living is a discharged vicarage, tithe rent-charge £100, with the rectory of Strixton annexed, joint net yearly value £250, including 100 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Earl Spencer K.G. and held since 1883 by the Rev. Augustus William Secker M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. Here are Wesleyan, Wesleyan Reform and Baptist chapels. The church lands consist of 14 acres, producing £26 yearly, the rent of one acre is for maintaining the town well; the rent of the remaining 13 acres is applied to the repairing of the church and clock. Thomas Revis esq. is lord of the manor, principal landowner and lay impropriator. The manufacture of shoes is carried on here to a considerable extent, and gives employment to a large number of hands. At STONEWOOD, about 2 miles south-east, is a stone which marks the boundary of Beds, Bucks and Northants. The soil is a stiff loam; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are cereals. The area is 2,523 acres; rateable value, £3,498; and the population in 1881 was 1,189.

BRACKLEY is an ancient borough, small market, union and corporate town and head of a county court district, having a station on the Bletchley and Banbury branch of the London and North Western railway, in the hundred of King's Sutton, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, situated on the Bucks border of the county on elevated ground, and commanding extensive views of the surrounding country: it is 60 miles from London by road and 68 by rail, 20 south-west-by-west from Northampton by road and 28 by rail, 9 south-east-by-east from Banbury, 7 north-west-by-west from Buckingham and 2½ from Oxford by rail; and is a polling place for the southern division of the county, and the revising barrister also holding his court here. The principal street, nearly a mile in length, extends from the bridge crossing the North Western railway near the station up the acclivity of the hill on the road to Towcester, and contains some fine houses, mostly built of stone. The streets are partly paved, well lighted with gas and thoroughly sewered; 63 acres of ground were purchased in 1876, at a cost of £10,000, as a sewage farm; water works situate on the west side of the town were erected in 1881, at a cost of £3,000, under the direction of Mr. Richard William Barnes, engineer, of Manchester. A parochial committee of 15 members is appointed by the rural sanitary authority to carry out these and similar sanitary works. By a charter of incorporation confirmed and extended in the seventh of Edward II. the government of the town was vested in a mayor, six aldermen and twenty-six burgesses: the mayor is nominated from the aldermen, the mayor for the time being nominating one candidate the stewards of the courts another, when the burgesses proceed to election and the one chosen is sworn into office at the annual court-leet of the lord of the manor, which is also a court baron and port-mote, held at the Town Hall on the Monday after the 29th day of September, when two constables, two head-boroughs and other officers are also chosen. The corporation have power to hold a court of record for the recovery of debts under £20, but do not exercise it, and the mayor is not vested with magisterial authority, the town being under the jurisdiction of the county magistrates. The corporation is now (1885) moribund, and unless the charter is renewed by the 25th of March, 1886, it will become defunct; the authorities are, however, taking steps to obtain the renewal of the charter. Under the provisions of the divided parishes act, the two parishes of St. Peter and St. James were united March 25th, 1884: an outlying portion of St. Peter's, being however, joined to Syresham. The church of St. Peter is an ancient and spacious edifice of stone in mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south chapel with crypt beneath it and an embattled western tower: the crypt is groined and supported by a central pillar; the church was re-seated in 1874 and a scheme is now (1885) on foot for the restoration and enlargement of chancel: a stained window has been erected, the gift of Mrs. Bayly of this parish: the north and south aisles contain several stained windows. The register, including that of St. James' parish, dates from the year 1500. The church of St. James was pulled down in 1836 and a chapel erected on the site for the performance of burial service, but this is now used for divine worship; the churchyard, situated near the railway station, is used as a cemetery. The living of the united parishes is a consolidated vicarage, tithe rent-charge £237, net yearly value £298, including 82 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Earl of Elinchmere, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Brooke de Malspas Esq. M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford: the vicarage house was rebuilt in the Elizabethan style by the late Ven. H. F. Thicknesse M.A. vicar, in 1870. There are Wesleyan and Congregational chapels. In the reign of Henry VIII. the plague raging violently at Oxford; the fellows and scholars of Magdalen College removed to this town and resided in a hospital founded by Robert le Bossu, Earl of Leices. before 1150, and dedicated to SS. John and James; of this hospital, the chapel, with a broad low tower on the north-west side, still exists: it was restored by John Welchman about the year 1745, but in 1842 fell into disuse until it was fitted up for daily service in 1870 as a school-chapel and also for parish uses. Magdalen College school was founded about the year 1447 by William of Waynflete, who endowed it with £13 6s. 8d. a year, for ten boys of the now united parish of St. Peter and St. James; it was thoroughly restored in 1860: the President and fellows of Magdalen College appoint and pay the head master and act as governors of the school; there is a house for the master; the present number of scholars is about 55, ten of whom are annually elected after examination to exhibitions of £5 each, being an exemption from the payment of school fees for that year; there is a library of 800 volumes in connection with the school, which was thoroughly restored in 1860. There is a reading room, originally used as an infants' school, and erected in 1840 by Charlotte, Countess of Ellesmere. The Town Hall, a substantial building in the centre of the main street, supported on stone arches and pillars, was erected in 1705 by Scroop Egerton, first Duke of Bridgewater, at a cost of about £2,000; it has a turret containing 1 bell and a clock; the space beneath the hall has been inclosed and is now used as the Corn Exchange. The hall was enlarged and thoroughly restored in 1834, at a cost of £2,000, by the Bridgewater Trustees.

The Police Station, situated in the Banbury road, is a building of stone, erected in 1851, comprising a magistrates' room, four cells for the confinement of prisoners and a dwelling for the inspector. Brackley Cottage Hospital and nurses' institution was established in 1876, in order to afford medical and surgical attendance for the poor, and to provide the services of trained hospital nurses; for the town of Brackley and the neighbouring villages: the cost of maintenance, derived from public subscription, is about £200 a year. Lace making gives employment to many persons in this town and neighbourhood, and there are two large breweries. Almshouses for six aged widows were founded by Sir Thomas Crewe in 1633 and endowed with a rent-charge of £24, increased in 1721 by his descendant Nathaniel Lord Crewe, Bishop of Durham, by an additional rent-charge of £12; the yearly income now amounts to £60 and each inmate receives £10 yearly. The Feoffees' or Charity Estate now realises about £300 yearly and is constituted under a commission of Charles I. 9th December, 1648, for the aid, ease and benefit of the inhabitants, for the "Repair of the Churches," "The Relief of the Poor," and other good uses: Mrs. Leeson's, of £2 yearly, left in 1646, is given to the poor on St. Thomas' day: the Rev. Dr. Littleton Burton, former resident of Brackley, in the year 1732, left £50, the interest to be disposed of by the vicar of Brackley and rector of Hinton on New Year's day to such poor householders of St. Peter's, Brackley, as do not receive alms of the parish: Stephen Cooke, of Buckingham, left £300, to be invested in £3 per Cent. Consols, the dividend to be disbursed yearly, on the 28th January, in coal and bread, also £100 to be invested in the same way, the interest to be divided among the inhabitants of the almshouses. The market is on Wednesday, for corn, and on the second and fourth Wednesday in the month a market for cattle is held. A statute fair is held on the Wednesday after the 11th of October. The principal fair (being for cattle of all descriptions) is held on the 11th December and the day following for pleasure; the wool fair is held on the third week in June. The Manor House, now the residence of the Earl of Ellesmere B.A., J.P. was entirely rebuilt and greatly enlarged in 1875-76-77 with exception of some portions belonging to the old house, which have been carefully retained; the modern mansion is a splendid structure of stone in the Early and Late Tudor styles; it is situated at the upper end of the town and occupies a site of 6 acres of ground, which commands extensive views of the surrounding country. The Lodge is the residence of the Hon. Robert Wellesley Grosvenor D.L., J.P.; Sir George Banerman Bart, Thomas Barclay Cartwright, George Augustus Campbell, Frank Henry Barnett, James Francis Hatfield-Harter, and Lewis Flower esqs. also have residences here. The Earl of Ellesmere B.A., J.P. the lord of the manor, Magdalen College, Oxford, the representatives of the late W. K. Malins and John Locke Stratton esq. J.P. are the principal landowners. Rateable value of united parishes is £10,985 9s. 5d.; area, 33,082. The population in 1831 was—St. James, 628; St. Peter's, 1,876, including 91 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

HALSE is a hamlet in the parish of Brackley St. Peter, 2½ miles north-by-west from the town; it comprises six farm houses and about a dozen cottages. The population is included with that of Brackley.

London and North Western railway: its situation is on a rising ground, at the foot of which is the Grand Junction canal, which joins the Oxford canal within the limits of the parish: a small brook here divides the county from Warwickshire. The church of All Saints (rebuilt in 1847) is an edifice of pink sandstone from quarries near Kenilworth, in the Geometrical Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with spire and pinnacles, containing a clock and 6 bells: the stained east window is a memorial to the Rev. A. B. Clough, M.D. late rector who died in 1870; and there are others to R. N. Lamb esq. of Bragborough hall; to the parents of the Rev. J. Jenkins M.A. vicar of Ashby St. Legers, besides four smaller stained windows: the pulpit is of Devonshire marble and alabaster; the font is also of rich Devonshire and Derbyshire marbles: on either side of the east window are paintings on tiles of SS. Peter and Paul. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £252; gross yearly value about £850 with residence, in the gift of the Principal and fellows of Jesus College, Oxford, and held since 1870 by the Rev. Lewis Gilbertson B.D. late fellow and vice-principal of that college. There are Wesleyan and Baptist chapels here. Here are wharves; boat building is carried on to some extent and bricks are made. The Town Land Charity, now of the annual value of about £140, is appropriated to the repair of the roads and the church and to charitable purposes. The rental of 11 acres 3 roods of land, producing about £16, is expended in coals, which are distributed on St. Thomas' day to the poor of the parish: other small sums, amounting together to £10 yearly, are also distributed. Bragborough Hall, the seat of Capt. George William Hutton Riddell, is a modern building in the Classic style, standing on an eminence 2 miles from the village and commanding extensive and picturesque views of the surrounding country. Luke Borman, esq. who is lord of the manor, F. Hazledine esq. and William Rose esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is light loam; subsoil, gravel and clay. The crops are wheat and beans. The area is 3,930 acres, about two-thirds of which is pasture land; rateable value £7,054: and the population in 1881 was 1,072; many of the inhabitants are canal boatmen, a large proportion of whom, living almost entirely in their boats, are frequently absent from the parish.

BRIGSTOCK is a large village and parish, 5½ miles north-west from Thrapston, 8 south-west from Oundle, 8 north-west from Kettering and 7 north from Twywell station on the Midland railway, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. A stream called Harper's brook flows through the parish. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient structure of stone, in the Norman and later styles, with some portions of very early work, consisting of chancel with chapel, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower of rough masonry, and spire containing a peal of 5 bells: the tower opens into the north aisle by a small semi-circular-headed door with a little window over it; the arch towards the nave has large plain blocks for impost; the belfry stage and spire are somewhat later in date than 1330: the chancel retains a beautiful niche and a piscina; the rood-loft stairs also remain: the church was thoroughly restored in 1877 at a cost of £2,000 under the direction of Mr. R. H. Carpenter, architect, of London: the east window has been filled with stained glass by the surviving sons of the late Lord Lyveden to the memory of their mother, Dowager Lady Lyveden. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1643; marriages and burials 1641. The living is a vicarage with the chapelry of Stanion annexed, tithes rent-charge £200, joint net yearly value £257, including 60 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Cleveland K.G. and held since 1873 by the Rev. John Poole Sandlands M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The Town Estate produces £20 yearly. Lady Anne Fitzpatrick left £1,000 to build cottages for widows. There are Congregational and Primitive Methodist chapels here. Fairs are held on April 25th, September 4th and November 22nd. The market cross is an ancient structure. Messrs. Wallis and Linnell, wholesale clothiers of Kettering, have a factory here. The Odd Fellows have a lodge here and the tradesmen have also a club called the Brigstock Union Club, the meetings of which are held at the Old Three Cocks inn. About the distance of 3 miles south-east is Liveden, "the manor of which came into the possession of the Treshams about the middle of the fifteenth century, the earliest recorded owner in the family being Sir Thomas Tresham, son of William Tresham, of Twywell, who fought for Henry VI. at Tewkesbury, and was beheaded by the victor;" the latter manor house, or "New Bield," as it is called, is a noble edifice erected by Sir Thomas Tresham, kt. of Rushilton, about 1605, in the reign of James I. and is a fine specimen of the Renaissance style of that age; it is built of freestone of a remarkably close texture, so that the edgings of the cornices and the ornamental sculptures adorning the exterior still retain their original sharpness, freshness and beauty, and the cement is as hard as the stones themselves; the mansion appears never to have been completed, and "the curiously half-finished state of the work suggests that it was suddenly broken off in consequence of the death of Sir Thomas, 11th September, 1605;" it is in the form of a Greek cross, each side of each wing being 23 feet long, with a handsome bay window at the end, rising to the entire height of the building, which consists of three stories, of which the lowest is half sunk and forms a basement, comprising kitchen, buttery &c.; the ground floor includes the main entrance, where there is a beautifully executed doorway which here takes the place of the central portion of the bay; the ascent was by a flight of steps, but of these there are now no remains; above the windows of the first story is an entablature running along the whole of the building, and adorned with medallions displaying emblems of the Passion, some quite finished, some in a half finished state and some with their outlines barely traced, plainly proving how sudden and unexpected was the blow that occasioned the suspension of the work; the frieze of the upper entablature contains the remains of legends, which at one time also extended all round the building, only fragments are now left: the demolition of the mansion was begun by Major Butler, an officer under Cromwell, who, being stationed at Oundle, attempted to level the building with the ground, but not being able to accomplish his purpose he caused the timber to be sawn out of the walls and carrying it to Oundle built with it the house known there as Mrs. Creed's, now the property of J. W. Smith, esq. The old manor house, or "Old Bield," rebuilt apparently about the same time the new building was erected, is a gabled structure, situated some little distance northwards; between the two extend remains of terraces with trees, and nearer to the building fish ponds, forming three sides of a square, and enclosing a spacious meadow, and winding at each angle round a lofty wooded mound: there is a good balustraded staircase with quaint newels and pendants and several moulded fireplaces; the principal gateway and a shield of the Tresham arms, formerly on the western gable, have been removed to Farming Woods, Farming Woods, the seat of Lord Lyveden D.L., J.P. the lord of the manor, situated about 1½ miles from the village is a modern mansion standing in a beautiful park stocked with deer and surrounded by magnificent woods. The Duke of Cleveland K.G., D.C.L.; the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and Lord Lyveden D.L., J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is chiefly clay with some light gravelly land; subsoil, clay and rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans, peas and oats; a great deal of the land is in pasture. The area is 5,948 acres; rateable value, £7,917; the population in 1881 was 1,043.

BRINGTON is a parish, comprising GREAT and LITTLE BRINGTON with the hamlet of NOBOTTLE, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Nobottle Grove, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), Northampton, rural deanery of Peterborough, 1 mile from Althorp Park station on the London and North Western railway, 7 miles north-west-by-west from Northampton, 6 east from Daventry and 73 from London. The church of St. Mary is an ancient edifice of stone in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel with north chapel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower containing 6 bells; the greater part of the church is Decorated, but the clerestory, chancel and chapel are Perpendicular, and were probably the work of Sir John Spencer kt., who died April 14th, 1522; in 1846 a bay of five sides, with a tall window in each, was added to the north side of the chapel by Frederick, late Earl Spencer k.o. as a memorial to his father, mother and brother; it has fan-vaulting of stone and stained windows; the chancel retains double sedilia and a piscina, and there is another piscina of unusual size in the south aisle and near it a winding stair, probably once leading to a rood loft; nearly all the original benches remain; they have heraldic puppy heads and were put up between 1445 and 1457, as may be determined from the shields they bear; new benches after the same pattern were added by the late Earl Spencer in 1846, and a new pulpit and desk introduced; in 1848 the late earl presented a new organ, the porch was built in 1832 by George John, 2nd Earl Spencer k.g. The east window is stained. On the south side of the chancel, under the easternmost arch of the arcade, is the tomb of Sir John Spencer kt. ob. 1522, and Isabel (Graunt) his wife, which consists of a lofty arched canopy of late Perpendicular date, with quatrefoiled entablature finished by an elaborate cresting, and flanked by pannelled and crocketed turrets, and below it an altar tomb, the sides of which are divided into compartments, containing shields within enriched quatrefoils; on the upper slab are recumbent effigies of the knight in armour, with heraldic surcoat and mantle, and his lady; at the east end of the canopy is an inscription, and on either side are shields of arms; opposite is a low altar tomb with a partially mutilated inscription in brass round the ledge to Sir William Spencer kt. his son, ob. 1532, and Susan (Knightley) his wife; around the tomb are shields, and on the wall above a tablet with inscription: adjoining the tomb of Sir John Spencer, under the next arch westward, is that of his grandson, also Sir John Spencer kt. ob. 1886, and Katherine (Kilson) his wife; a structure of Italian design with recumbent effigies of both on an altar tomb, with tall obelisks rising from pedestals at the angles and a semicircular canopy, surmounted by a frieze, entablature and pediment, covered with shields; the knight is in armour with heraldic surcoat and shield, and his wife wears a very singular hood which partially covers the face and descends below the waist; a long inscription is placed at the east end. On the north side is a very stately structure of Elizabethan character, to Sir John Spencer kt. son of the preceding, ob. 1599, and Mary (Catekin) his wife, consisting of a low altar tomb, enriched with shields, and bearing effigies similar to those just described, over which is a lofty coved canopy, upheld by square stilted pillars, and at each outer angle rises a Corinthian column supporting an engaged frieze and entablature; the inscription, as before, is at the east end. Under the westernmost arch, on the south side, is the tomb of Robert, 1st Lord Spencer of Wormleighton, Warwick, where he died October 25th, 1627, and Margaret (Willobbly) his wife, ob. 1597; it consists of an altar tomb, bulging outwards from the base, upon which are laid recumbent effigies of both, Lord Spencer in a complete suit of armour, with an heraldic skirt or base, and his wife in a large spreading hood; the lower part of her figure is covered by a kind of apron charged with the quartered arms of eleven families; at the angles of the tomb are stilted Corinthian columns, supporting an entablature from which, on each side, rise three obelisks; and over the effigies is a semicircular canopy; at the foot of the tomb is an inscription, from which it appears that Lord Spencer erected it during his lifetime, in 1599. On the north side, and adjoining westward the tomb of Sir John Spencer, is that of William, Lord Spencer, ob. 1636, and Penelope (Wrothlesley) his wife, ob. 1667, which consists of a large basement table of marble, on which is placed a low altar tomb sustaining recumbent effigies of both in white marble, and very delicately sculptured: Lord Spencer is habited in his state robes and wears the order of the Bath; the other figure is in a flowing gown and enriched mantle; above is a lofty arched canopy upheld by eight Corinthian pillars: this tomb, the work of Richard Hargrave and John White and designed by Nicholas Stone, was erected by Lady Penelope at a cost of £600; at the east end of the tomb is a genealogical inscription in Latin; the remaining sides bear minor inscriptions and arms. All the effigies above mentioned, with the exception of the two last, are executed in Tottenham stone and are in perfect preservation. In 1846 the addition of a new bay to the church rendered it necessary to move the tombs on the north side, and on the coffin of Sir John Spencer (1599) being opened it was found that his features and the disposition of his hair and beard were accurately represented in the effigy; these tombs, both on account of the wealth of heraldry they display, comprising not less than 375 distinct quarterings, as well as the varied costumes of the figures, rank very high among the monuments of the period. There is an inscribed marble on the floor to Margaret, daughter of Sir Robert Spencer kt. 1st Lord Spencer; she died 1613; and at the east end a large urn placed on a pedestal flanked by two columns; from the urn rises the demi-figure of a man in white marble, and upon the urn is an inscription to Sir Edward Spencer kt. 1655; there is also a mural monument with sculptured figures by Flaxman to Margaret Georgiana (Poyntz) wife of John, 1st Earl Spencer, 1814; a bust and inscription to Capt. the Hon. Sir Robert Cavendish Spencer k.c.h., R.N. 1830; and inscribed brasses to Lady Georgiana Frances Spencer, 1852; Frederick William, 4th Earl Spencer k.o. 1857; Elizabeth Georgiana (Poyntz) his countess, 1851; and Adelaide Horatia Elizabeth (Seymour) his 2nd wife, 1877. In the chancel is a floor stone with arms to Lawrence Washington, 1616, and Margaret (Butler) his wife; and there is also an inscribed brass, with arms to Elizabeth Washington, widow, 1622; and Robert Washington her husband, 1622; the arms of this family, arg. two bars gu. in chief three mullets, were adopted with some modification, as those of the United States of America. The register of marriages dates from the year 1558; baptisms, 1560; burials, 1573. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £450, in the gift of Earl Spencer and held since 1878 by the Rev. Henry Holmes Stewart M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a charity estate of 140 acres, now (1885) producing £180 yearly, which is applied to the poor and other purposes. Earl Spencer k.g., P.C. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay and gravel; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats; about half of the parish is pasture. The area is 3,017 acres; rateable value £4,853; the population in 1881 was 827.

Parish Clerk, Bernard Dunkley.

Little Brington is a hamlet of Brington, about three-quarters of a mile south-west from the village of Great Brington. There is a chapel of ease, erected in 1856 at the sole expense of the late Earl Spencer k.o.; and Wesleyan and Baptist chapels. The land is about two-thirds pasture, the remainder arable. The soil is a mixture of loam, clay and gravel.

NOBOTTLE, from which the hundred is named, is a small hamlet, included in the parish of Brington.

BRIXWORTH is a parish and head of a union and polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Orillingbury, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 6½ miles north from Northampton, on the road to Market Harborough. The Northampton and Market Harborough branch of the London and North Western railway has a station in this parish about one mile from the village. The church of All Saints, supposed to have been erected about the year 690 on the site of a Roman temple or early Christian church, is an edifice of stone and Roman bricks, presumed to be of Saxon construction, with additions in later styles, and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, south chapel of Decorated character and a western tower with pinnacles and spire and containing 5 bells and a clock: during the restoration in 1866 the bases of circular columns were met with within the area of the tower, and are believed to have formed part of the Roman building which once stood here, the materials of which appear to have been largely used in the construction of the existing church: a small reliquary of stone was discovered about 1840 in the wall of the south aisle. The register of burials dates from the year 1546; baptisms, 1562; marriages 1565. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value from glebe and investment £306, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1881 by the Rev. John Fredk. Halford M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. There is a Wesleyan chapel, erected in 1811. The poor's lands yield £55 yearly arising from land in the parish; this sum is for district. A fair used to be held annually on the Monday next after Ascension day, but is now discontinued. The parish produces large quantities of iron ore, which is being worked by two firms; skulls, Roman pottery and other ancient relics have been found in the course of excavations. The kennels of the Pytchley hunt are here; 40 couples of hounds are kept: Herbert Langham esq. is master of the hounds. Brixworth Hall, the residence of Richard Lee Bevan esq. J.P. is an ancient quadrangular mansion of stone; and the Rookery, the residence of Capt. Charles Carden, is a plain modern structure, both of which are situated in the village. Colonel Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.B., M.P. of Overstone, the trustees of the late Thomas and William Wood and Sir Charles Edmund Isham bart. M.A., D.L. of Lamport hall, are lords of the manor, which is divided into four portions. The principal landowners are Colonel Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay, Rev. William Wayte Andrew M.A. of Wood hall, Hetherst, Wymondham, Norfolk, and the trustees of the late Thomas and William Wood esqs. The soil is mainly Northamptonshire sandstone with ironstone and a little clay: subsoil, stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 3,410 acres; rateable value, £9,100; the population in 1881 was 1,183, including 102 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

Parish Clerk, Thomas Burgess.

BROCKHALL is a small village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Nobottle Grove, union and county court district of Daventry, rural deanery of Weedon, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles north from the Weedon station on the London and North Western railway, 5 miles east from Daventry, 8½ north-west from Northampton and 72 from London. The London and North Western railway, the Grand Junction canal and the old Roman Watling Street pass through the parish. The situation is elevated, commanding fine views of a rich, fertile undulating country. The church of St. Peter is a very small building of stone, in the Norman, Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 3 bells; the aisle is separated from the nave by an arcade of one round and two pointed arches; on the floor beneath is a matrix of a brass, consisting of a floriated cross and an inscription to Peter de Thurstleton, rector in 1281: the north side of the nave seems to have been rebuilt about the middle of the fifteenth century, (and the same date may be given to the porch and upper story of the tower: the font is octagonal and of Perpendicular date; the church was restored in 1874, when the church was new roofed and re-seated, and Brown Rev. BROUGHTON is a parish and large village 2½ miles south-west from Kettering, 7 north-west from Wellingborough and 11 north-north-east from Northampton, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Orillingbury, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, on the road from Kettering to Northampton. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient Perpendicular style; consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches and a south-west tower with spire containing a clock and 5 bells; the stone font is of Perpendicular date; the chancel was rebuilt in 1828; the church was thoroughly restored in 1854, the interior was fitted with open sittings in stained deal; oak stalls and a handsome stained window were placed in the chancel. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £394, including 300 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and held since 1849 by the Rev. Granville Hamilton Forbes B.A. of Downing College, Cambridge. Here is a Union dissenting

the chancel was almost wholly rebuilt and shortened by several feet: the cost of the work amounting to about £1,000 was defrayed by the late T. C. Thornton, then patron of the living. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from tithe rent-charge and 50 acres of glebe, £475 with house, in the gift of Thomas William Thornton esq. J.P. and held since 1869 by the Rev. Thomas Kenworthy Brown M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. The Manor House, the seat of Thomas William Thornton esq. J.P. is a fine building, erected in the time of James II. but enlarged about the year 1800; it stands in a park of 63 acres, watered by a tributary of the river Nene, which here forms an ornamental sheet of water. Thomas William Thornton esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is a deep loam or marlstone, of which 12 acres are arable and the rest rich pasture land; subsoil, stone. The parish contains 854½. 3r. 19p.; rateable value, £4,035 10s.; the population in 1881 was 44.

LONG BUCKBY is a parish in the Southern division | court district of Daventry, rural deanery of Haddon (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of

Peterborough, 5 miles north-east from Daventry, 11 from Northampton and 71 from London. The Grand Junction canal, on which there is a wharf, and the London and North Western railway pass through the parish. The station is half a mile from the village. The church of St. Lawrence is a building of stone, originally in the Early English and Decorated styles, but has been much injured by the addition of incongruous aisles in a debased Classic style, erected about the year 1774: it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells: the tower is Early English, the arcades of the nave Decorated: the chancel retains three Decorated sedilia, a piscina and an ambury: between the east end of the north aisle and the chancel is an arch of both periods, apparently for a tomb: the church was restored internally in the year 1862, under the superintendence of the late Sir G. G. Scott K.A. at a cost of £1,200: the external restoration of the south aisle was carried out in 1883, at a cost of £630, under the direction of Mr. W. Bassett-Smith, architect. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a discharged vicarage, tithes rent-charge £90, gross yearly value £170, net £155, including 36 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Arthur Oswel James M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. The Mission church, situated near the wharf, was erected in 1875, on a site given by John A. Craven esq.: Divine service is conducted here every Sunday evening, and there are occasional morning services. The Congregational chapel was built in 1771, and enlarged in 1819, and will seat nearly 700. The Baptist chapel was erected in 1846, and will seat about 600 persons. Long Huckby Assembly Hall, erected in 1881, and situated in Church street, is a building of red brick, used for public meetings, concerts and entertainments, and will seat 250; Mr. William Newitt is proprietor. The manufacture of boots and shoes gives employment to a large number of inhabitants: here is also a brewery, malt kilns, lime kilns, brick fields and wharves for landing coal and other goods: the village, which is about 2 miles in length, is lighted with gas: the works for which were established in 1860. Huckby Hall, a modern residence, situated near the centre of the village, is the seat of General Sir Frederick Horn K.C.B., J.P. The poor's land of 9

BUGBROOKE, in Domesday Book "Buchebroe," is a parish and village 6 miles north from Towcester, 6 west-south-west from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Nobottle Grove, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Weedon, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough.
 The Grand Junction canal passes through the parish, also the London and North Western railway, the nearest stations of which are at Blisworth, 4 miles south-east for London, and Weedon 4 north-west for the North. The church of St.
 Michael is an edifice of stone, in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches and a low embattled western tower with spire containing a clock and 5 bells, together with a small sanctus bell: the whole church was originally Early English, and to this date the nave, arcades and other portions belong: the tower and spire are Decorated and the clerestory Perpendicular: in the north aisle is a piscina and at its eastern end a vestry: the rood screen is of Perpendicular date, richly-designed and remains almost entire: the octagonal font is of the same period: the churchyard was considerably enlarged by the patron about 1849.
 The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £50, gross yearly value £450, including 40 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. James Harwood Harrison M.A. and held since 1850 by the Rev. James Harwood Harrison, jun. M.A. of Magdalen College, Oxford. There is a charity estate now producing £35 2s. yearly: Johnson's charity, of £1,130, in-

BYFIELD is a large village and parish and station on the East and West Junction railway, on the high road from Banbury to Daventry, 7 miles south-south-west from Holdich M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. The charities, amounting to about £40 yearly, and arising from land and funded property, are applied partly to educational purposes and otherwise expended in clothing. Several Roman coins and pieces of pottery have been found here, dating from the time of Julius Caesar, also a quantity of Saxon coins and a seal of Pope Urbanus V.; the latter was found by the late rector in one of the fields attached to the rectory house. Bulwick Hall, the seat of Lieut.-Col. Thomas Tryon J.P. who is lord of the manor and chief landowner, is situated a quarter of a mile south-west of the village, on an eminence in a well-wooded park. Lord Carbery, of Laxton hall, Wansford, is also a landowner here. The soil is clay; sub-soil, rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley, oats &c. The area is 2,067 acres; rateable value, £2,707; the population in 1881 was 325.

Daventry, 17 west-south-west from Northampton and 79 from London, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Chipping Warden, union and county court district of Daventry, rural deanery of Brackley first, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. A small brook, a tributary to the river Cherwell, flows through the parish, and a great portion of one of the reservoirs of the Oxford canal is also in this parish. The church of the Holy Cross is an edifice of stone, in the Decorated style, erected about 1350 on the foundations of an earlier church said to have been built in 1242, it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, south chapel, south porch and a western tower with spire and massive angle turrets, containing 5 bells and a clock: the western front is ornamented with three canopied niches: the seats throughout are of carved oak: a memorial window, inserted in the chapel in 1884 by the Rev. Thomas Farebrother M.A. to the memory of his parents, Wm. and Mary Farebrother, 1838-57: the chancel retains a piscina and three sedilia and there is another piscina on the north side of the nave and one in the chapel: within the tower are fragments of stone coffins found during the restoration in 1870, when the church was thoroughly repaired, at a cost of nearly £3,000; an organ-chamber was added in 1876, and in 1885 a stained east window and a reredos of Caen stone and marble were erected: the church will seat 375 persons. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1688; marriages, 1636. The living is a rectory, nominal gross yearly value from 516 acres of land £800, nett £625, but now wholly uncertain, in the gift of Corpus Christi college, Oxford, and held since 1872 by the Rev. Francis Hy. Curgenven M.A. late fellow of that college. There is a Congregational chapel in the village, built in 1827, and a small Primitive Methodist chapel. There are 10A. 2R. 39P. of land and some messuages, the produce of which is for paving the causeways in the parish, and 17A. 3R. 33P. of land to provide coals for the use of the poor; this land being let annually to the highest bidder varies in value; the rector is required to give 48 pecks of wheat to the poor on St. Thomas' day. The interest of £150, left by Mr. John Lovett, of Hillmorton, Warwickshire, is paid to such of the necessitous poor as do not receive parochial relief. Mr. Samuel Greenwood, of Byfield, in 1693 left the sum of £3 yearly for the instruction of poor children; Edwards' charity of 10s. yearly, left in 1725 by Thos. Edwards, of Bndbroke,

CASTOR is a village and parish 4 miles west from Peterborough by the high road to Wansford and $\frac{1}{2}$ by rail and one mile from the Castor station of the London and North Western railway, in the Northern division of the county, Nassenburgh or Peterborough liberty, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Peterborough first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The parish is bounded on the south by the Nene and Huntingdonshire. The church of St. Kyneburga is a very fine and spacious building, chiefly Norman, with additions in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of a chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south-west porch, transepts and a finely enriched and embattled central tower of two stages, with a short spire, and containing 6 bells; the south door, apparently coeval with the aisle, is of massive oak, cross-framed and retaining the original lock and key, which are very curious from their great size and strength; the key is nearly 15 inches in length, and has been handed down for about six hundred years; the door has been elaborately carved and the exterior margin bears the following legend in raised letters: "Ricardus-Bebey Rector-Ecclesie-de Caste-le": there are sepulchral recesses on the outside of the church and in the south wall of the aisle: in the transept is a stone effigy of a priest and on the outside is a stone coffin of the thirteenth century; in the walls of the churchyard may be seen numerous remains of coped coffin lids, many of them bearing floriated crosses: in the north aisle are the remains of a curious shrine, supposed to be that of St. Kyneburga, and her sister Kyneswita, whose remains, originally deposited here, were afterwards removed to Peterborough cathedral: in the north aisle is a double ambury and on the wall of this aisle are some highly interesting fresco paintings, now (1885) much obliterated, three of which represent scenes in the history of St. Catherine, the others depict incidents from the Old and New Testament and from the lives of saints; the whole series date from the early fourteenth century: the central tower rests on Norman pillars with peculiarly carved capitals; that on the north side of the chancel arch represents Samson killing the Lion, and a boar hunt; that in the north transept display the figure of a woodman cutting trees, an animal browsing on a tree and other figures of animals; on the other capital is a man gathering grapes and in the south transept on the west capital are two warriors fighting with maces: the chancel retains a very fine piscina and double sedile: on January 4th, 1795, the spire was struck by lightning: the church has been restored and the nave fitted with low open benches. The register, with Milton-in-Ailsworth, dates from the year 1513. This register also incorporates that of Sutton up to 1758. The living is a rectory, net yearly value from tithe rent-charge and 167 acres of glebe £650 with residence and 8 acres in Newborough, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1864 by the Rev. John Jas. Berensford M.A. late fellow of St. John's College, Cambridge. Here are Congregational and Free Methodist chapels. Wright's charity of £548. yearly, left in 1734 by Robert Wright, of this parish, is distributed weekly in bread. The kennel of the Milton foxhounds is here. Castor, which derives its name from the Latin here "castra," is a camp, was the site of a very important Roman camp, and formerly the station of Duroboris or Durobrivæ, mentioned in the history of Antoninus; many fragments of tessellated pavement, urns, coins and foundations of walls have been discovered here in various places. A monastery is said to have been founded here about the middle of the seventh century by St. Kyneburga, the daughter of King Penda, and wife of Alfred the Northumbrian; it was destroyed by the Danes in the year 1010. Milton House, the seat of George Charles Wentworth Fitzwilliam esq. is situated about a mile and a half from the village, on the road to Peterborough; the park has an area of 600 acres, well wooded and stocked with deer and is much frequented by pleasure parties from the surrounding neighbourhood. The Ecclesiastical Commissioners and George Charles Wentworth Fitzwilliam esq. are lords of the manor and owners of about two-thirds of the land. The soil is of a gravelly nature; subsoil, limestone; the land is principally arable. The area, including the roads and common land, is 4,400 acres; rateable value, £6,431; the population in 1881 was 1,158, of which 333 are in Ailsworth, 92 in Sutton and 72 in Upton.

presented by George Attenborough esq. The register dates from the year 1705. The living is a chaplaincy, yearly value £50, in the gift of G. Attenborough esq. and held since 1882 by the Rev. Arthur Carsten Holthouse B.A. of St. John's College, Oxford, who is also vicar of and resides at Helidon. The Rev. John Parkhurst M.A. the Lexicographer, was born here in 1728, and the churchyard contains a handsome marble monument to various members of that family from 1750 to 1821. Charles Parkhurst esq. left in 1824 £252 17s. 3d. in trust to be invested in $\frac{3}{4}$ per Cent. Consols, the interest to be applied in providing coal for the poor of the parish. Here was anciently a house of Benedictine nuns, founded by Philip d'Essey in the time of Richard I. and dedicated to SS. Mary, Edmund and Thomas the Martyr; at the Dissolution its revenues were estimated at £132: a portion of the west wall of the priory church still remains, situated on an eminence overlooking the valley. The principal landowners are George Attenborough esq. who is lord of the manor, the Rev. Samuel Garrett, Mess. Hickman and J. Green esq. The soil is red loam; subsoil, stone. The parish contained in 1881 a population of 98, and extends over an area of 1,977 acres, about three-fourths of which is meadow and pasture land; rateable value, £2,478.

CHACOMBE (or CHALCOMB) is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Banbury, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 3½ miles north-east-by-east from Banbury, on the Oxfordshire border of the county. The church of SS. Peter and Paul formerly belonging to the priory of Chacombe, restored in 1856, is an ancient building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower containing 6 bells and a clock; on the north side of the chancel is a floor slab with inscribed brass to Michael Fox, a London merchant, who in the year 1544 purchased a great amount of property in this village, including the priory; traces of the roof loft remain at the east end of the north aisle: the chancel retains a piscina; there is another in the south aisle and the north aisle has both piscina and sedilia; the font consists of a basin of Early Norman date on a modern pedestal; on a Norman column near the south door is the figure of a mitred ecclesiastic, and on either side are crosses, conjectured to be marks of consecration: the south porch is groined. The register dates from the year 1566. The living is a discharged vicarage, title rent-charge £241 ros. net yearly value £360, including 30 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of Mrs. Wykeham Martin, and held since 1873 by the Rev. CHAPEL BRAMPTON, see BRAMPTON.

CHARWELTON (or CHERWELTON) is a village and parish on the western border of the county & adjacent to the county of Warwick, on the high road from Banbury to Daventry, 5 miles south-west-by-south from Daventry, 11½ north-north-east from Banbury and 2 north-west from Byfield station on the East and West Junction railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Fawsley, union, county court district and rural deanery of Daventry, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of the Holy Trinity is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles, and containing 4 bells; the font, octagonal in form and enriched with singular carving, stands on a square base; in the church are several very fine brasses, in excellent preservation; the earliest, placed on a very large slab in the middle of the nave, displays a double canopy of elaborate tabernacle work, beneath which are effigies of a merchant and his wife; an inscription occupies the pediment, below which are figures of eight children also under canopies; above the principal canopy is a shield of arms, with helm, crest and mantling, supported by angels; a marginal inscription, partially lost, encloses the whole, and still retains the name of Thomas Andrew, merchant, and the date 1400; that of Margery his wife being at the foot; another and equally fine brass in the nave displays the effigies of a knight in armour and his lady, with arms and crest, pedimental inscription and figures of 11 children as in the preceding, and a marginal inscription with shields at the angles to Emma (Knightley), wife of Thomas Andrew, jun. esq.; she died in 1490; a third brass with similar effigies is inscribed to Thos. Andrewes esq. 1541, and Agnes (Newport), his wife: there is also a large altar tomb, the upper slab of which is divided into three compartments, and bears recumbent effigies of Sir Thomas Andrew, ob. 1564; his first wife Catherine (Cave), ob. 1555, and his second wife Mary (Heneage), who was living in 1565: the figure of the knight is in plate armour, with emblazoned surcoat and collar of SS.; the sides of the tomb are adorned with shields and effigies of children, and round the ledge is an inscription in Latin and English: another monument with kneeling figures and arms is inscribed to Thomas Andree esq. and his wives Frances (Cotton), 1567, and Mary (Isham), 1589; there are other memorials to the Knightley, Benson and Adams families. The register dates from the year 1697. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £550, gross yearly value £640, including 90 acres of glebe, in the gift of Sir Rainald Knightley bart. M.P. and held since 1837 by the Rev. Valentine Knightley M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford, who is also rector of and resides at Preston Capes. There are 29 acres of land vested in trustees for the benefit of the poor belonging to the parish of Priors Marston. A spring, rising about a mile from the village, in the cellar of Cherwell House, is the source of the river Cherwell, which is crossed by a curious and very ancient foot bridge of stone, with two pointed arches and low parapets. Sir Rainald Knightley bart. M.P., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, Mr. J. Hitchcock and Capt. Thomas William Thornton J.P. of Brockhall, Weedon, are the principal landowners. The soil is divided between clay, sand and gravel; subsoil, gravel; about three-fourths of the land is good grazing land, the remainder is arable. The area is 2,258 acres; rateable value, £3,319; the population in 1881 was 182.

CHELVESTON cum CALDECOTT is a small straggling village and parish on the borders of Bedfordshire and the road from Higham Ferrers to Kimbolton, about 2½ miles east-by-north from Higham Ferrers, 6 south from Thrapston, 8 north-east from Wellingborough and 67 from London, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers first, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. The Higham Ferrers station of the London and North Western railway is situated in this parish, about 3 miles west from the village. The church of St. John the Baptist, situated in a field quite away from the village, is an edifice of stone in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled tower at the north-east corner containing 5 bells and a clock, erected in 1867 at a cost of £86: the exterior of the tower, the walls of which are five and a half feet thick, exhibits traces of Norman work: the pulpit and desks are richly carved and in the south wall, close to the pulpit, is a piscina: an interesting Early English window has lately been discovered in the chancel and restored by Mrs. Wise, the lady of the manor. The church was restored about 1850. The register, including Caldecott, dates from the year 1723. The living is a vicarage united to the vicarage of Higham Ferrers, joint net yearly value £323, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. G. Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and held since 1868 by the Rev. Edward Templeman B.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. There are four almshouses, restored, founded under the wills of James and Thomas Sawyer, dated 1708, for four widows, each of whom receives 3s. weekly and coals. The inhabitants are engaged in agriculture and shoe making. Here is a reading-room supplied with the daily and weekly papers, with a lending library attached. Mrs. Jane Harriet Wise, of Walton Hall, Derbyshire, is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are the Duchy of Lancaster, the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, Mrs. Jane Harriet Wise, Col. Sir Robert J. Loyd-Lindsay & Co., K.C.B., M.P. of Overstone and John Chettle esq. The soil is chiefly clayey; subsoil, chiefly clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and seeds. The area is 1,752 acres; rateable value, £2,681; the population in 1881 was 423.

COGENHOE is a pleasant parish and village standing on high ground, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymerley, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough; it is bounded on the north by the river Nene and is 5½ miles east from Northampton and about one mile east from the Billing Road station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway, which passes through this parish. The church of St. Peter is a building of stone situated at the north end of the village consisting of chancel with north chapel, nave of three bays with clerestory, aisles, south porch and an embattled tower containing a clock and 3 bells; on the north side one window is stained to the memory of the late rector, the Rev. E. Watkin; on the north side of the chancel are a credence and ambrie; the north chapel chapel, which for many years had been demolished and the arcade between it and the nave and chancel walled up, was rebuilt on the ancient foundations in 1869 at the cost of the present rector; the chapel contains an organ, presented in 1871 by Edward Saunders, esq. of Cogenhoe; the chancel has a stone bench on the south side in lieu of sedilia; both chancel and nave are Early English; in the fifteenth century the nave was heightened and a clerestory added; the tower is of Perpendicular work of the fifteenth century, and the south porch, which retains a stump, is also of this period; the church contains several slabs to the ancient families of Whalley and Linwood; and at the east end of the aisle is a tomb with the stone effigy of a knight in chain mail, bearing an embazoned shield, and supposed to represent Sir Nicholas de Cogenho or Cugenho, the original founder of the church, who died in 1280; among the interesting features of the church is a black-letter Bible in excellent preservation, of the date 1617, and an altar-cloth of tapestry work of the time of Queen Elizabeth; the present rector has also a manuscript volume of sermons by Francis Smyth, rector of this parish in the middle of the seventeenth century; the church underwent an extensive restoration in 1869, at the cost of £1,300. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £400 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1864 by the Rev. Charles Havey Burnham, M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There is a small Baptist chapel here, erected in 1843. Ironstone is found in considerable quantities in the parish and is raised by the Cogenhoe Iron Ore Company; the locality also yields a peculiarly fine white sand, which, when mixed with clay, is adapted to the manufacture of a superior kind of pottery ware. Shoes are manufactured. The Rev. J. C. Whalley of York House, Bognor, Sussex (who is lord of the manor), Charles William Hamilton Sotheby esq. J.P. of Eton, Northampton, and the Rev. C. H. Burnham M.A. rector, are the principal landowners. The soil is of a fertile mixed character. The crops are the usual cereals. The area is 964 acres; rateable value, £2,377; and the population in 1881 was 349.

COLLEY-WESTON is a parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Willybrook, union of Stamford, county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough, 3½ miles south-west from Stamford and 6½ north-west from Wansford, on the borders of Rutland. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient edifice of stone in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower of Barnack stone with four crocketed pinnacles and containing 2 bells; in the church is a tablet in memory of the Rev. Posthumus Belgrave, M.D. twenty-two years curate of this parish, who died in 1840; a brass to Elizabeth Follett, who died in 1558, and an old vault belonging to the Tryon family; there are three stained windows; the church was restored in 1857. The register dates from the year 1541. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge, £328; gross yearly value £415, including 50 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held since 1854 by the Rev. Nicholas Bourne Milnes, M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford. There was formerly a mansion here, (or enlarged) by Ralph Lord Cromwell, treasurer to Henry VI. who died in 1355. The Lady Margaret (Beaufort), Countess of Richmond and Derby, mother of King Henry VII., and foundress of St. John's and Christ's Colleges, Cambridge, resided here and died seized of it in the first year of Henry VIII. (29 June, 1509), when it fell to the Crown; the manor was subsequently for a long period in the Tryon family and is now in the possession of the Marquess of Exeter; there are now no remains of the mansion, but the terraces may be distinctly traced; there is an old dovecot still remaining, bearing the initials of Queen Elizabeth, "E. R." and the date "1578." Slate quarries are numerous and extensive in this neighbourhood; the Colley-Weston slates are well known and are of a yellowish-white colour and much used for roofs of churches and Gothic buildings. The Marquess of Exeter is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is principally limestone and slate; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and clover. The area is 1,572 acres; rateable value £2,675; and the population in 1881 was 433.

COTTINGHAM is a parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Weldon first, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough; the village is situated on a declivity which marks the termination of the lias and the commencement of the inferior oolite, 2½ miles south-west-by-west from Rockingham station, 9 miles north from Kettering and 21 north-east-by-north Northampton, separated from Leicestershire by the river Welland. The church of St. Mary Magdalene is an ancient structure of inferior oolite stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north transept, vestry and a western tower with pinnacles and an octagonal spire, and containing 5 bells; one of the Decorated columns of the north aisle arcade has a remarkable capital, carved with figures of two knights in armour, a lady and a bishop or mitred abbot, all placed horizontally round it. In 1880 the church was thoroughly restored at a cost of over £2,600, raised by voluntary subscriptions: the chancel being entirely rebuilt and fitted with oak seats, a vestry and transept added, the nave roof renewed, the pews removed and the nave supplied with chairs; a new organ was at the same time placed in the transept. There are sittings for 285 persons. The register dates from the year 1574. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £495; gross yearly value £589, including 60 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Principal and fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, and held since 1866 by the Rev. William Yates M.A. formerly fellow of that college and rural dean of Weldon first. A supply of excellent spring water derived from springs in the adjacent village is carried throughout this and the adjoining township of Middleton in iron pipes, with drinking fountains at intervals; the pipes were laid at the expense of the copyholders in the year 1854. There is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel here, built in 1878, and a Congregational chapel at Middleton, built in 1808. The charities include the rent of 18 acres, left by William Downhall, in 1760, for keeping in repair a portion of the church; the overplus being given to the poor of Cottingham and Middleton, now producing £30 yearly for fuel; and the rent of 1A. 1B. 30P. left by William Riddle for apprenticing poor children—subject to such charges as may be necessary for keeping his tomb and others of his family in repair; there are also several small sums at interest for the benefit of the poor. In ancient records it is stated that a house for leprosy persons was maintained here in the time of Henry III. A reading room was opened here in 1885, which is supplied with the daily and other papers and periodicals, and has a good billiard table. Bry House, the residence of the Rev. Henry John Bigge M.A. is a modern mansion situated in small grounds adjoining the village. The copyholders are lords of the manor and hold their court annually on the first Monday after the 11th October. The principal landowners are Edmund Henry Cokayne Esq. Sir Geoffrey Palmer bart. J.P. of Carlton Park, Rockingham, Sir William de Capell Brooke, bart. J.P. and George Lewis Watson esq. J.P., D.L. of Rockingham Castle. The soil is heavy clay and limestone; subsoil, ironstone; it is chiefly a grazing district, but yields heavy crops of wheat. The area is 3,185 acres; rateable value £3,058; the population in 1881 was 945, of which 314 are in Middleton.

MIDDLETON is a township in this parish adjoining Cottingham.

COURTEENHALL is a scattered village and parish, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymerley, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, diocese of Peterborough, rural deanery of Preston (first portion) and archdeaconry of Northampton, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles from Blisworth Junction station, $\frac{1}{4}$ miles from Roade station and 5 miles south from Northampton, near the road from Northampton to Buckingham. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is an ancient edifice in mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, north porch and a western tower containing 5 bells: it contains several monuments to the Wake family, including one to the Rev. Richard William Wake, rector of this parish for 37 years, who died in 1850; in the north aisle is an altar tomb of marble with Ionic columns supporting a pediment, with arms and crest, below which are two kneeling effigies, and underneath a long inscription in Latin to Sir Samuel Jones, founder of the Grammar school, who died 3rd January, 1672, and of Mary (Middleton) his wife; in the same aisle is a monument of freestone, covered with a slab of black marble from which several brass effigies are lost; round the tomb is the following curious inscription relating to the Wake family:—

"A Salops Oseley I,
A ruen Partridge woone,
No birds I had her by,
Such work with her was doone:
She dead, I turtle sought,
A Wake, in Salsie bred;
Twice six birds she me brought;

CRANFORD ST. JOHN is a parish and station on the Kettering and Huntingdon branch of the Midland railway, and picturesque village situated on a feeder of the Nene, 4 miles east from Kettering, 5 west from Thrapston and 79 from London, on the road from Thrapston to Kettering, in the Oundle division of the county, hundred of Huxloe, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Cranford second, archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. John is a small building of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch, vestry, and an embattled western tower containing 4 bells: it was repaired and a south aisle added in 1842 at the expense of the late Rev. Sir George S. Robinson

"But when ninth year was coome,
I slept, that was a Wake;
So, yeacling to Death's doome,
Did here my lodging take."

In the south wall of the chancel are three carved sedilia and a piscina; the church also contains a hagioscope, and a double aumbry. In 1883, the interior was re-seated with chairs in place of the former pews, and the nave and chancel refloored, at a total cost of £400; some remains of ancient frescoes were discovered during the alterations. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge, £278; net yearly value £340 including 60 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of Sir Hereward Wake bart. and held since 1870 by the Rev. CROUGHTON is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 4 miles south-west from Brackley and 3 east from Aynho station on the road from Buckingham to Banbury and near the Oxfordshire border. The church of All Saints is an ancient structure of stone in the Norman and Later styles, consisting of a chancel, nave, aisles, north and south porches, vestry and low western tower containing 3 bells: the pews are of carved oak; the font, of Early English date, consists of a massive stone basin resting on a pedestal ornamented with foliage; the outer surface of the basin, previously plain, now bears somewhat rude carvings of emblems of the Passion and modern devices executed by the incumbent who held the living up to 1849: a stained memorial window has been placed in the east end of the south aisle by Beville and Edward Ramsay esqs. to the memory of their brother, Norman Ramsay esq. of the 34th (Border) Regiment, who died in the Crimea, July 22nd, 1855: on the north wall of the chancel is a well-designed monument in the Jacobean style, with shafts supporting a frieze and pediment, the latter adorned with an oval medallion bearing the impaled arms of Clarke and Blagrove; below is an inscription to John Clarke, died 14th March, 1603, and Jane (Blagrove), his wife: a lozenge-shaped stone on the floor is inscribed to his son, died 4th June, 1669: on the south wall is a monument with Latin inscription and arms to the Rev. John Maximilian Del'Angle, rector here and son of the Rev. Samuel Del'Angle S.T.P. of Charenton, near Paris, and prebendary of Westminster, and also to Anna (Friend), his wife; he died August 20th, 1719: adjoining is another monument to the Rev. William Friend A.M. for 25 years rector here, 26 September 20th, 1689, and to his sons, Robert S.T.P. head master of Westminster school; William A.M. lord of the manor of Hitcham; and John M.D. Lond. on the floor of the sacristy is a stone inscribed to Zachæus Brendon S.T.P. rector here 1631-63, who died 6th July, 1663, and to Thomas, his eldest son, who died November 25th, 1689: close to the 'churchyard' is an elm tree of remarkable proportions, measuring round the trunk upwards of 22 feet. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1663 and burials, 1689. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £650 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1849 by the Rev. John Lister M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. There is a chapel for Wesleyans: the charities consist of a sum of £2 12s. yearly, left by R. Cartwright esq. and distributed in bread to the poor who attend church; 15s. OR. 1P. of land were allotted to the poor by the Inclosure Act in lieu of right to cut furze: Croughton Park is the seat of Beville Ramsay esq. J.P.: the mansion is a small stuccoed residence, surrounded by a park of 90 acres: Croughton Lodge, the seat of Edward Ramsay esq. is a modern building in the centre of the village; Portway House, of William Griffith esq. The principal landowners are the Earl of Effingham, of Tusmore house, Bicester, who is lord of the manor, the rector and the trustees of the late Alfred Hopcraft esq. Beville Ramsay esq. J.P. and Edward Ramsay esq. The soil is brashy; subsoil, marl. The chief crops are barley, wheat and roots. The area is 2,099 acres; rateable value, £2,795 12s.; the population in 1881 was 605.

Parish Clerk, Job Prickett.

CULWORTH (called in early records "COLEWORTH" and "CULEWORTH") is a large village and parish pleasantly situated on an eminence 3 miles north-west from Helmdon station and 2½ south-west from Moreton Pinkney station, 7½ north-east from Banbury, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley first, arch-deaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone in mixed styles and consists of a chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock; in 1838 an excellent organ with 17 stops was added: in the chancel are two stained windows, one of which was erected in 1849 to the memory of Margaret Spence by her son the rector, the other in 1857 by his parishioners in grateful remembrance of the Rev. John Spence, rector here for nearly forty years: there are two other stained windows in the south aisle, where also is a monumental arch, probably the tomb of Robert de Coleworth, with piscina and aumbry eastward of it: the old oak pewing is very good and there is a handsomely carved pulpit of Jacobean date: among the monuments in the church is one on the north wall of the chancel, of elaborate character, to the D'Anvers family, erected in 1790 by Meriel D'Anvers, and inscribed to Sir John D'Anvers kt. died Feb. 17, 1642; Sir Samuel D'Anvers kt. and bart. died Jan. 27, 1682; Sir Pope D'Anvers bart. died May 14, 1712; Sir John D'Anvers bart. died Sep. 26, 1744; Sir Henry D'Anvers bart. died Aug. 10, 1753; and Sir Michael D'Anvers bart. died Aug. 20, 1775; the monument is of black and white marble, gilt and includes two marble busts: the eagle lectern of oak was presented in 1880 by the rector's sister: in the tower is a stained window, erected in 1880 by Thomas Cottrell to the memory of his parents: and in the south aisle is another memorial window to Thomas Draper, thrice mayor of Banbury, who died March 27, 1869, and Mary, his wife, presented by their daughters: in 1884 a reredos was erected at the cost of the present rector: the church was thoroughly restored in 1880-1, at a cost of nearly £1,400, under the direction of the late Mr. Law, architect, of Northampton, when the bells were re-hung, the western gallery removed, the interior re-floored and partly re-seated, new choir stalls placed in the chancel, two stained windows inserted at the west end, and other works carried out: on the south side of the churchyard is a stone quaintly inscribed to "Bachus," an African, who died in 1762. The register of baptisms dates from 1562; marriages and burials, 1610. The living is a rectory and vicarage, tithe rent-charge £676, gross yearly value £732, including 28 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Charles Hill, of Culworth rectory, and held since 1854 by the Rev. Charles Hill M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge: the rectory house, a building of stone, was erected by the present rector in 1854 and stands in grounds of about 5 acres. Here are chapels for Baptists and Moravians. The charity estate consists of 34 acres of land situated in Wapenhay parish, the income of which, amounting to £60 a year, is expended in apprenticing poor children and in Gibbs Samuel

DALLINGTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Nobottle Grove, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery and arch-deaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 1½ bread and coals which are distributed to the poor; the fund now consist of £500 New Three per Cent. Consols, arising from benefactions by Samuel Tryst esq, who died July 9th, 1633; Sir Nathan Wright bart.; John Timcocks, yeoman, who died Jan. 6th, 1699; Dorothy D'Anvers, spinster, who died August 29th, 1710, and Sir John D'Anvers bart. was invested, July 24th, 1713. The white paving-stone found here was formerly used alternately with the black stone of Byfield for paving floors in imitation of black and white marble. Culworth Castle, built in the reign of Stephen, stood on Berry Close Hill, and some of the earthworks still remain on the north side of the churchyard. In 914 the Danes and Saxons fought a battle near here at Danesmoor; in 1469 an engagement took place at Edgecote, near here, between the troops of Edward IV. and a body of Lancastrians, in which the former was defeated; the Earl of Pembroke, Lord Rivers and his son, Sir Richard Widvill, being taken prisoners, were carried to Northampton and there beheaded; in 1644 Charles I. with an army of 10,000 men entered this village on his way to Banbury and slept at the Manor house. The manor was in possession of the Coleworths from 1180 to 1438; it was then sold to a descendant of Roland D'Anvers, who came over with William the Conqueror. The parish was enclosed in 1609. A weekly market was granted in 1264 to Richard de Coleworth and an annual fair; these have long been discontinued; on the village-green the steps and base of a cross still remain. General Charles Crutchley, of Sunninghill park, Ascot, is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are N. H. E. Provitt esq. the lord of the manor, Messrs. John Sabin and Mrs. Charles Hill, Richard Aubrey Cartwright esq. D.L., J.P. of Edgecote house, Banbury, and George Berner esq. The soil varies from a light sand with a substratum of limestone to a loam and clayey loam. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans, but the greater portion of the land is in pasture. The area is 2,346 acres; rateable value, £4,150 6s. 11d.; the population in 1881 was 465.

miles north-west from Northampton, on the road to Rugby. The church of St. Michael is an ancient edifice of stone in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel with north chapel, cl. restoried nave, aisles, south porch and a low embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock; it was restored and re-seated with open oak benches in 1830, from designs by Messrs. E. W. Law and Son, architects, of Northampton: in 1833 the chancel was thoroughly restored at the sole expense of Earl Spencer K.G. from designs by Mr. Edmund Law, when a new reredos of inlaid marble was erected, and an organ, the gift of Mrs. H. B. Whitworth, of Dallington hall, introduced: there are several inscribed floor stones to the Raynsford family, dating from 1670; a marble monument to Sir Richard Raynsford, dated 1605, and two mural monuments of marble to Joseph Jekyll esq. 1752, and his wife Lady Ann Jekyll, second daughter of George, Earl of Halifax; she died in 1766. The register dates from the year 1577. The living is a discharged vicarage, tithe rent-charge £21, net yearly value £390, including 60 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Earl Spencer K.G. and held since 1874 by the Rev. Thomas Calvert Beasley M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. A cemetery of two acres was formed in 1878, and is under the control of a burial board of 5 members. There are four almshouses for four poor persons, erected and endowed by Sir Richard Raynsford kt. with an income of about £40

DAVENTRY is a market, union and corporate town, head of a county court district and polling place for the Southern division of the county, in the hundred of Fawsley, rural deanery of Daventry, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough; and situated in a gentle hollow in an elevated hilly district on the road from Northampton to Rugby. The Weedon station on the London and North Western railway (distant 6½ miles from London, 42½ from Birmingham) is about 4 miles east, Northampton 12 east, Towcester 12 south, Lutterworth 16½, Coventry 19 and London 71½. The Grand Junction canal is 2 miles from the town. The corporation of the town consists of a mayor, four aldermen and twelve councillors, who also act as the Urban Sanitary Authority; the first charter was granted by King John; the common seal bears date 1553 and exhibits the device of a Dane and a tree, from which the ancient name of Daintree is traditionally derived. The church of the Holy Cross, the foundation stone of which was laid on the 8th of April, 1752, occupies the site of an older structure, and is a building in the Classic style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a western tower with octagonal spire containing 8 bells and a clock with chimes: the stained east window was presented by the Watson family: the nave is divided from the aisles by lofty columns of the Doric order, and there are galleries round three sides; in 1874 the church was re-seated and in 1884 the chancel and body of the church were renovated and the whole interior re-decorated, at a cost of about £300; the church stands in an extensive burial ground. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £260 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1867 by the Rev. John Martyn Collins M.A. late student of Christ Church, Oxford, and rural dean of Daventry, and canon of Peterborough. St. James's chapel of ease in connection with this church was built in the year 1840 by voluntary subscription. The Catholic chapel was erected in 1882 and is dedicated to St. Mark. The Wesleyan chapel, built with school-rooms and dwellings for the resident ministers attached, in 1824, will hold 500 persons. The Congregational chapel, erected in 1722, will seat 600. The Free Latin Grammar School was founded in 1600 by William Parker, a native of this town and citizen draper of London. William Sawbridge, in 1740, left a sum of money to purchase a house for the head master. The master's hostel forms a large block of buildings, capable of holding a large number of boarders, and consists of a study for the senior boys, dining hall, class rooms, studies, the Parker library, Sawbridge gymnasium, bath room, lavatory, carpenter's shop and spacious dormitories: there is also a large play-ground attached to the hostel. In 1749, John Farrer yearly. Joseph Jekyll Rye left the sum of £450, reduced after payment of legacy duty to £405, which sum has been invested in government securities, and the interest, £12 yearly, is distributed weekly to the four inhabitants of Sir Richard Raynsford's almshouses. A floral and horticultural society was revived here in 1833. Dallington hall, the residence of Mrs. Whitworth, is a plain building of stone adjoining the church. Earl Spencer K.G. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is marl and clay; subsoil, stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,520 acres; rateable value, £9,195; the population, inclusive of the district of St. James, in 1881 was 1,610.

ST. JAMES' END is partly in this parish and partly in that of Duston; the names are given under Northampton.

Parish Clerk, James Trusler.

POST OFFICE.—Mrs. Croft, receiver. Letters through Northampton arrive at 5 a.m.; dispatched at 7.15 p.m.

of Daventry, left a sum of money in the hands of trustees to purchase land and to pay the rents thereof to the master of the Grammar School at Daventry if he should be in holy orders, subject to his performing certain parochial clerical duties. The Moot Hall formerly stood in the Market place, but was pulled down in 1806 and the present building, then a private dwelling, was purchased, in which the borough sessions are held every Monday. The Boddington estate of 73 acres produces £128 6s. for the poor; there are besides several charities of £80 yearly value for distribution in money and kind. Daventry was once a noted town for the manufacture of whips, but this trade is almost extinct. The manufacture of boots and shoes is now actively carried on and forms the staple trade of the town, giving employment to about 600 hands. A market is held every Wednesday and a fair for the sale of cattle the second Tuesday in every month and on the 27th of October. The fairs are held on the second Tuesday in April and October for the sale of cheese and cattle, and in case the 27th of October should fall on a Sunday it is then held on the following day. The Cluniac priory of St. Augustine, adjoining the church and translated from Preston Capes, was founded in 1090 by Hugh de Leicester, and had revenues valued at its dissolution at £236; the remains of the monastic buildings were pulled down in 1822. The principal object of antiquarian interest is the Borough Hill, the site of an extensive Roman or perhaps British encampment; it was formerly surrounded by a ditch and rampart of more than two miles in circumference, enclosing a superficial area of 150 acres; its elevation being considerable, extensive and picturesque views are obtained from its summit, and hence may be seen Barden Hill, in Charnwood Forest, distant 40 miles, the spire of Hanslope church, Bucks, Northamptonshire, 20 miles, and the twin spires of Trinity and St. Michael's, Coventry; the old Roman Watling Street passes 1½ miles from the north-eastern extremity of the encampment. The principal landowners are Wm. Molyneux Rose esq. of Walton Heath, Rugby, Richard Trevor Clarke esq. J.P., D.L. of Welton place, who is lord of the manor, C. C. Watkins esq. Col. Sir R. J. Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone park, and the Dean and Chapter of Christ Church, Oxford. The soil is principally a brownish loam on a substratum of porous rock or gravel, the greater portion being meadow and pasture land. The area extends over 3,432 acres, including the hamlet of DRAYTON, half a mile west; rateable value, £13,052; the population in 1881 was 3,859, including 135 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

DEENE is a parish 5 miles east from Gretton station, on the Midland railway, and 7 west-north-west from Oundle, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union and county court district of Oundle, rural deanery of Oundle (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough: the Willow brook flows through the parish. The church of St. Peter is a building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch, and an embattled western tower with pinnacles and spire and containing 5 bells; it was thoroughly restored in 1866 by the Countess of Cardigan, at a cost of over £7,000, in memory of James Thomas, 7th Earl of Cardigan K.C.B. lieutenant-governor and col. 11th Hussars, and celebrated as the leader of the famous Balaklava charge; he died 27th March, 1868, and there is a handsome monument to him in the church; there is also an altar-tomb with effigies of Sir Robert Brudenell Kt. Chief Justice of Common Pleas, ob. 1531; also his first wife, Margaret (Entwistle), and his second wife; in the Brudenell chapel is an altar dedicated to the Sacred Heart and dated 1635. The register dates from the year 1683. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge, £57; net yearly value £350 with residence, in the gift of the Countess of Cardigan and held since 1872 by the Rev. Edward Thomas Sylvester, domestic chaplain to the Countess of Cardigan. Here was anciently a Benedictine priory, a cell to the Abbey of Westminster, but dissolved in the time of William I. Deene Park, the seat of the Countess of Cardigan, who is lady of the manor and principal landowner, consists of about 600 acres, well-wooded and stocked with deer; the fish ponds are very extensive: the mansion is an irregular structure of stone with embattled turrets and contains some excellent family portraits. The soil is clayey; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are hay, wheat, barley and beans. The area of Deene is 1,589a. 1r. 25p.; rateable value £2,570; of Deenethorpe, 1,430a. 2r. 9p.; rateable value £1,676; the population in 1881 with Deenethorpe was 428.

DEENTHORPE, three-quarters of a mile south-east, is a hamlet in this parish near the road from Kettering to Stamford; population in 1881 was 204.

DEENOR is a parish and small village situated on the river Nene, a mile and a quarter south from Thrapston, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Huxloe, Thrapston union and county court district, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient edifice of stone, chiefly in the Early English style, and consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with spire containing clock and 6 light bells: the clerestory and some windows are of later date than the rest of the church: the chancel retains some good stalls and a piscina: the font is a plain octagon, on a square base: it was re-seated and thoroughly restored in 1864 at a cost of about £1,600, chiefly raised by a voluntary rate. The register dates from the year 1597. The living is a vicarage united to that of Ringstead, tithe rent-charge, £145; joint net yearly value £300, in the gift of, and held since 1886 by the Rev. Edward Armitage Sandford

M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. The vicarage house, pleasantly situated on the banks of the Nene, was built in 1863. There is a Wesleyan chapel. The trustees of the late Thomas Burton esq. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Thomas Burton esq. and Thomas Nichols esq. of Raunds. The soil is a stiff clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 1,940 acres; rateable value £2,780; the population in 1881 was 498.

Parish Clerk, Samuel Warren.

Letters through Thrapston arrive at 7.15 a.m. & 1.30 p.m.; dispatched at 10.45 a.m. & 5.40 p.m. week days only. Thrapston is the nearest money order & telegraph office.

Infants' School, built in 1872 for 60 children; average attendance 40, & supported by voluntary contributions & government grant; Miss Caroline Page, mistress. The elder children attend the Ringstead school.

DESBOROUGH is a parish, village and station on the Midland main line of railway, 6 miles north-west from Kettering, 18 north from Northampton and 81 from London, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Rothwell, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Rothwell (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, situated on the road from Kettering to Market Harborough. The church of St. Giles is a cruciform building of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, transepts, north porch and a western tower with pinnacles and a handsome octagonal spire, containing a clock and 5 bells: there are several ancient monuments to the Poulton family, members of which, for fourteen generations, held the lordship of the manor; the church is gradually being restored as funds will admit, portions have been re-roofed, the gallery has been removed, a lectern, prayer desk and pulpit added, and the church re-floored and re-seated at a cost of about £400: there is a stained window on the south side. The register dates from the year 1571, but there is a vacancy in the register of baptisms and burials from 1679 to 1686, and of marriages from 1681 to 1695. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value, from glebe, £110, with residence, in the gift of W. C. Clarke-Thornhill esq. and held since 1885 by the Rev. Henry Francis Johnston M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There are Methodist, Baptist and Congregational chapels. In 1832-3 a public hall was erected close to the railway station to hold about 300 persons, Mark Ginns, manager. The charities include one of £238, left in 1834 by the late Mrs. Mary Riggs, of Desborough, the interest to be given in prizes and rewards to the children of the Sunday school. Sewell's and East's charities are of £2 annual value. The manufacture of shoes and the raising of iron ore gives em-

GREAT DODDINGTON is a village and parish pleasantly situated on the northern ridge of the fertile valley of the Nene, which it overlooks; the river Nene divides a part of this parish from that of Wollaston; the Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway passes through a portion of this parish close to the Nene, and the Wellingborough station on that line is about 1½ miles north-east from the village, which is 2½ miles south from Wellingborough town, and 8 north-east from Northampton, in the Northern division in the county, hundred of Hamfordshire, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell first, archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Luke, situated on high ground, is an interesting edifice of stone in the Norman and later styles, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower of Norman date, with pinnacles, and containing 5 bells: the chancel retains four ancient oak stalls, a piscina and two sedilia; there is also a piscina at the east end of the south aisle: in 1871 the church was renovated and restored at a cost of £1,300; on removing the plaster from the south side of the chancel arch a mural painting of the Crucifixion was discovered; in the church is a book of the Paraphrase of Erasmus (the three are chained and locked with their original fastenings) in black letter; in the pavement in the nave is an inscribed brass to "William de Patteshull," 1359: the hour-glass standstill remains; there are sittings for 320 persons. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1560; marriages, 1690. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £135, derived solely from 105 acres of glebe land, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1883 by the Rev. Edward Warwick Jelinger Symons M.A. of University College, Durham. There are Primitive Methodist and Congregational chapels here. The poor's land produces about £6 yearly, which is distributed in coal. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in agriculture, boot and shoe making for the Wellingborough and Northampton manufacturers, and to some extent in lace making. The Marquis of Northampton is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is red loam; subsoil, ironstone. The crops are the usual cereals; there is much pasture land. The area is 1,537 acres; rateable value, £3,141; the population in 1881 was 592.

Parish Clerk, Charles Chapman.

DODFORD is a village and parish on the north side of and adjacent to the high road between Weedon and Daventry, 3½ miles south-east from Daventry, 14 north-west from Weedon station and 9 west from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Fawsley, union and county court district of Daventry, rural deanery of Weedon, archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Mary is an edifice of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch and a western tower containing 6 bells: within the church are some ancient brasses, one of which commemorates Bridget, second wife of John Wyrley esq. of Dodford, who died in 1637; there is another with effigies of a knight in plate armour and a lady in wimple and long loose robe, to William Wyldes esq. 1422, and Cecilia, his wife; a third brass with effigies of a knight in plate armour, and a lady in wired head dress, and full-sleeved gown is inscribed to John Cressy esq. 1414, and Christina (Wyldes) his wife, 1400, daughter of the preceding William and Cecilia Wyldes: the richly ornamented font is circular and of Norman date: in the church, on a low and plain altar-tomb, formed of five slabs of Purbeck marble, is an effigy of the same material, representing a knight in that rare style of armour known as "banded mail," covered with a surcoat, and bearing a shield with the arms of Keynes; the figure is believed to commemorate the last Sir Robert de Keynes, who died 1395; under an arch in the north wall lies the dismembered wooden effigy of Hawise, mother of the last Sir Robert de Keynes, who was living in 1329; immediately in front of this monument is an altar-tomb, with free-stone effigy of her great grand-daughter, Wentiliana de Keynes, lady of the manor of Dodford, and the last of this family, who died unmarried in 1376; upon a high tomb of alabaster, panelled and enriched with figures of angels holding shields, is the effigy of a knight in plate armour, with collar of SS. and inscription to Sir John Cressy, 1444: the chancel was rebuilt in 1850. The register dates from the year 1581. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £211, including 132 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Thomas William Thornton esq. of Brockhall, and held since 1859 by the Rev. Henry John Thompson M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford, rural dean. Joseph Cook, of Dodford, who died A.D. 1780, bequeathed £100, the yearly interest to be applied in apprenticing poor children of this parish, and £500, the yearly interest to be applied in paying the master of the parish school; Thomas Reeve Thornton of Brockhall esq. A.D. 1842, added by gift the sum of £300 to the aforesaid charities, viz. to the apprentice fund £50 and to the school fund £250, to be disposed of and managed in the same manner as the original bequests; Freeman and King's charity of £3 a year, left in 1842, by Jane Freeman, of Coventry and Frances King, of Coventry, her niece, is for the poor. The London and North Western railway, the Grand Junction canal and the Old Roman Watling Street run nearly parallel in the vicinity. A spring, rising near Borough Hill, passes through the parish, flowing by the side of the road through the village, and forms a tributary to the Nene. Sir Rainald Knightley bart. M.P., J.P., D.L. of Fawsley Park, who is lord of the manor and Thomas William Thornton esq. J.P. of Brockhall, Weedon, are the principal landowners. A very small portion of the land is arable and the remainder rich pasture land. The soil is a deep loam, with superincumbent gravel and marlstone and a substratum of a dark blue hard stone. The area is 1,180 acres; rateable value, £4,710; the population in 1881 was 212.

Parish Clerk, Richard Furniss.

DRAUGHTON is a parish and village, 3 miles north from the Lamport station, 6½ west from Kettering and 10 north from Northampton, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Rothwell (third portion), union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Rothwell, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Catherine is a building of stone in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, nave, clerestoried aisles, south porch, with a low embattled western tower containing 4 bells and a clock and with pinnacles. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £378 with residence, in the gift of Robert Loder esq. M.P., J.P. and held since 1878 by the Rev. Henry Rousby, of St. Boes. Here is a Congregational chapel. Chapman's charity, yearly value £1 12s. 6d. is distributed in bread on the first Sunday after November 25th; Holdich's, of £1 12s. 6d. is distributed in fuel to widows of this parish. A spring, called

"Black Well Spring," rises in this parish and forms a rivulet which separates the parishes of Draughton and Maidwell and flows into the river Nene. Robert Loder esq. M.P., J.P. of Whittlebury, Towcester, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is red loam; subsoil, clay and sand. The chief crops are wheat and barley; there is much pasture land in this parish. The area is 1,477 acres; rateable value, £2,017; the population in 1881 was 161.

DUSTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Nobottle Grove, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, one mile and three quarters west-by-north from Northampton; the parish is bounded on the south-east and north-east by branches of the river Nene. The church of St. Luke is a plain but ancient structure in the Early English and Late Decorated styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled central tower surmounted by pinnacles, containing 3 bells: the chancel, which retains a piscina, was restored in 1883; the stained east window is a memorial to Henry Billington Whitworth esq. who died 20th September, 1877, and was erected by his widow: the stained west window was given by the present vicar. The register dates from the year 1692. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £500 with residence, in the gift of Earl Cowper K.G. and held since 1863 by the Rev. Peake Hanton, of St. Bees. There is a joint chapel for Baptists and Congregationalists. The charities are of the annual value of £40, principally derived from the poor's allotment of 12 acres, and are distributed in coals to the poor. Here are the remains of an abbey of Black Canons, founded about 1112 by William Peverel, natural son of William the Conqueror, and dedicated to St. James, the revenue of which at the Dissolution amounted to £175 8s. 2d. A rich vein of ironstone runs through the parish, which is now being worked by the Staveley Coal and Iron Co. Earl Cowper K.G. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is sandy loam; subsoil, iron and lime stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,760 acres; rateable value, £11,235; and the population in 1881 was 2,497.

St. James' End is partly in this parish and partly in that of Dallington; being included in the Harlington local board district, the names are given under Northampton.

EARLS BARTON is a parish and large village, pleasantly situated on the northern ridge of the fertile valley of the Nene, which flows through the parish on the north side, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Hamfordshire, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 6½ miles east-north-east from Northampton, 3½ south-west from Wellingborough, and 1½ north from the Castle Ashby and Earls Barton station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway. The church of All Saints, situated on high ground, is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel with organ chamber and vestry on the north side, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower, containing a clock and 6 bells; the east end of chancel, which retains a piscina and sedilia, is Early English; the western portion of it has a Norman arcade and the inner doorway of the porch is also of this date; the aisles are decorated; and there is a piscina at the east end of south aisle: the most remarkable and interesting portion of the church is the reputed Saxon tower, a lofty structure of four stages, without buttresses, and long and short work at the angles; each face of the tower is ornamented externally with flat vertical strips of stone projecting slightly from the surface; the string course of the lower storey is surmounted by a kind of scalloped arcading and above that of the second storey runs ribbed work disposed in diamonds; the belfry storey has open windows each with six balusters; the embattled parapet is of Perpendicular date: the whole of the fabric has been restored at intervals since 1871, at a cost of £4,253, of which £1,400 was raised by subscription, and upwards of £2,700 contributed by the patron, at whose expense the north aisle was restored in 1877: in the chancel are three stained windows, one at the east end by E. Thornton esq. one on the north side to the memory of William Whitworth esq. and one of two lights on the south side inserted by the late vicar in 1874: in the nave is an ancient brass with effigies of a man and woman, said to represent John Muscote, one of the prothonotaries of the King's Bench, 1512, and his wife: one evangelistic symbol remains, and some figures of children, are lost: there are several mural tablets, one of which, to William Farrow, is dated 1735. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £253, including 83 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Edward Thornton esq. and held since 1833 by the Rev. Robert Russell Cobbold M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge. There are Wesleyan, Particular Baptist and Calvinistic Baptist chapels here. A sum of about £30 a year, arising from a field of 9 acres and 3 rods, called Clock Close, and originally intended to defray the expense of cleaning and repairing the clock and dials, is now generally made to cover all church expenses and repairs and to pay the parish clerk. There are charities as follows, viz.—Whitworth's, consisting of sixteen half-crowns and seven guineas, for distribution on St. Thomas' day; the Rev. William Farrow's, ten shillings for the poor and two coats on St. Thomas' day; and the Rev. H. Medburn's of ten shillings for poor widows. On the north side of the church is a Roman tumulus or barrow, from which the parish is supposed to take its name of Barton: it was called Earls Barton from the Earls of Huntingdon, who were anciently lords of the fee. The manufacture of boots and shoes is carried on here to a considerable extent, and affords employment to a large number of the inhabitants. There is no lord of the manor. The principal landowners are William Chetwode Whitworth esq. Edward Thornton esq. J. W. Sharman, Sir Henry Morgan Vane kt. Thomas Mercer, Charles William Hamilton Sotheby J.P. of Ecton, Northampton, John Wollston, James Whitworth and John Ward esqs. and the Rev. John Hall. The soil is red loam; subsoil, ironstone and limestone. The chief crops are cereals. The area is about 2,199 acres; rateable value £7,346; the population in 1881 was 2,337.

Parish Clerk, William Austin.

This parish is in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Cleley, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Preston second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, about one mile and a quarter north-east from Towcester station. There is no village of Easton; the population is chiefly at the hamlet of Hulcote. The church of St. Mary is an edifice of stone in the Norman style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 6 bells and a clock; the chancel retains a piscina: the east window and others are stained: there are also some very fine monuments to the Fernor family, including an altar tomb with highly finished effigies in brass of a man in plate armour, with apron of chain mail, and his wife; at the head and foot are shields of arms, and around three sides an inscription to "Richard Fernor esq. Marchant of the Staple of Calays," 1552, and Anne (Brownie), his wife: on the north side of the chancel, placed in front of a wide monument, is an altar tomb, with recumbent effigies, to Sir George Fernor kut. 1613, and Mary (Curson), his wife, 1628; the figure of the knight is in plate armour, and that of his wife in ruff, hood and gown; in the centre of the monument, beneath an arch, supported by Corinthian columns, is a quartered achievement of arms, supported by small reclining figures of Justice and Truth, with the motto

"Hora e Sempre": on the ends and front of the tomb are the effigies of 15 children, with shields of arms; the whole is alabaster in very fine preservation: there is also a mural monument of white marble with figures of a man and woman kneeling at a desk, and an inscription to Sir John Fernor K.B. 1571, and Maud (Vaux), his wife, 1599: on the south wall is a large and ponderous monument of black and white marble to Sir Hutton Fernor kt. 1640; his second wife Anna (Cockaine) and their children; there are full-sized erect effigies of both, the knight being in armour, and the monument also includes several busts: another fine monument of statuary marble, by Chantry, with a full-sized group of children weeping over medallion portraits of their parents, is inscribed to George, Earl Pomfret and Baron Lempster, 1785, and Anna Maria, his Countess, 1787: on the north side is a marble monument by Baily, to George, 3rd Earl Pomfret, 1830, with a full-sized sitting effigy in alto-relievo; both these memorials display the arms, coronet, crest and supporters of the family. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £250, in the gift of Sir T. G. Fernor-Hesketh bart. and held since 1861 by the Rev. Robert Cordington Collins lic. th. of University College, Durham. The Hulcote charity, an estate of 100 acres, now (1885) producing £140 yearly, is for the charity schools and the poor. There is a small charity of 20s. a year, left in the year 1646 by Mrs. Jane Leeson, of Athorpe, which also given to the poor. Easton Newton House, the seat of Sir Thomas George Fermor-Hesketh baron, is a palatial building of stone, erected by William, Lord Leinster, partly from a design by Sir Christopher Wren and partly from one by Nicholas Hawksmoor; it stands on high ground in the centre of an extensive, well-wooded and highly picturesque park bounded by the river Tove. Sir Thomas G. Fermor-Hesketh baron, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is strong loamy soil; subsoil, ironstone and limestone. The area is about 1,708 acres; rateable value, £2,810; the population in 1881 was 122.

EYDON is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Chipping Warden, Brackley union and county court district, rural deanery of Brackley first, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 2½ miles north-by-east from Moreton Pinkney and 3 north-north-by-east from Byfield station on the East and West Junction railway, 10 miles south-by-west from Daventry, 10 north-west from Towcester and 10 north from Brackley, bounded on the west by the river Cherwell. The church of St. Nicholas is a building of stone, in mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles containing 5 bells: in 1865 the church was thoroughly restored and enlarged by the addition of south aisle and porch, built, as a brass plate on the wall records, "To the glory of God and in memory of the Rev. C. A. F. Annesley;" since the restoration an excellent organ has been purchased by subscription and placed in the chapel adjoining the vestry at the east end of the north aisle; the stained east window is a memorial to Ellen Empson and Hugh Richard Empson, and was erected by the rector in the year 1865; the other windows of the chancel are also stained and likewise two of those in the north aisle, and at the east end of the south aisle is a stained window recently erected as a memorial to the late Rev. A. J. Empson, at the cost of some of the neighbouring clergy, the monuments to the Valentin family being then removed to the south wall: the font is ancient and of Norman design. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £14, gross yearly value £453, including glebe with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1876 by the Rev. The church of St. Denis is a plain and low building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave and aisles and a bell-cote on the western gable containing 2 bells; it contains a fine old monument to Sir Augustine Nicolls kt. who formerly resided here; he died August 3rd, 1616, whilst sitting as justice of the assizes at Kendal, where he was buried. The register dates from the year 1570. The living is a rectory, annexed to that of Lamport, tithes rent-charge here £236, joint gross yearly value Bonser Joseph, brick & tile maker | Hales Thomas Kendall, farmer, Faxton | Whiteman Fairey, Fox Hall P.R. & Hales Henry, farmer, Shortwood house | lodge

FINEDON is a large and compact village and parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Huxloe, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 3 miles north-east from Wellingborough, ½ north-west from Higham Ferrers and 67 from London. The Midland railway has a station 1½ miles north-west from the village, called Finedon station, though it is locally in Isham. The parish is bounded on the west by the river Ise. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel with vestry on the north, nave of four bays with clerestory, aisles, transepts, south porch and a lofty embattled western tower, with octagonal spire, relieved by two tiers of spire lights, and containing a clock an 6 bells; the whole church is embattled; the most striking feature of the interior is the singular straining arch between the last piers of the nave eastward, inserted to support the clerestory; it may be described as two reverted flat arches, the lowermost resting on the nave piers; the space between is pierced with quatrefoils, and the concave upper arch finished with battlements; portions of the chancel screen remain; the roof of the porch is groined, with a flowered boss at the intersection of the groining ribs; over the porch is a room containing a library of about 1,000 volumes, founded in 1788 by Sir John English Dolben bart.; the chancel roof is Perpendicular; the ancient font consists of a cubical basin, with the angles sloped off, and has some mutilated figures on either side; in the south wall of the vestry is a piscina; on the south side of the chancel are four very rich sedilia with groined canopies; the church was restored in 1858, at a cost of £1,600, and in 1876 a clock was placed in the tower, at a cost of £155; there is a memorial window to the late vicar; the benches appear to be of the late Perpendicular period; the church is seated to hold 850 persons. The register dates from the year 1539. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £1,010 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1848 by the Rev. George Woodfield Paul M.A. formerly fellow of Magdalen College, Oxford. In the village is a Friends' Meeting house, and there are also Congregational, Wesleyan and Wesleyan Reform Union chapels. The charities for distribution amount to £60 yearly, derived principally from land and cottages. The manufacture of boots and shoes is carried on here to a considerable extent and affords employment to a large number of hands. The inhabitants are also engaged in agriculture. In 1867 Gas Works were erected here by a company at a cost of £2,000. The Temperance Hall, built in 1868, at a cost of above £800, is an edifice of native stone with Bath stone dressings; it will seat 400, and is used for temperance and other public meetings and musical entertainments. Finedon Hall, the seat of Mrs. Mackworth-Dolben, is a noble Elizabethan mansion of native stone, charmingly situated amid undulating park-like grounds at the south end of the village; the approach is by a carriage drive from the high road through an avenue of stately elms about half a mile long, terminating at the southern entrance to the mansion on the western side are ornamental grounds of nearly ten acres, laid out with great care and admirable taste; the chief feature is a pinetum of considerable extent containing a valuable collection of coniferous trees and shrubs from every part of the world; the estate also comprises a magnificent triple avenue of limes a quarter of a mile in length, enclosed by an ancient holly hedge; a spacious sheet of water, the resort of wild fowl in the winter season, and a petrifying spring; there is also a lofty round tower, and in a field near the mansion is a massive building in the Norman style erected by the late William H. I. Mackworth Dolben J.P. in commemoration of a son who was lost at sea, September, 1873. At the entrance of the village, on the road from Thrapston, stands an ancient low obelisk. Opposite the end of the central and principal street of the village is a pump, over which is an arch bearing the word "Welcome," carved on a stone scroll, and underneath is a quaint inscription. Mrs. Mackworth-Dolben, who is lady of the manor, the vicar, Walter Neilson esq. the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, Francis Brampton Sharp esq. and the Viscountess Hood, are the principal landowners. The soil is clay, iron and limestone; subsoil, ironstone. The chief crops are barley, wheat and pasture land. The area is 3,650 acres; rateable value, £12,724; the population in 1881 was 2,404.

FOTHERINGHAY is a parish situated in a beautiful and fertile country on the north bank of the river Nene which, winding to the eastward, separates it from Huntingdonshire; it is 4 miles north from Oundle and 2 south from Nassington station on the Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway, which passes through the parish; in the Northern division of the county, Willybrook hundred, Oundle union and county court district, and in the rural deanery of Oundle (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Mary the Virgin and All Saints is an edifice of stone, in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch and a western tower of two stories, the upper stage being octagonal and embattled, and containing 5 bells; the font is octagonal and plain, but of large size, and finely panelled; and in the south aisle is a piscina: there is no chancel, the arch formerly leading to it being now built up; there is an ancient stone pulpit: within the communion rails are monuments to Edward, duke of York, who died on the field of Agincourt, October 25, 1415, and Richard, duke of York, killed in the battle of Wakefield, December 31, 1460, as well as to Cicely, wife of Richard, who died in 1495; these memorials were erected by Queen Elizabeth. The register dates from the year 1557. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £200, net £166, including 93 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Col. Sir Robert J. Loyd-Lindsay M.P., V.C., K.C.B. and held since 1881 by the Rev. John Henry Lloyd. The Earl of Newport's rent-charge of £30 and £44, the interest of the poor's fund of £1,463 Consols, is for distribution. A fair is held annually on the third Monday after July 5th. In the early ages Fotheringhay became a place of considerable consequence from its castle, which stood at the eastern extremity of the town, and was

FURTHO is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Cleley, union of Potterspury, Towcester county court district, rural deanery of Preston second, 2 miles north-north-west from Stony Stratford and 6 south-east from Towcester, and consists of one farm-house and two cottages. A small portion of the hamlet of Old Stratford is in this parish. The church of St. Bartholomew is a building of stone, consisting of chancel and nave and an embattled western tower containing 1 bell: the chancel retains a piscina; the church appears to have been built in 1620, but the chancel is older; it was thoroughly restored in 1870 at a cost of £100, defrayed by the trustees of Arnold's charity. The register dates from 1695. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £31, gross yearly value £200, including 99 acres of glebe, in the gift of the Principal and Fellows of Jesus College, Oxford, and held since 1880 by the Rev. John Chalmers M.A. who resides at Old Stratford.

GAYTON is a village and parish $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles south-west from Northampton, $4\frac{1}{2}$ north-east from Towcester and one mile and a half west from the Blisworth station, in the Southern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Brackley second, archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The Grand Junction canal and the London and North Western railway and Northampton and Banbury Junction railway pass through the parish. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with pinnacles containing 6 bells and a clock: in the church is an altar tomb of alabaster to Francis Tanfield esq. 1558, and Bridget his wife, 1583, with incised effigies of himself, wife and eighteen children, and a mutilated inscription; he was one of those who signed the Act of Uniformity, passed in the first year of Queen Elizabeth; under an arch, in the wall separating the chancel and chapel, is the wooden effigy of a knight in the military costume of the thirteenth century, placed on an altar tomb, the sides of which are panelled and canopied, and representing Sir Philip de Gayton kt. ob. 1316; the whole was judiciously restored some years since, under the direction of the late Dr. Butler, dean of Peterborough; under a pointed arch with bold mouldings is the recumbent effigy in freestone of a female habited in a long loose gown and mantle and representing Scholastica de Gayton, daughter-in-law of the above-named Philip; she was living in 1284; the effigy is believed to have been carved by William de Ireland, the sculptor of the figures on the Eleanor cross at Hardingstone: there is also in the church a diminutive freestone effigy of a child, wearing a veil and gown, discovered in 1830 built into the exterior east wall of the chapel; on the plinth of the stone on which it rests is a mutilated inscription, apparently indicating the figure to represent Mabilia, daughter of Thomas de Murdak, c. 1310: two brass inscriptions remain to Mary, daughter of John Breton, of Norton, near Daventry, 1704; and to William Houghton, 1700; in the south wall of the chancel in a piscina in excellent preservation and one in the south aisle: many of the windows are stained or painted, and display the armorial bearings of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, Lord Vaux, of Harrowden, the Rev. J. C.

W. Ellis, Roger Eykyn esq. and of the late George Butler n.d. who was rector of the parish nearly thirty-nine years: the altar-piece is of oak, richly carved; there are also six stalls with figures carved upon the elbows and seats: the church was restored in 1883 under the direction of Mr. Holden, architect, of Northampton, at a cost of £3,000, when an organ chamber was erected, the chancel rebuilt; during the restoration a curious stone cross was discovered, which is now in the north chapel. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £500, net yearly value £300, including 92 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Master and Fellows of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge, and held since 1876 by the Rev. John Clough Williams Ellis M.A. formerly fellow and tutor of that college. Here is a Wesleyan chapel. The charities consist of the rental of 15 acres of land for repairing the church, the income of which is now about £70 yearly, together with accumulation from ironstone of £150 yearly, and the rent of 25 acres, which is distributed to the poor. Gayton House, the seat of Roger Eykyn esq. J.P. is a mansion of stone, erected by the Rev. Dr. Butler, standing in well-planted grounds of about six acres; it is situated on an eminence and commands very extensive and picturesque views of the surrounding country. Sir Henry James Hawley bart. of Noove Lea, Brighton, is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The parish is on a rising ground of colite, with clay in the valley and hollows; a large quantity of iron ore is produced both here and in the adjoining parish of Blisworth. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley, peas &c. The area is 1,711 acres; rateable value, £8,090; the population in 1881 was 575.

GEDDINGTON is a village and parish with a station on the Kettering and Oakham (Midland) railway, 3 miles north-east from Kettering, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Weldon (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, situate on the road from Kettering to Stamford: the river Ise flows through the parish. The church of St. Mary Magdalene is an ancient building in the Transition, Norman and Later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower with octagonal spire containing 5 bells; there is some screen work of the Decorated period, with framed panelling below, and open tracery in the upper part, which is finished with embattled cresting: it may date from about 1360: in the south aisle is a monument, with shields of arms, to the Lockwood family: some members of the Treesham family were interred here in 1620: several of the windows are stained. The register dates from the year 1680. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £160 with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and held since 1861 by the Rev. Thomas Charles Brand Cornwell M.A. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. Here is a Union chapel. Sir R. Dallington left 30 acres of land, now producing £45 yearly, for the poor. Lee's charity, of £24 yearly, is also for distribution. In the centre of the village stands the well-known Eleanor cross, which is one of the eleven crosses erected by Edward I. in memory of Queen Eleanor wherever her body was rested in its passage from Harby, Notts, where she died, to Westminster: it is a work of the Decorated period, erected A.D. 1294, and is about 40 feet high, adorned throughout with elegant carved work, and bearing the arms of Castile, Leon and Ponthieu, which in right of the queen were annexed to England; at the top, under pyramidal canopies, richly crocketed, and divided by pinnacles, are three figures representing queens in lamentation. Similar crosses were erected at Lincoln, Grantham, Stamford, Hardingstone (generally known as Queen's cross, Northampton), Stony Stratford, Woburn, Dunstable, St. Albans, Waltham, Westcheap and Westminster (called Charing Cross): those at Geddington, Hardingstone and Waltham now alone remain. Priory House is the property of Sir W. De Capell Brooke bart. J.P. of the Elms, Market Harborough, and is now occupied by Mrs. John W. Wetherill. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. who is lord of the manor, and Sir W. De Capell-Brooke bart. J.P. are the principal landowners. The soil is clay and limestone. The chief crops are wheat and barley; there is also much woodland and pasture. The area is 2,221 acres; rateable value, £3,812; the population in 1881 was 862.

(February and) amongst the most necessitous of the poor. There is a charity estate of 21 acres, the rents of which (£50) are divided into three parts and assigned as follows:—one part to be distributed to the industrious poor, another to be expended in the repairs of the church and a third in repairing the highways; there are also six acres of land for repairing the church. Mr. William Lovett, of West Haddon, built six almshouses for six aged couples; there is also a small fund derived from benefactions, amounting to £52, by Jacob Lucas, Edward Barnham and another, called the "Apprenticeship Fund," the interest of which is devoted to apprenticing poor boys belonging to the parish; there are other charities to the amount of £35 yearly for distribution. A cattle market is held here every Friday. Harry Herbert Atterbury esq. who is lord of the manor, Isaac Samuel Lovell esq. Charles Heygate esq. Charles Percival esq. and Thomas Smith esq. are the chief landowners. The soil is mixed, clay, red sand and gravel; subsoil, clay. The land is pasture and arable. The area is 2,900 acres; rateable value, £5,640; the population in 1881 was 882.

HANNINGTON is a small parish and compact village pleasantly situated, 6½ miles north-west from Wellingborough, 8 north-east from Northampton and 5 south-east from Lampfort railway station on the Market Harborough line, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Orillingbury, union of Hrixworth, Northampton county court district, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of SS. Peter and Paul, standing on high ground, is a small building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave of three lofty bays, north porch and a small but lofty embattled tower containing a clock and 2 bells: there are no aisles, but an arcade of three arches divides the nave longitudinally and supports the ridge of the roof, the eastern end of the arcade abutting against the point of the chancel arch: the west end of the church is Early English and the upper stage of the tower Decorated, the rest of the fabric is in the Transitional style from Early English to Decorated: on the south side of the chancel are two sedilia and a piscina; on the north side is a credence table and on either side is a low side window: the church was restored in 1869, at a cost of £1,100,

when the western gallery was removed and the tower arch opened. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £210, including 226 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1866 by the Rev. John Downes M.A. of Christ's College, Cambridge. There is a small chapel here, erected in 1865, and used by Dissenters of various denominations. F. Thornton esq. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner. The soil is red marl and clay; subsoil, shale and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,270 acres; rateable value, £1,552; the population in 1881 was 187.

HARDINGSTONE is a parish and head of a union, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wynter-ley, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles south-south-east from Northampton. The river Nene and a branch of the Grand Junction canal to Northampton pass through the parish and join at Cotton end, where are commodious wharfs and warehouses; the Northampton station of the London and North Western railway is in this parish. The parish is governed by a Local Board of 15 members. The church of St. Edmund is an ancient edifice of stone, portions of which are in the Early English style: it consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches, south chapel and an embattled western tower with pinnacles containing a clock and 5 bells; the chancel retains sedilia: the church was thoroughly restored in 1869, under the direction of Mr.
Palgrave, architect, of London, at a cost of £1,450, towards which the late General Bouvier contributed £1,100, the chancel being also restored entirely at his expense: the work included the removal of the western gallery and the opening of the early tower arch: the whole structure was also new roofed, the floors relaid and the interior re-seated and refitted with oak choir stalls, reading desk, lectern, pulpit and communion table: the stained east window was erected 9th Feb. 1869, by the tenants of J. A. S. Bouvier esq. &c., and other inhabitants of the parish, as a testimony of their esteem and respect: the east window of the north aisle was erected by John Francis Mercer, in 1871, to the memory of his parents: there are other stained windows in the south chapel and in the tower: the font was the gift of the architect, Mr. Palgrave: against the north wall of the chancel is a marble monument, with busts in bas relief by

Michael Rysbrack, to Bartholomew Clarke, 1745: and Mary, his wife, 1768, and to Hitch Younge esq. 1759: there are also here many tablets to the Bouvier family: against the south wall of the chapel is a very narrow altar tomb, with a recumbent effigy in freestone, to Sir Stephen Harvey K.B.
justice of the Common Pleas, 1630: the sides of the tomb bear an inscription, with armorial bearings, and above it is a monumental tablet, adorned with trophies: against the north wall is an ancient and curious marble monument, with effigies disposed in two tiers of Stephen and Anne Harvey, and their three sons: the first tier is divided by two small Corinthian pillars, into three canopied compartments, under the centre one of which is the kneeling effigy of Stephen Harvey esq. merchant, 1636: under the eastern arch is the kneeling effigy of William Harvey esq. ob.
1633, and under the western arch is the similar effigy of Sir Francis Harvey kt. Judge of the Common Pleas, ob. 1632:
on the tier above these are the effigies of Stephen Harvey
esq. 1606, and Anne, his wife, 1590 (parents of the above), kneeling before an altar: there are also various monuments of the eighteenth century to the Tate family. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £555 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1863 by the Rev. Robert Henry Cox M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. There are 3 elementary schools in this parish, viz. one in Hardingstone village and two in Far Cotton, all under the management of a School Board. In this parish stands one of the Eleanor crosses which, from its proximity to Northampton, is usually spoken of as the Northampton cross, and is locally known as "Queen's Cross": these crosses were originally erected by Edward I. in 1294, to mark the spots where the body of his beloved Queen Eleanor rested in its progress from the place of her death, Harby, Notts, to Westminster; there were originally twelve of these crosses, at Lincoln, Grantham, Stamford, Geddington, Hardingstone or Northampton, Stony Stratford, Woburn, Dunstable, St. Albans, Waltham, Westcheap and Charing; but only three are now remaining: one at Geddington in this county, the one now being described, and a third at Waltham; the cross here is similar in shape, general appearance and decoration to that at Waltham; this however is octagonal, while that at Waltham is hexagonal: portions of this beautiful structure, an elegant example of Early Decorated work, with crocketed canopies, pinnacles and statues, having become much mutilated and defaced, a committee has been formed for its restoration and protection: the decay is partly owing to the action of time, and partly owing to the damage caused by ignorant and mischievous persons, who have been allowed to disfigure the monument; it is proposed to renew the steps and the upper part in general, at an estimated cost of £320, to be raised as far as possible by a subscription of one guinea from each subscriber; towards which Her Majesty the Queen has given £25: the work of restoration will be entrusted to Mr. Edmund Law, architect, of Northampton: to the south-west of the cross is a commanding eminence, crowned by the remains of Danes' Camp, a circular fortification, enclosing more than four acres, and supposed to have been constructed by Sweyn, the father of Canute. During the wars of the Roses a battle was fought here, July 10th, 1460, between the royal troops and the Yorkists, under the Earl of Warwick, in which the Duke of Buckingham and other nobles were killed, and Henry VI. was made prisoner. Mr. Wadham, of Delapré gave a yearly rent-charge of £16s. 8d. to be applied to the relief of the necessitous poor. Mr. Benjamin Green, late of this parish, gave £60, to which the parish added £40, the whole to be laid out in land, and the yearly rents thereof applied to the purchase of bread, to be given to the poor on Easter Monday. The charity estates, which are under the management of trustees, produce £80 yearly, applied in apprenticing and in the distribution of bread and clothing. John Clark gave £150, the interest thereof to be laid out annually at Christmas in the purchase of warm coats and given to the most necessitous poor of this parish (exclusive of Cotton End). Mrs. Elizabeth Murray, of Northampton, gave £300, the interest thereof to be applied yearly to the purchase of clothing for poor women of this parish (exclusive of Cotton End). The Hardingstone Highway Board hold their meetings monthly at Northampton County Hall. James Hervey, author of "Meditations among the Tombs," and some time rector of Weston Favell, was born here 26th February, 1714. Rush Mills, where postage and bank note paper are manufactured, are in this parish. Delapré Abbey, the seat of John Augustus Sheil Bouverie esq. J.P. on the site of the ancient conventual house of that name; is situated about half a mile south from Northampton in a well-wooded and undulating park of 346 acres; the abbey was founded in the reign of Stephen, by Simon de St. Liz the younger, Earl of Northampton, for nuns of the Cluniac order; its revenues, in 26 Henry VIII. were valued at £119; it was surrendered December 16th, 30 Henry VIII.: of the ancient structure, many of the dormitories and the principal entrance remain as when built, but the southern portion of the abbey has been much altered at different dates. J. A. S. Bouverie esq. J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is clay and loam; subsoil, stone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 3,060 acres; rateable value, £15,212; the population in 1881 was 2,618. Parish Clerk, Charles Walker.

COTTON END AND FAR COTTON, hamlets of this parish and suburbs of Northampton, were incorporated in that borough for parliamentary purposes in 1868, and in 1875 were formed into an ecclesiastical parish; the names of residents are given with those of Northampton; the increase in population in this parish is mainly in these hamlets: population in 1881, 1,814.

HARRINGWORTH is a parish pleasantly situated on the banks of the river Welland, by which it is divided from Rutland, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union and county court district of Uppingham, rural deanery of Oundle (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham and diocese of Peterborough, 4 miles south-east from Uppingham, and 10 north-west from Oundle, with a station on the Manton and Kettering branch of the Midland railway. A branch of the North Western railway, called the Wansford and Seaton, joins the Stamford and Market Harborough line at Seaton station (Rutland), one mile distant. This place has given the title of baron to the Zouch family, who held the lordship in the thirteenth century. The church of St. John the Baptist is an edifice of stone in the Early English and Decorated styles, consisting of a chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with spire containing 5 bells and a clock, erected in 1877, at a cost of £100, by Lieut.-Col. Tryon: in the chancel is divided from the nave by a wooden screen: in the north aisle is the family vault of the Tryons; there are monuments to Peter and Charles Tryon, 1705, and various other members of this ancient family; a brass to the Rev. William Garner M.A. 1680 and another to the Rev. Matthew Palmer M.A. who died in 1752, aged 110. Th register dates from the year 1695. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value from 90 acres of glebe £210 with residence, in the gift of Lieut.-Col. Tryon, and held since 1843 by the Rev. Frederick Henry Marvell Bayldes M.A. of Christ Church, Oxford. Here is an Independent chapel, built in 1867. The charities amount to about £100, £60 of which is for the support of the school and the remainder for fuel and clothing. In the centre of the village stands an ancient cross in good preservation. Lieut.-Col. Thomas Tryon J.P. of Bulwick park, Wansford, is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, rocky. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is blocked up, the chantry having been destroyed : the chancel retains altar brackets, a piscina and Early English sedilia on both sides : in the north aisle is an ambury and in the south aisle a piscina and altar brackets : the south porch is Decorated ; the inner doorway Early English : the door bears the inscription " W. C. fecit, 1708 " there is a low side window near the chancel door which is barred with iron, and some ancient tiles are still extant : the font is octagonal, on a plain octagonal stem ; the west window is a memorial to the Campbell family : in the north aisle, on a slab of blue marble about 9 feet long and 3 feet wide, are the remains of a curious but mutilated inscription in Lombardic characters, temp. Edward I. translated as follows :—" Here lies Roger De—on whose soul may God have mercy. Whosoever shall pray for his soul shall have pardon " : the church was thoroughly restored in 1884, at a cost of £800. The register dates from the year 1685. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £112, including 35 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and held since 1855 by the Rev. John Archibald Legh Campbell M.A. of Oriel College, Oxford. Here are chapels for the Methodist Reformers and Primitive Methodists. Near the station are the extensive mills of Mr. Alfred Towgood, for the manufacture of air-dried brown paper. The poor's estate now produces about £35 annually, the whole of which goes towards the support of the school. In the centre of the village is an ancient stone cross. John Clare the poet, son of a farm labourer in this parish, was born here in 1793; he died at the lunatic asylum, Northampton, May 20, 1864; a monument has been here erected to his memory. A cemetery of half an acre was formed in 1881, at a cost of £400, and is under the control of a burial board of 7 members. Lord Kesteven is lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam. Christ's College, Cambridge, are the lay rectors. The soil is various; subsoil, gravel and stone. The land is arable. The area is 1,860 acres; rateable value, £28,547; the population in 1881 was 711. Parish Clerk, William Crowson.

GREAT HARROWDEN is a small parish and village in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Orlingbury, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles north from Wellingborough and 5 south from Kettering, on the road between these towns. Finedon station, on the Midland railway, is 1½ miles north-east, locally in Burton Latimer. All Saints church is an interesting edifice of stone, consisting of chancel with vestry on the north, nave with clerestory, north aisle, south porch and an embattled western tower of three stages with angle turrets containing a clock and 3 bells: on the south side of the chancel are three rich sedilia and a piscina, which, together with the vestry door, are Early English; in the south wall of the chancel is a low side window of early date; a Late Decorated oak screen, originally of very good design and work, separates the chancel from the nave; the nave arcade, the clerestory windows, some in the chancel, are Late Decorated, the aisle windows being Early Perpendicular; in the aisle is a piscina, consisting of a small bowl placed on a column; in the chancel are the remains of a very fine canopied brass, with effigies, to William of Harrowden and of Margaret his wife: it records that "he died to December, 1433," and that his widow was "daughter and heiress of Giles Saintjohn, kn't.": it further states that she was not buried here; the church has been almost entirely rebuilt at different times, and incorporates the materials of a more ancient structure.

HEMINGTON is a parish 5 miles south-east from Oundle and 4 east from Barnwell station on the North Western railway, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Polebrook, union and county court district of Oundle, rural deanery of Oundle first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, situate near the borders of Hunts. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a building of stone in the Gothic style of the fourteenth century, consisting of chancel, nave, south porch and a tower containing 4 bells: it was rebuilt in 1666 and restored in 1873 at the cost of the late Duke of Buccleuch K.G. when the chancel and porch were added. The register dates from the year 1574. The living is a vicarage, united by Order in Council with the rectory of Luddington, joint gross yearly value £252, including 323 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and now vacant. The vicarage house, situated near the church, was built by the late Duke of Buccleuch K.O. in 1849. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are hay, barley and wheat. The area is 1,240 acres; rateable value, £1,250; the population in 1881 was 157.

COLD HIGHAM, so called from its exposed and elevated situation, is named Hecham and Hecham Parva or Little Higham in early records and Heea in Domesday book; together with GRIMSCOTE and part of FOSTER'S BOOTH it constitutes a village and parish situate about a quarter of a mile west of the old London and Liverpool coach road, $3\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Towcester station, 5 west from the Blisworth railway station and 7 south-west from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Brackley second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Luke is a plain edifice of stone, in the Norman style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, north and south porches and a western saddleback tower containing 4 bells: in the Potcote chapel is a richly moulded arch, beneath which stands an altar tomb, delicately panelled and bearing an effigy in oak of a cross-legged knight in plate armour and surcoat, representing Sir John de Pateshull, lord of this manor, ob. 1350: the church was restored in 1881, at a cost of £2,000, defrayed by subscription, £500 being given by the late Duke of Grafton, the western gallery was removed and the tower arch opened to the church, a north aisle and organ chamber erected and the chancel rebuilt: in the chancel is a memorial window to Mrs. Shonbridge, sister of the rector: the font was given by Mrs. Whitton, of Blakesley, and a stained window has been inserted by her sister, Mrs. Charlton. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £400, including

Spencer K.O. Lewis Pack esq. and Captain Arthur Maurice Blake, of Danesbury, Welwyn, Herts. The land is arable and pasture; the soil is mixed. The area is 726 acres; rateable value, £1,690; the population in 1881 was 115.

258 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of J. B. Howes esq. of Northampton, and held since 1875 by the Rev. William Atkinson Howes of St. Bees. The poor's allotment now (1885) produces £3 8s. yearly. Lesson's charity of £1 yearly is derived from land left 27th May, 1646, by Mrs. Jane Lesson, of Abthorpe; both of these benefactions are for fuel. The Duke of Grafton K.G., C.B. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is part clay and part red loam; ironstone is found here. The chief crops are cereals and beans. The area is 1,690 acres; rateable value, £2,022; the population in 1881, with its hamlets, was 359.

GRIMSCOTE is a village in the parish of Cold Higham, from which it is about half a mile south west. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1837.

FOSTER'S BOOTH is a hamlet, partly in this parish and partly in that of Pateshull. The particulars and names will be found under a separate heading.

HIGHAM FERRERS is a borough by prescription, formerly a market town, having a station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway, 1 mile north from the town and a station at Irchester on the Midland railway, 3 miles from the town, in the Wellingborough division of the county, hundred of the same name, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers third, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 5 miles east from Wellingborough, 8 south-west from Thrapston, 10 south-east from Kettering, 16 east-north-east from Northampton and 65 from London. The town is plain, chiefly consisting of one street about a mile long with a market place, and is on a rocky height near the navigable river Nen or Nene, and on the road from Bedford to Kettering; it is named in Domesday Book as Higham, and takes its after-name from the Earls Ferrers, who were its lords; it seems to have been a Roman station, for pottery and remains of buildings have been found, and the station of Chester is within three miles. The corporation consists, pending the grant of a new charter, of a mayor, seven aldermen, thirteen capital burgesses, a recorder and deputy recorder. The mayor and corporation walk in procession to church three times a year, when the bidding prayer is used and a special sermon is preached by the vicar, who is also chaplain to the mayor. Higham Ferrers formerly sent one member to Parliament, but was disfranchised by the Reform Act. The church of St. Mary, a large and beautiful structure and formally collegiate, is supposed to have been built between 1289 and 1337; and was thoroughly restored in the year 1864, at an expense of £6,000, it is in the Early English and later styles, and consists of choir, double nave

with clerestory on each of the outer sides, north and south aisles, south and west porches, several chapels and an embattled western tower with pinnacles, and an octagonal crocketed spire rising to the height of 170 feet and containing a clock and 6 bells; the inner west door is carved and is much admired; the choir retains a screen of carved oak, some stalls and a double piscina; the eastern windows, one of which has a niche above it, are very fine: the font is of Early English date: in the north chantry chapel is an altar tomb covered by a fine thick marble slab bearing a full length brass effigy of an ecclesiastic, and on his breast this legend: "Fili Dei, Misericere mei;" there appear to have once been six other figures on each side, but four on the north side are now lost: there also is an invocatory inscription on brass to Laurence St. Maur, a former rector, but without date; and on another marble slab is an elegant cross fleury, with inscription at the foot to Thomas Chichele, ob. 25th February, 1400, and Agnes, his wife, the father and mother of Archbishop Chichele; near this are two fine effigies in brass of a man in a loose robe with his feet on a lion, and a woman in a mantle and veil, the inscription, formerly below, is lost; there are also brass effigies with invocations from the Latin Litany, and an inscription in English to William Thorpe, rector, ob. 5th October, 1504, and Maryon, his wife: in the choir is a large slab with the brass effigy of a man in a furred and ornamented robe, and below an invocatory inscription in Latin to Richard Wyllis, warden of Archbishop Chichele's College; north of this is the brass effigy of a female in a loose robe, with inscription in Latin to Edith, wife of John Chauceler, merchant, of Kensham; near the entrance to the south chapel is the brass effigy of an ecclesiastic, and Latin inscription to

Henry Denton, chaplain of Cheston, ob. 18th February, 1398: in the principal nave is the brass effigy of a man, without inscription: the church is 119 feet in length by 69 feet wide: the churchyard was enlarged in the year 1870, at a cost of £228 and new iron gates placed at the entrance at a further cost of £50: an organ was placed in the church in the year 1877, at a cost of £680: in 1884 a beautiful reredos of walnut was set up, and the chancel new floored: and in 1885 the east window was filled with stained glass by W. H. Pope esq. and Mrs. Pope. The register dates from the year 1573. The living is a vicarage united to that of Cheston, including 62 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and held since 1885 by the Rev. George H. Hopkins M.A. formerly fellow of Sidney Sussex College, Cambridge. The vicarage house has been rebuilt, but the room originally occupied by the warden of the Bede House, and containing some oak carving, still remains. The Wesleyan Methodists have a chapel here. Formerly there was a castle here, of which only part of the earthwork remains. Of the ancient Hospital of St. James there are no remains. Henry Chichele, Archbishop of Canterbury 1414-43, and founder of All Souls College, Oxford, was born here about 1362, and in 1415 founded in this place a college for a master and 7 canons, dedicating it to SS. Mary and Thomas the martyr, and Edward the Confessor: and the existing church then became collegiate; but the college and parish used distinct portions. At the dissolution of monasteries the college was suppressed, its revenues being then estimated at £156 yearly, but the property was regranted to the corporation: the remains of this college, consisting of portions of the court with the gateway, still stand in the main street of the town, and one of the walls bears a curious sun-dial. The Bede House, an ancient building in the Perpendicular style, on the south side of the churchyard, and restored in the year 1854 chiefly at the expense of Earl Fitzwilliam, was also founded by Archbishop Chichele: it is now used as a Sunday school and for lectures; the old Refectory, now the Grammar school, is also situated in the churchyard. There are two ancient crosses, one of stone carved with oakleaf foliage, in the churchyard, and a monolith cross of stone in the Market square. The Town Hall, erected in 1808, is a small building of stone, in a very plain style; and contains some armour and a breastplate popularly known as "John of Gaunt's," formerly kept in the lady chapel of the church. The chief trade is shoe making. The markets used to be held thrice a week, but all are now extinct. Fairs were formerly held but have all fallen into disuse. From Archbishop Chichele's charity twelve poor men and one woman receive one penny per day and other gratuities. Newman's charity of about £160 yearly, founded in 1855 by William Newman of this place and derived from Consols, is for six old women, inhabitants of the parish, who occupy six houses erected by the corporation in accordance with his will: they receive £5 4s. each quarterly. A sum of £9 yearly, arising from Latham's, Glasbrook's, Sanders' and Marshall's charities, is distributed. The trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam are lords of the manor and with the vicar principal landowners. The soil is mixed; subsoil, chiefly clay, limestone and ironstone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The parish contains 1,865 acres; rateable value, £5,082; and had a population in 1881 of 1,468.

HINTON-IN-THE-HEDGES is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles west from Brackley station, on the Banbury and Bletchley railway, 4 east from King's Sutton station on the Oxford and Birmingham railway and 3 south-east from Farthinghoe station on the Northampton and Banbury Junction railway. The church of the Holy Trinity is an ancient edifice of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle, south porch and a low western tower containing 3 bells: in the north aisle is an altar tomb of freestone, with recumbent figures of a knight in armour and of his lady in a loose robe, the knight's feet resting on the body of a lion; there is no date or inscription, but the effigies have been supposed to commemorate one of the Lords Lovell, of Tichmarsh, in this county, and his wife; more recent researches suggest that they represent Sir Henry and Lady de Hinton, former possessors of the manor: the font is very ancient and curiously carved. The register, including that of Steane, dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, with that of Steane annexed, joint gross yearly value £250 with resi-

HOLCOT is a village and parish 8 miles north-west from Wellingborough, 7 north-east from Northampton and 4 from the Spratton station, situated near the road from Northampton to Kettering, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Hamfordshoe, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Mary and All Saints is an ancient edifice, chiefly in the Decorated style, with Early English and Perpendicular insertions and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch, and a small embattled western tower containing three bells and a clock: the chancel retains a piscina: the stained east window is a memorial erected by the Rev. R. Montgomery M.A. late rector, to Jane, his wife, who died in 1878; the west window of the south aisle is also a memorial and was erected by the Rev. John Gooch M.A. in memory of his daughter, Mary Louisa, who died April 23, 1884; in the same aisle is a smaller stained window: in 1845 the chancel was restored, the roof being raised and a vestry built: a very handsome embroidered communion table cloth and hangings, together with cloths for the pulpit, desk and lectern, were presented at Easter, 1885, by the ladies of the St. Alphage Society, of Reigate, Surrey: the chancel fittings are of oak. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a rectory,

1½ miles from Althorp station, 10 north-east from Daventry, 6½ north-west from Northampton and 72 from London, situated on a hill commanding the two main roads from Northampton to Rugby and Leicester. The church of All Saints, situated in a lonely spot some distance from the village, is a building of stone in the Early English, Late Decorated and Perpendicular styles and consists of chancel, nave of three bays, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 2 bells: the chancel was rebuilt about 1840 from designs by Sir Henry Dryden bart. in the Early English style and the nave was restored in 1868 under the direction of the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A.: the heavy chancel screen of Renaissance work originally belonged to the great hall of the mansion: on the walls of the church are inscriptions from the Bishop's Bible with interesting borders, said to be the work of John of Padua: there is a slab of alabaster, with incised effigies of a knight in armour and a lady, with inscription to William Holdenby, 1490, and Margaret his wife, 1453; and there are several undated inscriptions on brass to the Holdenby and Hutton families: the church plate of silver dates from the sixteenth century: in the churchyard is a monument of marble to various members of the Clifden family: the late Sir E. H. Alderson, baron of the exchequer, father of the present rector, and of the present Marchioness of Salisbury, who died in 1857, is buried on the south side of the tower, his remains having been removed from Risby, in Suffolk, where he was first interred. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1795; marriages, 1754; burials, 1795. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £600, including 11 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Crown and held since 1865 by the Rev. Frederick Cecil Alderson M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Holdenby, or Holnby House, anciently held by the Huttons, was the birthplace in 1540 of Sir

HORTON is a parish and station on the Northampton and Bedford branch of the Midland Railway, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymerley, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston (first portion) archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough, 6½ miles south-east from Northampton, on the road to Newport Pagnell. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower containing a clock and three bells: the stained east window is a memorial to Capt. Gunning Sutton, R.N. who died in 1821: in the chancel is an altar tomb, with finely worked recumbent effigies in alabaster to William Lord Parr of Horton K.G. Lord Chamberlain to Katherine, the last Queen of Henry VIII., who died 10th September, 1546, and Mary (Salisbury) his wife, who died 10th July, 1555; the tomb is divided into compartments with semi-circular arched canopies of a debased Italian style, with shields at the ends and figures at the sides: in the chancel is also a slab with brass effigies of a knight in plate armour between two females in veiled head-dresses and furred gowns, beneath which is an invocatory inscription to Roger Salisbury 1491, and Emma and Anne his wives. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1612; marriages and burials, 1626. The living is a vicarage, with Piddington annexed, joint gross yearly value £160 and house, in the gift of Sir George William Gunning bart. J.P. and

Christopher Hatton, Lord Chancellor in Queen Elizabeth's reign; in 1607 it was purchased by the Crown, but in 1709 became the property of the great Duke of Marlborough; the third duke sold it to his son-in-law, H. W. Agar-Ellis, and Viscount Clifden: it was restored in 1873-5 under the direction of Mr. R. H. Carpenter, and is now the residence of Viscount Clifden, who is lord of the manor and sole landowner: the original mansion was a magnificent and extensive structure, consisting of two quadrangles, the foundations of which may still be traced; two gateways, formerly in front of the house, remain, and bear the date 1585: Charles I. after his surrender to the Scottish army was brought here as a prisoner, Feb. 15, 1646-7, and remained till the following 3rd June, when he was removed by the Parliamentary forces under Cornet Joyce: the present house originally formed the north side of the inner court, and has some good chimneys and woodwork. The land is arable and pasture. The soil is a mixture of red sand and clay; subsoil, clay. The area is 1,822a. 11. 36p.; rateable value, £3,468 7s.; the population in 1881 was 206.

LITTLE HOUGHTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymerley, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 3½ miles east-by-south from Northampton, on the road to Bedford. The Billing Road station on the Blisworth and Peterborough railway is one mile distant. The river Nene separates the parish from Billing and Weston Favell. The church of St. Mary the Virgin is a building of stone in the Early English and Decorated styles: consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells: in 1873 the church underwent a thorough restoration at a cost of £3,000; when the north and west galleries were removed, the tower arch opened, two windows inserted in the west wall, the floor re-laid, and the interior re-seated, an organ chamber and vestry built, and an oak pulpit and lectern introduced: the chancel is divided from the nave by a carved oak screen, and retains double sedilia and ambury: a reredos of stone with bas-reliefs of the Annunciation, Birth and Resurrection of Our Lord, and a stained east window to William Tyler Smyth esq. who died June 1st, 1835, and Catherine Smyth, who died December, 9th, 1868, were also given by the magistrates and gentry of the country in memory William Smyth, esq. who died March 23, 1872; there are two memorial windows on the south side of the chancel. The register and burial dates from the year 1540; mar. 1551. The living is a vicarage with that of Brafield-on-the-Green annexed, joint nett yearly value £315, in the gift of and held since 1838 by the Rev. Christopher Smyth M.A. of Trinity College, Oxford: there is a Wesleyan chapel: R. Ward's charity of £100, invested in Government stock, the interest of which is distributed to the poor annually; also a further sum of £100 left by the same donor and likewise invested, the interest being applied to the apprenticing of two boys annually: M. Ward's charity of £15 yearly value is for clothing. The Rev. Christopher Smyth M.A. who is lord of the manor and Thomas Marriot esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is marl and loam; subsoil, stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is 1,070 acres; rateable value £3,257; the population in 1881 was 510.

IRCHESTER is a parish and village on the borders of Bedfordshire, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers third, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 3 miles south-east from Wellingborough and 3 south-west from Higham Ferrers. The parish is bounded on the north by the Nene. The Midland railway passes through the parish and has a station about half a mile west from the village. The Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway skirts the western part of this parish, where is the Wellingborough station, about 2 miles north-west of the village. The church of St. Catherine, situated on high ground, is an edifice of stone, consisting of spacious chancel with north chapel, nave of four bays, with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a western tower with lofty octagonal spire, containing a clock and 5 bells: the tracery of the spire lights and of the south and west belfry windows is flowing Decorated of the reticulated kind; the west window and doorway of the tower are Perpendicular; the windows of the aisles Decorated; those of the chancel Perpendicular, and the north and south doorways and the priests' door in the south wall of the chancel, now blocked up, are elegant examples of Early English: on the south side of the chancel are aumbries, piscina and a sedile of the same date: the south porch is of the transition period from Decorated to Perpendicular; in the north wall of the chapel is a plain sepulchral niche: the pulpit is of oak with elaborate carvings of cinque-cento character and there are some good Decorated benches: the font is a curious specimen of Early English: in the chancel is an incised slab to Thomas Jenyson, dated 1631. The register dates from the year 1622. The living is a discharged vicarage separated from that of Wollaston, June 21, 1830, title rent-charge £64, gross yearly value £380, including 95 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Henry Slater M.A. vicar of Bywell St. Andrews, Northumberland, and held since 1833 by the Rev. Henry Horrocks Slater B.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge. There are Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels here. There are three charities; one called Sharwood's charity consists of £187, vested in railway debentures, the interest to be apportioned annually as follows, £2 to Irchester National school and remainder in sums of 5s. or 10s. to the industrious poor of the parish; Jenyson's charity consists of £5 4s. to be distributed weekly in twopenny loaves of bread among such poor of the parish as attend church regularly; a third charity, consisting of land and cottages of the value of upwards of £100 a year is to be distributed in gifts to the poor of the parish and to be expended in repairing the parish bridges. The inhabitants are supported partly by agriculture and partly by shoe making for the manufacturers in Higham Ferrers and Wellingborough. Irchester was a Roman station. Chester House, situated about half a mile from the church, is an ancient Elizabethan mansion of stone, occupied by Campbell Praed esq. and was so called from the local Roman encampment; it is a mansion of itself and consists of one house and farm; adjacent are earthworks. In 1874 an ancient Roman burial ground was discovered on an estate about half a mile from Chester House; about 400 skeletons were found, all facing the east, a number of stone coffins, and one of lead containing skeletons, besides eight bronze vessels packed in a ninth; some of the vessels are in an excellent state of preservation; two of them are perforated at the bottom and partly up the sides with elegant patterns; numerous ancient coins and Roman pottery have been found and in a field adjoining the workings iron slag has been met with: in a field abutting on Chester House, is one of the stone coffins mentioned above; it is roughly hewn out of a solid block of Northamptonshire freestone, with a huge slab of the same for lid, secured by strong iron cramps; a similar stone coffin, together with the lead one and the bronze vessels or bowls, are in the possession of R. W. Arkwright esq. of Knuston hall. Coins, with other relics, are still constantly found. The Queen is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert J. Lloyd-Lindsay v.c., K.C.B., M.P. of Overstone (the lay rector), Robert Wigram Arkwright esq. J.P. of Knuston, G. F. Widdborne and Major Brookes. The soil is of a fertile mixed character; substratum, oolite limestone, sand and ironstone. Iron ore abounds here. The chief crops are cereals. The area is 2,678 acres; rateable value, £13,258; the population in 1881 was 1,699.

KNUSTON hamlet, forming the eastern portion of this parish is the property of Robert Wigram Arkwright esq. J.P. whose seat, Knuston Hall, is a large square mansion standing on an elevated spot in the centre of a well-wooded park overlooking a vast area of country: to the south-east of the mansion a stream of water traverses the park and breaks over a rocky fall; the stream is crossed by a light and elegant bridge.

IRTLINGBOROUGH is a large village and parish on the Nene (corruptly called Arleborough), in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Huxley, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers (first portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 2 miles north from Higham Ferrers, 5 north-west from Wellingborough, 15 from Northampton and 66 from London. The village consists principally of one street a mile in length, in the middle of which stands an ancient monument. The Ditchford station of the Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway is in this parish, but about a mile south from the village. The Higham Ferrers station, a handsome building in the Elizabethan style, is about half-a-mile east from the village, in the parish of Chelveston-cum-Caldecott. The village is lighted with gas. The church of St. Peter, endowed in 1375 by John Pyell, lord mayor of London, 1373; made collegiate in the reign of Richard II. for a dean and five secular canons, besides four clerks, is an ancient structure of considerable size and was originally a building of great architectural beauty: it is chiefly in the Early English and Decorated style and consists of chancel and nave each with an embattled clerestory, aisles, transepts, western porch and a little to the west of the church a fine detached tower of four stages, 66 feet in height, supported in three of these by double angle buttresses: the belfry storey is lighted on each side by couplets, each pair separated by a canopied niche: at the angles are flat buttresses rising into incomplete octagonal pinnacles: and between these an embattled parapet: surmounting the whole is an octagonal battlemented lantern of two stages, and of later date: in the tower are 6 bells: on the south side of the south aisle is an altar tomb, panelled with quatrefoils enclosing shields, and bearing the alabaster effigies, now much mutilated, of John Pyell and Joan his wife: upon a modern tomb in the chapel at the east end of the south aisle, is the mutilated effigy of a lady representing Anne (Parr), second wife of Sir Thomas Cheyne knight: at the east end of the south aisle is an ancient tomb under a canopied arch, and in the chancel various marble tablets of modern date: there are Perpendicular stalls, 1485. The register dates from the year 1562. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 81 acres of glebe and endowment £350 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, and held since 1578 by the Rev. Thomas Grabham M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge. There are chapels for Baptists, Wesleyans and Primitive Methodists. The charities, amounting to £16 yearly, are derived from land left by William Trigg, of Irlingborough, in 1760, and include Glover's bequest, of which there is no record. Some remains of the ancient college still exist. The inhabitants are employed in boot and shoe making, and there are extensive ironstone quarries worked by Messrs. Butlin, Bevan and Co. Furnaces have been erected by Thomas Butlin and Co. and are at present worked by them. The Dean and Chapter of Peterborough are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the trustees of the late Hon. G. Wentworth Fitzwilliam. Mrs. Mantou, William Dulley Esq. Miss Lucas, the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough and Messrs. J. Spencer, J. Price and John B. Howes. The soil is clay, iron and lime stone; subsoil, iron and lime stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,545 acres; rateable value, £13,430; the population in 1881 was 2,735.

ISHAM SUPERIOR and INFERIOR form a parish and village 3 miles south-south-east from Kettering, 4 north from Wellingborough, 8 south-west from Thrapston, 8 north-west from Higham Ferrers, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Oringbury, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The Hitchin and Leicester branch of the Midland railway passes through this parish, and the Finedon station, on that line, is about 1½ miles south-east; about half a mile north-east is the Isham and Burton Latimer station (locally in Burton Latimer) on the same line. The Isebrook separates Isham from Burton Latimer. The church of St. Peter is an edifice of stone in the Norman and Decorated styles, consisting of chancel with north and south chapels, nave with clerestory, aisles, north and south porches and a western embattled tower containing a clock and 4 bells; on the eastern gable of the nave is a small bell-turret; in each of the chapels is a piscina and in the south wall of the chancel a hagioscope; in the pavement of the chancel is a small inscribed brass now illegible: in 1870 the church was renovated and restored, the chancel newly roofed, and the north porch erected, at a cost of £1,000. The register dates from the year 1701. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value about £550 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1867 by the Rev. Robert John Clarke M.A. of Dublin University, and surrogate. The Reformed Wesleyans have a chapel here, built by subscription in 1861, at a cost, including site, fittings and land purchase, of £350; attached is Sunday school. There is a piece of land of 13 acres the rent of which, £23, is for apprentice fees. In 1829 William Green bequeathed £300 in New £3 per Cent. Annuities, the annual dividends to be applied to the purchase of an ox, cow or sheep, to be divided among the poor of the parish on Christmas eve; in the same year Mrs. Green left £19 19s. now in New £3 per Cent. Stock, the dividends to be devoted to the support of the Sunday school, also £40 now in £3 per Cent. Stock, the dividends for purchase of bread for the poor to be distributed at Christmas. Mr. Perry of Cottingham is lord of the manor, the rector, Mrs. Green of Isham, Mrs. Jones and Henry Harper esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is of a good fertile mixed character; substratum Great Oolite limestone, sand and ironstone and Upper Lias clay. The chief crops are cereals. The area is 1,332 acres; rateable value, £5,538; the population in 1881 was 381.

KETTERING, a market and union town and head of a county court district, is a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Huxloe, rural deanery of Weldon (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 14 miles north-east from Northampton, 11 south-east from Market Harborough, 8 north from Wellingborough and 75 from London. The town is governed by a local board of nine members, and is situated at the junction of the roads from Market Harborough, Stamford, Huntingdon, Newport Pagnell and Northampton. The Midland railway has a station within a short distance of the town on their main line, from which are branches to Huntingdon and Oakham; the river Ise forms part of the eastern boundary of the parish. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is a large and handsome structure of stone chiefly in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestory nave, aisles, south chancel, porch and a lofty western tower of two stages, with embattled parapet and short octagonal turrets at the angles, also embattled, from within which rises an elegant octagonal crocketed spire with three tiers of dormer lights; the lower stage of the tower is pannelled, and the belfry, lighted by tripartite, contains a peal of 8 bells with chiming; the east window is stained. The register dates from the year 1637, and is written in Latin till 1670, when the English register commences. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 400 acres of glebe £1,090 with residence, in the gift of George Lewis Watson esq. D.L., J.P. of Rockingham Castle, and held since 1865 by the Rev. Henry Lindsay M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, hon. canon of Peterborough, rural dean of Weldon (second portion), chaplain of Kettering union, and surrogate. The church of St. Andrew, in the Rockingham road, a chapel of ease to the parish church, is a building of stone in the Decorated style, consisting of a chancel, nave, south aisle and a bell turret at the west end containing 1 bell; it was erected in 1870, at a cost of £4,500, raised by subscription, and has sittings for 500. There are Congregational, Baptist and Wesleyan Methodist chapels. The Friends' meeting house, in North street, was rebuilt in 1868. New Congregational Sunday schools were opened in 1884; they are of red brick with Mansfield stone dressings, and cost £3,400, raised by the Toller chapel congregation. The Cemetery, situated near the town, on the road to Barton Seagrave, was formed in 1862, at a cost of £4,000, and consecrated by the Bishop of Peterborough on the 15th of May in the same year; it was enlarged in 1870 at a further cost of £1,000, and comprises 5 acres with two mortuary chapels; it is under the control of a Burial Board of nine members. There is a Grammar school for boys belonging to the parish, endowed with land producing a gross rental of nearly £700 yearly, which is applied to the payment of the master, and of the interest of money borrowed to build a new rectory house; the school was rebuilt and enlarged in 1856, at a cost of £1,674, raised by public subscription; there are no free boys and the school is governed by a body of trustees. The Town Hall and Corn Exchange, situated in the Market place, and opened in 1862, is a building of brick with stone facings, erected in 1853 from the designs of the late Francis Edmund Law, of Northampton, at a cost of £2,950, and consists of a market room and a room used for concerts and public meetings; on each side of the entrances are offices. The Northamptonshire Baptist Provident Society, instituted at Kettering in 1813, for the widows and orphans of ministers, and disabled or retiring ministers, has a capital of £7,196 9s. 6d.; secretary, Mr. D. F. Gitch, Newland street, Kettering. The Church Institute and Workmen's Club, in Gold street, was established in 1877, and has a library of 1,000 volumes, with reading and other rooms for the use of its 500 members and lady associates; George Frederick Goff, secretary. The British Women's Temperance Society, established in 1824, meet in the Toller Chapel vestry; president, Mr. Wallis Wells. The Fuller Reading Room, situated in Gold street, is used by the Nonconformists of the town. The Temperance Hall, situated in Gold street, and opened in 1865, is a building in the Italian style, from designs by Edward Buswell, erected by subscription, at a cost of £700, and is capable of holding about 500 persons; there is a library in connection with it of upwards of 1,000 volumes; the subscription is 4s. a year. Water Works were established in 1872, with a capital of £12,000, by a company incorporated under "The Companies Act" of 1862; a good supply of water is obtained from a spring in the parish of Weekley; the reservoir is on the Rockingham road. The county police have a station here for the district, which includes Kettering and sixty-three villages; there is an engine-house, three fire-engines and a house for the person having the care of them. The principal manufactures of the town are boots, shoes, brushes, staves and clothing. The market, held on Fridays, was granted by charter of Henry III. in 1227 to the Abbot and Monks of Peterborough, then lords of the manor; at the present day it is vested in the Kettering Local Board. Four fairs are held viz. on the Thursday before Easter, the Friday before Whitsunday, the Thursday before the 10th of October and the Thursday before St. Thomas' day; the first and third are principally for the sale of cattle and sheep; a very large market is held on the London road for the sale of fat stock on Mondays and Fridays. Hunt's charity of £49 yearly, derived from land left in 1674 by Edward Hunt, is for distribution and some smaller sums are also distributed. The Church and Town allotment of 16 acres produces £67 yearly; £40 of which is appropriated for apprenticing and the remainder for other purposes. The Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and George Lewis Watson, esq. D.L., J.P. of Rockingham Castle, are lords of the manor, besides which there is a manor attached to the rectory, of which the rector is lord. The principal landowners are the Duke of Buccleuch, G. L. Watson esq. Charles Hayes esq. and the rector. The soil is rich turnip land; subsoil is iron and limestone. The chief crops are wheat and barley. The parish contains 2,617 acres; rateable value is £42,011; the population in 1871 was 7,184, and in 1881 11,093, including 156 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

KILSBY (or KILLESBY) is a parish and village, 5 miles north-by-west from Daventry, 4½ south-east from Rugby and 15 from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Fawsley, Rugby union and county court district, rural deanery of Daventry, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The Oxford canal passes through the parish and the ancient Watling Street forms its eastern boundary. The London and North Western railway here passes through the Kilsby tunnel, which is about 1½ miles in length, and has a station here.
 The church of St. Faith is an edifice of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried
 nave, north aisle, south porch, an unbattled western tower with octagonal spire, containing a clock and 4 bells:
 there are four stained windows, one of which is a memorial to the Rev. Charles Gilbey, late vicar: the church was fully restored in 1868 and will seat 256 persons. The register dates only from the year 1785, the earlier registers having been burnt or otherwise destroyed. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £220, including 84 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1877 by the Rev. John Edward Else M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin. The vicarage house, standing in 9 acres of land, was erected in 1868 by the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are the proprietors of the great tithes. Here is a Congregational chapel. Moses Cowley esq. bequeathed

 a piece of land originally producing £6 a year, but now realizing about £13, which is chiefly given away in bread and money, a portion being appropriated to educational purposes at the discretion of the trustees. The poor's close of 6 acres produces £10 yearly. Lamley Chivers Arnold esq. of Barby Manor, Rugby, is lord of the manor. A court leet, a customary court and a court baron are held annually.
 The principal landowners are Thomas Hall Cowley and John Roberts Cowley. The soil is strong loam; subsoil, clay and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, barley and oats. The area is 3,200 acres; rateable value, £10,462; the population in 1881 was 599.

KING'S CLIFFE (anciently called Clave) is a parish and polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Willybrook, Oundle union and county court district, rural deanery of Oundle second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 88 miles from London and 8 north-north-west from Oundle, the Wansford and Seaton branch of the same line, North Western railway, has a station in Park street. Cliffe was formerly the chief town of the East bailiwick of Rockingham Forest. The Willow brook, which is expanded into a beautiful lake of 5 acres at the bottom of the rectory grounds, is a tributary of the Nene. The church of All Saints is a cruciform building of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, transept, north and south porches and an embattled central tower containing 5 bells: the interior is seated with open oak benches, many of the ends of which, as well as the pulpit, constructed under the direction of the late Archdeacon Bonney, from ancient woodwork, were brought from Fotheringhay: the church was restored in 1863, under the direction of Mr. Edward Browning, architect, of Stamford: in 1865 an organ was erected. The register dates from the year 1590. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £900 with residence, in the gift of the Earl of Westmorland, and held since 1863 by the Rev. Edward Du Pré M.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. There are Congregational and Wesleyan chapels. Charities—John Thorp esq. in 1668, left three houses in Park street for poor women; to the inhabitants of these houses Mrs. Hester Gibbon, in 1790, bequeathed £300 to be vested in Government securities; and Mrs. Ann de Rippe, in 1806, left the interest of £700 for the same purpose; Richard Wildbore left, October 19, 1688, a rent-charge of £5 a year for the education of eight poor boys of this place, now taught in the National school; Mrs. Bonney, late wife of the Ven. H. K. Bonney, rector of King's Cliffe and archdeacon of Lincoln, left £400 for the benefit of the Sunday school and clothing club; this sum, in accordance with her will, was invested by her husband in the £3 per Cent. Consols, less legacy duty of £49, and now produces annually £13 12s. 4d. which is equally divided between the clothing clubs and Sunday school; the Rev. John Law, of Elretham, Hants, bequeathed £700 in trust to his executors to be invested in Bank £3 per Cent. Consols in the names of the "Official Trustees of Charitable Funds," which produced £674 9s. 9d. net; the interest of this sum, viz. £20 4s. 8d. is distributed on St. Thomas' day annually by the minister and churchwardens to the most needy and deserving poor; Miss Louisa Perry, under her will dated December 19, 1808, bequeathed the sum of £600 to her trustees to be invested by them at their discretion for the benefit of the National school and of the Sunday school of King's Cliffe; this charity produces £19 10s. annually; Law and Hutchinson's charity consists in part of certain freehold lands at Northorp, Lincolnshire, and Aslockton, Notts, with lands at other places, amounting in all to 49a. 12p. with a master's house and school, left in 1745 by Elizabeth, widow of Archibald Hutchinson esq. for the education and clothing of 18 (subsequently 22) poor boys; the maintenance of four almshouses for as many aged widows or maidens never having received parish relief, and whose private income should not exceed £5 a year, and for apprenticing; the remaining portion of the charity consists of 80 acres of freehold land at Northorp aforementioned, and a school with mistress's house, for the clothing and education of 14 (subsequently 22) poor girls, together with two almshouses for widows or maidens as in Hutchinson's charity, left in 1727 by the Rev. W. Law M.A. Under a scheme issued by the Charity Commissioners in August, 1878, an entire change was made in the administration of this charity: the clothing of the 44 children being discontinued, and a sum of over £100 yearly appropriated for scholarships and exhibitions; under the same scheme a new room for an upper department was built and opened in 1881 for about 50 scholars, in which a higher education is given. Deserving scholars are promoted to this department from the elementary schools and may hold scholarships which entirely exempt them from the payment of school fees. Grants are made to children on leaving the schools; and provision is also made for scholarships, which may be held at the Oundle Grammar school, or some other place of higher education. The income of the charity, now over £1,000 yearly, is expended in accordance with the new scheme, save and except the yearly maintenance of eight poor widows or maidens, each of whom has 7s. per week and house and 40s. yearly for fuel. The local Liberal Association has a reading room here, established in 1878, and supplied with the daily and other papers; it has now 40 members. A palace, occupied by King John when hunting in Rockingham Forest, once stood on the south side of the churchyard, adjoining a place called "the Hall Yard." In this parish is a chalybeate spring similar to that at Tunsbridge Wells. Wood turning and carving and the manufacture of butter presses is carried on in this parish. The Marquess of Exeter P.C., M.A., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, and the rector, the Earl of Westmorland C.B., D.L., J.P., T. J. Law esq. J. G. Howes esq. and the trustees of Thomas E. Fox esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is very heavy; subsoil, gravel and rock. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley, beans and peas. The area is 3,643a. 38. 32p.; rateable value, £5,674; the population in 1881 was 1,278.

WEST HAY, 1 mile north, formerly extra-parochial, was in 1859 annexed to King's Cliffe.

Parish Clerk, Gamble Dixon.

KING'S SUTTON with ASTROP, PURSTON and WALTON.

KING'S SUTTON is a considerable village and parish, giving name to the hundred, in the Southern division of the county, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 6 miles west from Brackley, 5 south-east from Banbury and 81 from London by rail. The river Cherwell separates the parish from Oxfordshire and the Great Western railway (Oxford and Birmingham branch) runs through the parish close to the west side of the village where there is a station. The church of St. Peter is a spacious and elegant structure, chiefly in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestory nave, aisles, north and west porches and a western tower with spire containing a clock and 8 bells: the tower is of two stages, finished with a plain moulded parapet, from within which rises a lofty and extremely graceful crocketed spire, relieved on its principal faces by tall spiral lights; on the intermediate faces are crocketed pinnacles and other slender pinnacles of less height rise from the angles of the tower, with traceried flying buttresses; the clerestory is embattled, but the parapets of the aisles are plain: the font consists of an octagonal basin resting on a pedestal: the interior of the chancel is relieved on the north and south sides by an Early arcading: the stained east window of four lights and one on the south side were given by members of the Willes family: the nave and chancel are separated by a very beautiful Decorated screen in eight-arched division, partially enclosed below and filled above with elaborate tracery, over which is a coved cornice ornamented with small ribs and finished with a cresting: the pulpit, of Perpendicular date, has traceried panelling and the seats are enriched with carved poppy heads and have panelled doors: in 1866 the chancel was restored by Mrs. Willes, under the direction of Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A. in memory of her husband, William Willes esq. lord of the manor and patron of the living, who died in 1865: in 1832-4 the spire was thoroughly restored and the roofs of the aisles repaired, at a cost of about £850, under the direction of Mr. H. W. Townsend, architect of Peterborough, the principal contributors being Sir W. R. Brown bart. Mrs. Brown, Colonel North M.P. Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Willes and the vicar: there are sittings for 600 persons. The register of marriages dates from the year 1570; baptisms, 1582; burials, 1614. The living is a discharged vicarage, tithes rent-charge £48; net yearly value £120, including 32 acres of land with residence, in the gift of Mrs. Willes and held since 1873 by the Rev. Edward William Urquhart M.A. of Balliol College, Oxford. There are places of worship for Baptists and Primitive Methodists. There are several charities arising from land and funded property; Jankinson's bequest of £3,000, which realises £94 yearly, derived from Government securities, left 20 December, 1812, by Mrs. Ann Jenkinson of Alveston, in the county Warwick, is for apprenticing; and the poor's allotment of 8 acres produces £24 yearly for fuel. Mrs. Elizabeth Watts, of Manchester, bequeathed in 1876 a sum of £400, which is invested in the new £3 Per Cent. Consols and realises £12 yearly; this is distributed after Easter among the deserving poor of the parish who are not in receipt of parish relief. Haines's charity of £5 yearly is derived from a rent-charge on land in the parish, and is disbursed on Easter day in sums of 10s. each to ten of the oldest and most deserving inhabitants of this parish. The Manor House, situated near the church, is occupied by William Aubrey Willes and Mrs. Willes, the lady of the manor. The principal landowners are Sir William Richmond Brown bart. D.L., J.P. Mrs. Willes, Samuel Richard Lovell esq. and Colonel John Sidney North M.P., D.L., J.P. The area is 4,348 acres: rateable value, £10,355; the population (with the hamlets of Astrop, Charlton, Purston and Walton) in 1881 was 1,218.

ASTROP is a hamlet partly in the parish of King's Sutton and partly in that of Newbottle, about a mile east from King's Sutton and is divided into Upper and Lower Astrop. Formerly two parish roads connected the villages of Newbottle and King's Sutton; but that which passed through Astrop park has been closed and in lieu of it the other has been greatly improved at the expense of Sir William R. Brown bart. Here is a chalybeate spring, called "St. Rumbold's Well" and formerly known as "Astrop Spa." It is said to have been discovered about 1657 by Dr. Richard Wilks, and at one time acquired great celebrity; its use is now principally confined to the residents of the locality. Astrop House, a fine building of stone, surrounded by a picturesque park of 100 acres, is the seat of Sir William Richmond Brown bart. D.L., J.P.

PURSTON is another hamlet in the parishes of King's Sutton and Newbottle, 2½ miles north-by-east, the former 2½ north from the latter and ½ south from Farthinghoe station: it is in two divisions, called respectively Great and Little Purston.

WALTON is also a hamlet in the parish of King's Sutton, about a mile south-by-east.

CHARLTON is a hamlet, partly in King's Sutton and partly in Newbottle; the names of the inhabitants are given under Newbottle.

The parishes of Newbottle and King's Sutton, with this hamlet, are now united for all civil purposes.

KINGSTHORPE is a parish and straggling village in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union and county court district of Northampton, rural deanery and archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 13 miles north from Northampton, on the road to Market Harborough; there is a tramway between the village and Northampton. The church of St. John the Baptist is a building of stone in the Norman, Late Decorated and Perpendicular styles, with some portions of reputed Saxon work on the north side of the chancel and consists of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles with chapels, south porch and an embattled western tower with octagonal spire containing 5 bells: the chancel is Perpendicular and beneath it is a crypt with stone vaulting, supported by a central shaft: the east window is stained and the walls of the chancel (which retains a piscina) are adorned with mosaics: there is also a piscina in each of the aisle chapels; on the east wall of the vestry are several inscribed tablets to the Fremeaux family: the church, with the exception of the chancel and tower, was thoroughly restored in 1863, under the direction of Mr. Wm. Slater, architect, of London, when the south aisle and porch were rebuilt and the interior seated with open benches of oak. The register dates from the year 1540. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from 270 acres of glebe £937, net £700 with residence, in the gift of St. Katharine's Hospital, London, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Edward Luxmoore Tuson M.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. There is a Baptist chapel, built in 1835; a Sunday school was added in 1881. On the village green is a spring called "Kingswell," which has never been known to fail or freeze; the Semilongs are springs which possess the property of crusting stone with calcareous crystal. There are lime and stone quarries in this parish. Near the village is a quarry of white freestone of a delicate tint and soft texture, which hardens by exposure to the air: this quarry enjoys considerable local celebrity and has furnished building material for the erection of the General Infirmary and the barracks at Northampton and for some of the neighbouring mansions. The poor's allotment consists of 14A. 13P. allotted at the enclosure in lieu of the pre-existing right to cut furze: this land is in the hands of trustees, who distribute the proceeds, now amounting to £18 yearly, on St. Thomas' day, to the most necessitous and honest poor of Kingsthorpe. There is also a bread fund, consisting of £280 consols, producing £8 8s. which is paid yearly to the trustees by the Charity Commissioners for the purchase of bread to be distributed weekly to 12 men and 12 women of the parish; this charity was left in 1690 by George Cook. Baxter's charity, founded in 1842, consists of £36, derived from invested funds, which is distributed by the rector, who selects aged persons by rotation. St. David's, the property and residence of Winifred Lady Robinson, who is lady of the manor and principal landowner, is a mansion of stone, still retaining portions of the older building, anciently a hospital, consisting of two pillars, remains of an arch or gateway and a few niches in the walls. The vicar and Mrs. Thornton are also landowners in this parish. Kingsthorpe Hall, the seat of Mrs. Thornton, is a stone structure, standing in park-like grounds, commanding fine and extensive views. An estate at Kingley Park, on the east side of the parish and situated on the Kettering road, is now a hamlet of Kingsthorpe; it was purchased a few years ago by the Northampton Freehold Land Society and is now largely built upon, and occupied principally by manufacturers, who have their places of business at Northampton. The soil is light loam; subsoil, lime and ironstone. The chief crops are wheat, barley, rye and potatoes. The area is 1,830 acres; rateable value, £13,894; the population in 1881 was 3,054.

The church of SS. Peter and Paul is an edifice of stone, in the Late Decorated style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with small pinnacles and spire, relieved by two tiers of spire lights and containing 5 bells: the east end has double buttresses and a fine window of five lights, with reticulated tracery; on either side of this window, on the inside is an extremely rich octagonal canopy; and there are triple canopied sedilia, and a piscina of the same character: the font dates from about 1450: the communion plate includes a cup of the reign of Queen Elizabeth. The register dates from the year 1538. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 213 acres of glebe £530 with residence, in the gift of E. and A. S. Miles esqrs. and held since 1830 by the Rev. William Targett Fry M.A. of Exeter College, Oxford. There is a place of worship for Baptists and a Wesleyan chapel. The local charities include one producing about £60 a year, of which £40 is applied towards the support of the day school and the remainder expended on the poor and the church repairs; there is another producing £14 yearly, which is applied in placing out children of the parish as apprentices. The trustees of the Kislingbury charity estate are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Mr. Thomas Dunkley, Mr. Thomas Simons, Mr. R. C. Westley and the trustees of the late Mr. Charles H. Watts. The soil is marl and clay; subsoil, stone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and potatoes. The area is about 2,170 acres; rateable value, £4,314: the population in 1881 was 695.

LAMPFORT with the Hamlet of HANGING HOUGHTON.

LAMPFORT is a parish and village on the east side of and adjacent to the high road from Northampton to Market Harborough, 8 miles north from Northampton, 9 south-west from Kettering, 9 south from Market Harborough and 74 from London, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Orlingbury, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. The Northampton and Market Harborough branch of the London and North Western railway has a station near the village. The church of All Saints is a small, low and ancient building of stone, in the Gothic and Italian styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 4 bells and a clock: in the church are several monuments to the Isham family. The register dates from the year 1628. The living is a rectory, with that of Faxton annexed, tithe rent-charge here, £717, joint gross yearly value £1,047, including 60 acres of glebe at this place, with residence, in the gift of Sir Charles Edmund Isham bart. and held since 1845 by the Rev. Robert Isham M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. Lampfort Hall, the seat of Sir Charles Edmund Isham bart. M.A., D.L. lord of the manor and principal landowner, is a mansion of stone, situated in grounds of about 20 acres. The soil is red loam; subsoil, clay. The area is 1,440 acres, chiefly grazing land; rateable value, £3,055: the population in 1881 was 165.

LAXTON is a small parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, union of Uppingham, county court district of Oundle, rural deanery of Oundle second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 6 miles south-east from Uppingham, 8 north-west from Oundle and 3 east from Harringworth station, on the London and North Western railway, near the road from Stamford to Kettering. The church of All Saints is an edifice in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with spire containing 1 bell: the church was restored and enlarged in 1867-8, chiefly at the cost of Lord Carbery; the whole structure was new roofed and refloored and a new font and other fittings introduced. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1569; marriages, 1756. The living was previous to 1851 a donative, but is now a vicarage, net yearly value £100 with residence, in the gift of Lord Carbery, and now vacant. Laxton Hall, the seat of Lord Carbery, is a mansion remarkable for its fine Ionic portico and vestibule; the latter was erected after a design by George Dance, architect, in the last century: the hall contains a very fine collection of pictures, chiefly by the old masters: the park, which is about 250 acres in extent is well wooded and beautifully situated on rising ground. Lord Carbery is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clay; subsoil, oolite. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans &c. The area is 1,279A. 2R. 11P.; rateable value, £1,288; the population in 1881 was 100.

LILBOURNE is a parish and village situated on the western borders of the county and on the borders of Warwickshire and Leicestershire, and separated from the latter county by the river Avon, which flows through the parish; it is 4 miles east from Rugby and 6 south from Lutterworth, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Guilsborough, union and county court district of Rugby, rural deanery of Haddon (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The Rugby and Stamford branch of the London and North Western railway has a station called Lilbourne, 1 mile north from the village, in Catthorpe parish, Leicestershire. The church of All Saints is a building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a low embattled western tower containing 5 bells: the church is in a very dilapidated state and much needs restoration, for which funds are being raised. The register dates from the year 1573. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value from 64 acres of glebe, about £164 with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor and held by the Rev. Robert Bowen Lynch. Here is a small Wesleyan chapel. Here are 40 acres of land, about half the rent of which now amounting to £60 a year is distributed to the poor in the months of May and November, the remainder being applied to school purposes and to the repairs of church, in accordance with a scheme approved by the Charity Commissioners. In a field at the east end of the church, and separated from it by a road, are three tumuli, supposed to be of British construction, upon each of which was a fort or tower and between them a stronghold or castle; in the twelfth century the castle was taken down and the present parish church built with part of the material. The principal landed proprietors are Lord Bray, who is lord of the manor, Jinks Howkins esq. of Lilbourne, Mr. Thomas Gilberts of Swinford, Mrs. Hughes, Henry Harper, Mrs. Bucknell and the Clifton Charity. The land is principally used for grazing. The soil is part clay and part light soil. The area of the parish is 1,624A. 2R. 5P.; gross estimated rental, £3,769; rateable value, £3,285; the population in 1881 was 266.

LILFORD-CUM-WIGSTHORPE is a parish on the east bank of the Nene, 3 miles south-by-west from Oundle and 1 mile west from the Barnwell station, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Huxloe, though locally in that of Polbrook, union and county court district of Oundle, rural deanery of Oundle second, archdeaconry of Oulham, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Peter was pulled down towards the end of the last century, when the vicarage of Lilford-cum-Wigsthorpe was annexed to the rectory of Thorpe-Achurch and the monuments of Sir Thomas Powys, Justice of the King's Bench, 1719; and the Hons. Charles Powys R.S. 1804 and Henry Powys, 1812, were taken from Lilford church and re-erected in the church at Achurch: three arches from Lilford church were built up in the woods below Achurch, looking towards the river Nene. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, annexed to the rectory of Thorpe-Achurch, joint gross yearly value £380, in the gift of Lord Lilford, and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Percy Powys M.A. of University College, Oxford, who resides at Achurch. Ragdale's charity of £1 yearly is for distribution. Lilford Hall, the seat of Lord Lilford D.L., J.P. is a handsome edifice in the Elizabethan style, erected, it is said, from the designs of Inigo Jones, and pleasantly situated churchyard wall is an ancient stone, with large and small crosses very roughly cut round it; its history is unknown. The register dates from the year 1622. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £384; gross yearly value £504, including glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Wakefield Suft Meade M.A. of Clare College, Cambridge. Here is a small chapel which is used by dissenters of all denominations. There are ten acres of poor's land, the rent of which, now amounting to £15 yearly, is distributed to the poor in coals about Christmas; in 1684 Mr. Frances Syers gave fifty-two shillings yearly to buy bread for the poor of this parish. The old Manor House, or Hall, is a beautiful Elizabethan building, is now occupied by John Thomas Fryer esq. farmer: this manor has been successively held by families of De Baud, Kinnesman, Syers and Alliocke; the present lord is Colonel Sir Robert Jas. Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone; the lordship was enclosed during the Commonwealth, and a composition was made at that time with the rector to take 1s. 6d. per acre in lieu of tithes; this arrangement was overturned in the Court of Exchequer by the Rev. G. E. Hammer in 1820, and the great tithes restored to the rector. The principal landowners are Col. Sir Robert J. Loyd-Lindsay and the trustees of the late Charles L. Higgins esq. of Turvey House, Bedfordshire. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The soil is red loam; subsoil, clay. The area is 1,206 acres; rateable value, £2,254; the population in 1881 was about 248.

School, erected by the Rev. T. W. Carr, a former rector, for 78 children; average attendance, 30; there is a house for the teacher; Miss Isabella Laidlaw, certificated mistress. In 1705 Mrs. Sarah Wykes gave by will fifty shillings yearly to maintain in this parish a school for four boys.

CARRIER.—John Buggs, to Market Harborough, Tues. at 9 a.m. returning at 4 p.m.; to Kettering, Fri. at 11 a.m. returning at 4.30 p.m.; to Northampton, Sat. at 8 a.m. returning at 4 p.m.

1873 by the Rev. William Lucas Collins M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford, hon. canon of Peterborough, and also vicar of Sipton. The poor's land of 7 acres produces £22 yearly, which is distributed yearly in grants to sick and aged and deserving poor. Drayton House, the seat of Mrs. Stopford-Sackville, niece of the last Duke of Dorset, situated in a park near the village, is a mansion of stone, displaying in the north front the characteristics of the Tudor period, but the building generally exhibits a great variety of style; the chief entrance on the south side is formed by handsome wrought iron gates opening upon a spacious quadrangular court, with a drive round a lawn in the centre; the building at the farther end of this court is embattled and has a rusticated arch forming the entrance to a second court, and at the end is a rich façade of the Corinthian order, in the centre of which is the entrance, approached by a flight of steps; the angles of the court are filled with rusticated piers, above which may be seen the embattled tower of the original Tudor building; two large towers of that age are now terminated by cupolas and vanes; the park extends over 220 acres. Mrs. Stopford-Sackville is lady of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is mixed; subsoil, clay and rock, with a little ironstone. The chief crops are hay, wheat, barley, beans and turnips. The area is 2,200 acres; rateable value, £2,993; and the population in 1881 was 390.

borough, rural deanery of Peterborough first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 4½ miles northwest-by-west from Peterborough and $\frac{1}{2}$ west from the Walton station on the Midland railway. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone, in the Norman, Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and embattled western tower, containing 1 bell: the aisles were added at the restoration of the church in 1868; there were aisles previous to the fifteenth century, but they were destroyed about 1480: the nave is Early English and the tower chiefly Norman: the windows are very fine, some with portions of stained glass; and under the south-east arch of the nave arcade is the recumbent effigy of a knight in plate armour, with tunic and collar of SS, on a finely-carved panelled altar tomb, and believed to represent Sir John de Wittelburk kt. lord of the Manor of Marholm, temp. Richard II. and Henry IV.; the tomb was formerly much mutilated, but has been restored: the chancel is Perpendicular, and the open roof is decorated with a few helmets and small arms; against the north wall two brass effigies standing erect, under a canopy, of a knight in a surcoat and his lady in a mantle, emblazoned with the Fitzwilliam and other arms, these represents Sir William Fytzwilliams kt. 1534, and his wife; from the mouth of each proceeds a label, upon which is written "Prohibere nefas;" this monument was repaired and beautified in 1674; on the opposite side is an altar tomb upon which are recumbent effigies, carved in chisel and coloured, of Sir William Fitzwilliam kt. 1599, and Ann, his wife, 1603; on the north wall is a magnificent marble monument, richly carved with life-size standing effigies of William Earl Fitzwilliam, 1719, and Anna, his wife, 1717; inserted in the south wall is a brass plate inscribed to Charles William, 5th Earl Fitzwilliam K.G. 1857: the church was restored in 1868 by the surviving members of the Fitzwilliam family. The register dates from the year 1566. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £311, gross yearly value £315, including 4 acres of glebe with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. MARSTON ST. LAWRENCE is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, Brackley union and county court district, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, $\frac{5}{8}$ miles north-west from Brackley, $\frac{5}{8}$ north-east from Banbury and 2 north from Farthinghoe station. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient edifice of stone, in mixed styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock: in the chancel are several monuments to the Blencowe family, a piscina and sedilia; the stained east window of four lights is a memorial to the late Mrs. Blencowe, mother of the vicar: the church was thoroughly restored in 1877-8, at a cost of £1,800, under the direction of Mr. H. Rouniey Gough, architect, of London, when the western gallery was removed and the lower portion of the tower converted into a vestry and separated from the nave by an ancient and richly-carved screen, dated 1610, and formerly serving as a reredos: a new north porch was also built, the chancel roofed anew with oak, and the interior completely refloored and refitted: the east end of the north aisle forms a chapel, partly enclosed by a carved oak screen, and retains a piscina, and the east and west windows of the aisle are stained: in the south aisle is a curious ambury: on the north side of the churchyard is a yew tree, with a trunk 10 feet in diameter. The register of baptisms and marriages dates from the year 1653; burials, 1664; and includes that of Warkworth. The living is a vicarage, consolidated with the rectory of Warkworth, joint gross yearly value £570 with residence, in the gift of John Alexander Blencowe esq. and held since 1876 by the Rev. Charles Edward Blencowe M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. John Alexander Blencowe esq. is lord of the manor and the principal landowner: his seat, the Manor House, which stands in extensive grounds, has received extensive additions and improvements: the dining room, which contains numerous family portraits, as well as other rooms, contains some fine oak carving, some of which is of the same date as that in the church: the Blencowe family have been resident at Marston since the reign of Henry VI. The chief crops are wheat, beans, barley and roots. The area is 1,876 acres; rateable value, £3,992; the population in 1881 was 416.

Westhorpe is a hamlet 1 mile east from the village and adjoining that of Greatworth.

MARSTON TRUSSELL is a parish and village on the border of Leicestershire, 3 miles west from Market Harborough and 12 north-west from Kettering, in the Northern division of the county, Rothwell hundred, union and county court district of Market Harborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Nicholas is a building of stone, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western embattled tower with pinnacles, containing 5 bells; in the middle mullion of the bell chamber window are a series of six "Merchants' marks," very deeply cut, and probably of the fourteenth century: on the north side of the chancel is a monument with kneeling effigy to Mark Brewster, of London, who died at Moscow in 1612: the east window is stained. The register dates from the year 1561. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £600, including 313 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of and held since 1842 by the Rev. William Law B.A. of Queens' College, Cambridge. The poor have £5 5s. yearly. The Hall, the seat of Barwell Ewins Bennett esq. is an old Elizabethan mansion, to the west side of which considerable additions were made by the present proprietor about 1853: it adjoins the village, and on the south side is a sheet of water studded with islands. The principal landed proprietors are Barwell Ewins Bennett esq. who is lord of the manor, and Hugh Stratford Stratford esq.

The soil, of great depth and richness, is fine grazing land; subsoil, strong tenacious clay. The area is 1,317A. 1R. 7P.; rateable value, £2,833; the population in 1881 was 206.

MAXEY, with DEEPING GATE.

MAXEY (or MAKESFYE), a straggling village on the south bank of the river Welland, which separates it from Lincolnshire, and parish, 1½ miles north from Helston station on the Midland railway, [about 1 mile south-west from Market Deeping, 8 miles east from Stamford and 8 north-west from Peterborough, in the Northern division of the county, Peterborough liberty, union and county court district, rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, and includes the hamlet of Deeping Gate. The church of St. Peter and St. Paul, situated at a considerable distance from the village of Maxey, stands on the great level of the Fen, that site having been raised as a precaution against the floods which formerly inundated the district: it is an edifice in the Norman, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, with north chantry, clerestoried nave, aisles, and an embattled western tower of three stages containing 6 bells: some of the piers and arches and two stages of the tower, enriched with billet moulding and arcading, are Norman, but the belfry stage of the tower is Perpendicular: the chancel retains a piscina, three fine sedilia, two lockers and a low side window, and the arch between the north aisle and the chantry beyond it has rich hanging tracery: the chantry has also a piscina and a third remains where was once the rood loft: at the south-east angle of the chancel is a small chamber, six feet square, with a stone groined roof: on the floor are stones inscribed to Thomas Anable, 1402, and John de Bykkyr, of the fourteenth century: the church was restored in 1863-4, and will seat 200 persons. The register, including Deeping Gate, dates for marriages and burials from the year 1538; baptisms, 1552. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value £262, including 156 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, and held since 1881 by the Rev. Walter Debenham Sweeting M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a small Congregational chapel, erected in 1809, and rebuilt in 1862. The charities amount to about £60 yearly, derived from land and cottages in the parish, left by Susan Worsley in 1662; Mary Walsham in 1745; and Jane Dunning in 1623. Lollham Bridges, the ruins of eleven arches of which still remain, are of great antiquity, and are supposed to have formed part of a viaduct built by the Romans for the purpose of carrying Ermine Street over the low grounds adjoining the river Welland. The Lady Margaret, Countess of Richmond, had a moated dwelling or castle at a point now called Castle End; but except part of the excavation for the moat no vestiges are now remaining. Dr. James, author of "James on the Collects," was vicar here from 1822 to 1850. The trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is principally fen, but in parts clay and gravel may be found; subsoil, strong clay. The chief crops are wheat, oats, barley and beans. The area is 2,280 acres; rateable value, £3,930; the population of Maxey in 1881 was 380, and of Deeping Gate, 212.

Deeping Gate is a hamlet (about 1½ miles north-east from Maxey) situated on the south bank of the river Welland, which separates this county from Lincolnshire, lying parallel throughout its whole extent to Market Deeping and Deeping St. James, on the opposite bank in Lincolnshire. At the west extremity is a handsome bridge leading into Market Deeping and towards the eastern extremity is another picturesque bridge leading into Deeping St. James.

MEARS ASHEY is a compact and pleasant village and parish 7 miles north-east from Northampton and 4 west from Wellingborough, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Hamfordshoe, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of All Saints is a substantial building of stone, consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and a low embattled western tower with pinnacles and containing 4 bells: the clerestory windows and the north aisle are Late Perpendicular, the tower Early English and the remainder of the church is in the Transition and Decorated styles; the chancel retains a piscina and credence; there is also a piscina at the east end of the south aisle: the whole of the church was restored in 1833, at a cost of about £1,700, and re-opened February 25rd, 1859; during the restoration a fresco was discovered over the chancel arch, depicting the Resurrection and the Last Judgment: the Decorated east window of three lights is stained and there are three other stained windows, one of which, erected in 1874, at the east end of the south aisle, is a memorial to Mrs. Newby and her son, the late vicar. The register dates from the year 1642. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £300, including 154 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Winchester College (who hold the great tithes in trust for exhibitions), Sir James Langham and the Newby family alternately, and held since 1874 by the Rev. Henry Bowmar M.A. of Lincoln College, Oxford. Here is a

Wesleyan Methodist chapel. Miss Sarah Kinloch, by will dated 16th June, 1710, gave £200 to be laid out in the purchase of land, the proceeds to be applied in educating the poor children of this parish; the lands, 24a. 3s. 25p. situate in Langborough Field, Arthingworth, now produce £60 yearly. There are several charities, one of which, of £18 a year arising from rent of land together with the rent of five houses, is for the repair of causeways and bridges. The Hall, rebuilt in 1637 by Mr. Clendon, was enlarged in 1859, when materials of a much older fabric were found to have been used in rebuilding; it is a noble mansion of stone in the Elizabethan style, pleasantly situated, surrounded with lawns and commands a fine view of woodland scenery: it is now the residence of Henry Minshull Stockdale esq. D.L., J.P. Mrs. Newsam is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are H. M. Stockdale esq., D.L., Col. Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone, Thomas Mercer esq. and the impropiators of the rectorial tithes.

MIDDLETON CHENEY is a considerable village and parish: the village is divided into two parts, called the Upper and Lower, and is 3 miles east-by-north from Banbury and 6 north-west from Brackley, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Banbury, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, on the road from Banbury to Brackley. The Highway Board hold their meetings every alternate month. The church of All Saints is a spacious edifice of stone in the Decorated style prevailing about the commencement of the fourteenth century and consists of chancel with vestries, clerestoried nave, aisles, a rich south porch and a lofty embattled western tower with pinnacles containing a clock and 6 bells and surmounted by a graceful spire rising to a height of nearly 200 feet; the porch is of fine Decorated work, with a lofty gabled roof; the doorways of the porch and tower are richly ornamented: in the chancel is a piscina and a singular double locker or sunbury; the stained east window is a memorial to William F. Croome M.R.C.S. who died in 1865, and was erected by his widow; in the north aisle are two stained windows, the gift of the late Miss Horton; the west window and the south window of the chancel are also stained, the latter being a memorial to Archdeacon Churton, formerly rector here; the maorial pew still remains at the east end of the north aisle; in the south vestry is a mural tablet with quaint inscription to John Barksdale esq. 1701; in the north vestry is a piscina; the church was restored in 1865, at a cost of nearly £3,000, under the direction of the late Sir G. G. Scott M.A. the churchyard being at the same time enlarged. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £460, arising from nearly 318 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Principal and fellows of Brasenose College, Oxford, and held since 1853 by the Rev. William Edward Buckley M.A. formerly fellow of that college, and professor of Anglo-Saxon. Here are Baptist, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels. Charities.—Mr. William Taylor in 1622 gave land now (1885) producing £60 yearly; with this charity is incorporated a benefaction left in 1701 by John Barksdale esq.; the Rev. Richard Garnett, formerly rector here, left in 1764 a sum of £200, of which £50 was expended in the purchase of communion plate and the remainder invested in government securities, producing about £6 yearly; Mr. Joyce

The soil is partly red land and part clay; subsoil, ironstone, clay and freestone. The chief crops are cereals. The area is 1,890 acres; rateable value, £2,681; the population in 1881 was 504.

MILTON (or MIDDLETON MALSOR) is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wynersey, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 14 miles from Blisworth station on the London and North Western railway, 3½ miles south-by-west from Northampton, on the road to Towcester. The Northampton canal crosses the north-western part of this parish. The church of the Holy Cross is a building of stone consisting of chancel, nave with clerestory, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles and spire, and containing 5 bells and a clock; the chancel was restored in 1878 and in 1880 the church underwent thorough restoration, when it was new roofed, the chancel repaired and a reredos erected and the interior reseated throughout, at a total cost of about £2,000, raised by subscription; in the chancel is a mural monument to Dame Jane, daughter of Sir Wm. Samwell knt. and wife of Sir Sapoteas Harington, of Milton, knt. 2 sons and 3 daughters, she died March 10th, 1619; in the north aisle is an incised wall tablet to Wm. Dry, yeoman, lord of a manor in this town called "Mantellis parson," he died Sept. 30th, 1637; the church will seat 360 persons. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, net yearly value £250, including 191 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. T. A. Kershaw, and held since 1872 by the Rev. John Brown M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford. There are Baptists and Primitive Methodists chapels here. There is an estate of 18 acres of land and 4 cottages in this parish for church purposes; and now producing £50 a year: the charities for distribution in food amount to £13 yearly, of which £7 is derived from land and the rent of two cottages and £6 from consols. The manors of Milton and Collingtree have long been united. There are two manor houses, both in the parish of Milton, one belonging to Mr. Jas. Asplin and the other belonging to the three daughters of the late John Dent, esq. namely, Mrs. E. R. Trestrail, Miss C. Dent and Mrs. H. D. Adkins; manorial rights are attached to the ownership of both these houses and their connected estates. Wm. Oliver Harris esq. and Mrs. Dent are the principal landowners, but the land is principally held in small freeholds. The soil is light loam; subsoil, clay and sand. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass. The area is about 1,418 acres; rateable value £5,815; the population in 1881 was 728.

MORTON PINKNEY is a parish and village with a station on the East and West Junction railway, which runs from Stratford-on-Avon to Blisworth, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Green's Norton, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley first, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 8 miles west from Towcester and 9 north from Brackley. Passenger traffic which has for the last six years been suspended, on the East and West Junction railway, was resumed on the 2nd March, 1885; the line has been relaid throughout with steel rails, and is being extended to Olney; the extension is expected to be completed in Sept. 1885. The church of St. Mary is an ancient building of stone in mixed styles consisting of a chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches, and a low embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock; the chancel was rebuilt in 1845 by the impropriators and the church restored, re-seated and floored by the parishioners; at the south-east angle of the nave is a piscina and in the chancel another of handsome character: an addition, one-eighth of an acre, the gift of the late Baroness Sempill was made to the churchyard in 1876; there are sittings for 200 persons. The register dates from the year 1641. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £240 with residence, in the gift of the Provost and fellows of Oriel College, Oxford, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Robert Dusautoy White M.A. of that college. Here is a Baptist chapel. The charities consist of twelve acres of land, the rent of which, with other bequests, now amounting together to about £23, is distributed among the poor. At the south-west extremity of the village is a strong chalybeate spring issuing from the centre of the road.

Lace making is carried on here. The old manor house, now called Morton Pinkney Manor, was the seat of the late Baroness Sempill, but is now the property of Admiral the Hon. George Grey: it is an ancient building decorated with the shields of the families of Cope and Candler, and in 1860 was restored and considerably enlarged, and is approached from the village by a lodge, above the gates of which are the armorial bearings of the Sempills in stone. The Duke of Grafton K.O., C.B., J.P. who is lord of the manor, Admiral the Hon. George Grey, John Checkley, George Thomason, G. Branson and T. R. Pratt, of Daventry, esqrs. are the principal landowners. The soil varies, but is principally light; subsoil, limestone. The chief crops are wheat and beans, with a fair proportion of pasture. The area is 2,422 acres; the rateable value is £3,654; the population in 1881 was 445.

MOULTON is a large village and parish 4 miles north-east from Northampton and 8 west-south-west from Wellinborough, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelhoe, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, situate near the road from Northampton to Kettering. The church of SS. Peter and Paul is an edifice of stone, in the Norman, Transitional and Later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a lofty embattled western tower containing 6 bells: the tower consists of three Decorated stages above which has been added an early Perpendicular belfry of much elegance; both north and south doorways to the roof left remain, and the chancel and both aisles retain piscinæ; the clerestory and porch were added in the fourteenth century: in 1380 the tower was new roofed, at a cost of £50, and the wall enclosing the south and east sides of the churchyard rebuilt, at a cost of £60, including new gates: in 1834 the bells were re-hung, the interior of the tower restored, the clock repaired and a new clock floor re-laid, at a cost of £200: the church is about to undergo a thorough restoration, under the direction of Mr. E. Law, architect, of Northampton, at an estimated cost of about £3,500. The register dates from the year 1565. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge, £3 net yearly value £320, including 188 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Rev. Thomas Andrew Walker M.A. vicar of Barkingside, Ilford, and held since 1878 by the Rev. Onebye Robert Walker M.A. St. John's College, Oxford. Here are Wesleyan, Primitive Methodist and Baptist chapels. There are several schools here for instructing girls in making lace. A cemetery of 2 acres was formed in 1831, at a cost of £300, and is under the control of a Burial Board of 5 members. There are several important charities, the most valuable of which arises from 39a. 18. 7p. of land, situated to the north of the parish of Moulton, 2a. 38p. in that of Holcot, 28. 14p. in the village and 2a. 25p. at Nortol, in the parish of Guilsborough, but there is a mortgage of £2,000 at 4½ per cent. upon this property under a decree of the Court of Chancery; the present rental is £129 yearly: Mills's charity consists of £44 invested in the New £3 per Cents, and from the interest, twenty wheaten twelve-penny loaves are given on St. Stephen's day, to church widows and other old people who come to church, and 6s. 8d. to the vicar for preaching a sermon. Miss Martha Spraggett's charity consists of £54 18. 8d. in the New £3 per Cents, of which the interest is annually divided on the 1st of January, equally between the National school and church widows; the minister and churchwardens are the trustees of both these charities. Holly Lodge, the seat and property of Philadelphus Jeyes esq. is a handsome mansion of stone, erected in 1861, and standing in grounds of about 40 acres, 3 miles north from Northampton; Moulton Grange, the seat and property of Henry Osmond Nethercote esq. D.L., J.P. is a residence situate about 6 miles north-east from Northampton. The Spectacles, a stone arch near to Holly Lodge, was erected by Lord Strafford about a century since. The principal land-owners are Col. Sir Robert J. Loyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone, who is lord of the manor, and Henry Osmond Nethercote esq. D.L., J.P. The soil is clay and marl; sub-soil, ironstone and rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas, beans and grass. The area is 2,970 acres; rateable value, £6,742; the population in 1881 was 1,483.

MOULTON PARK, now a parish, was formerly extra-parochial and once a royal park: it consists of 450 acres enclosed by a stone wall and bounded on the north by Broughton, on the east by Moulton, on the south by Abington, on the west by Kingsthorpe and is in the Brixworth union. Moulton Park formerly the seat and property of the late Lieut.-Col. Sir John Blencowe Robinson bart. J.P., is a mansion of stone situated about 2½ miles north-north-east from Northampton, and is now occupied as a convalescent asylum in connection with St. Andrew's Lunatic Hospital, Northampton; inatron, Mrs. Mary Grant. Moulton working men's club and coffee-room, erected at a cost of £500, were opened in 1881. Rateable value, £712; population in 1881 was 45.

NASEBY is a parish and village situated on the highest land in the county, the stream which forms the principal source of the river Nene passes through here and the spring of the Avon rises in the garden of the Fitzgerald Arms, opposite the church. The village is $\frac{3}{4}$ miles south-east from Welford, $\frac{5}{8}$ miles south-east from Welford and Kilworth railway stations, $\frac{7}{8}$ south-south-west from Market Harborough, $\frac{1}{2}$ north-north-west from Northampton, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Guilsborough, union of Brixworth, county court district of Market Harborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of All Saints is a building of stone, consisting of chancel, clerestory nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with spire containing a clock and 5 bells; it was thoroughly restored in 1860, when the tower and spire were rebuilt: in the tower is a memorial window to the Rev. James Jones and in the chancel one to Edward Waring Ashby, who died at school, 5th Dec. 1872: the old copper ball, formerly surmounting a wooden staff or post on the top of the spire, and placed there about 1790 by George Ashby esq. was taken down on the restoration of the church in 1861 and presented by the parish to G. A. Ashby esq.; this relic was brought by Sir Gyles Aylington from Boulogne, when that place was taken in 1544, and was first placed on the copula of his house at Horsheath, Cambs; but on the dismantling of this building, it was purchased by Mr. Ashby; it will hold, it is said, 60 gallons. There are sittings for 400 persons. The register dates from the year 1563. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £120, including 30 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of G. A. Ashby esq. of Naseby Woodleys, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Samuel Henry Tomes, of Queen's College, Birmingham. There is a small Wesleyan chapel. Here are 12 acres of land now (1885) unlet and some cottages, the rent of which, estimated at £44, is applied for the repairs of the church. A village reading room was opened here, March 25th, 1884; A. P. Houghton, hon. sec. On the left hand side of the road leading to Sibbertoft, and about a mile from the village of Naseby, is the site on which was fought, 14th June, 1645, the memorable battle of Naseby; a square stone obelisk commemorative of the battle was erected in 1823, about a mile from the battlefield, by John Fitzgerald esq. and Mrs. Mary Frances Fitzgerald. At the east entrance of the village is a plain stone column, said to have been formerly the ancient market cross, which was removed in 1869 from its old site close by the churchyard and a new stone cross erected in its place. Naseby Woodleys, the seat of George Ashby Ashby esq. D.L., J.P. is a handsome building of stone, situated about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-west from the village. The only proprietors are Viscount Clifden, of Holdenby house, who is lord of the manor, and G. A. Ashby esq. D.L., J.P. The land is pasture and arable. The soil is clay and gravel. The parish contains 3,690 acres; rateable value, £5,207; the population in 1881 was 610.

NASSINGHAM is a parish in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Willsbrook, union and county court district of Oundle, rural deanery of Oundle (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, $\frac{5}{8}$ miles north from Oundle, with a station on the Wansford and Seaton branch of the London and North Western railway. The parish is separated from Elton, Hunts, by the Nene. The church of All Saints is an edifice of stone, dating from the Early Norman period, and consists of chancel, nave, with embattled clerestory, aisles, north porch of Early English date and an embattled western tower with crocketed spire and containing 5 bells, with some indications of Saxon work, and also affords excellent examples of every style of architecture down to Late Perpendicular: the tower aisles are also uncommon: the nave roof is very fine; in the churchyard stands part of the shaft of a cross: the church is now (1885) being restored, at a cost of upwards of £1,000: some ancient stained glass remains in the tracery of the windows in the south aisle: there is also a most interesting Jacobean pulpit with hour glass stand attached and a carved stone font; there are remains of frescoes in various parts of the church: a peculiar feature of the chancel is that the floor falls eastward. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a discharged vicarage with the chapelry of Yarwell attached, gross yearly value £315, including 110 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1879 by the Rev. Daniel William Barrett M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin, and rural dean of Oundle (second portion). A Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1875, at a cost of £700, and there is also a Congregational chapel. A cemetery of one acre was formed in 1882, at a cost of about £400 for this and the adjoining parish of Yarwell: there is a mortuary chapel in connection with the cemetery, which is under the control of a Burial Board of 12 members. A sum of £2 yearly from Lady Grace Midway's charity is applied to the apprenticing of children of this parish: £5 10s. the rent of the poor's land, is distributed yearly. The Earl of Westmorland C.B., D.L., J.P. of Apeothorpe, to whom the manor belongs, and the Earl of Carysfort M.A., D.L., J.P. of Elton Hall, Peterborough, are the largest landowners. The soil is principally arable. The chief crops are wheat, barley, turnips, oats and beans. The area is 2,397A. 1R. 17P.; rateable value, £4,093; the population in 1881 was 713.

SULEBRAY LODGE, of OLD SULEBRAY, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north, formerly extra-parochial, was in 1865 annexed to this parish, but the area is returned with Yarwell.

NEWBOTTLE with CHARLTON.

NEWBOTTLE is a parish 2 miles east from King's Sutton station, 2½ south from Farthinghoe station and 3½ north-west from Brackley, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, union and county court district of Brackley, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The parishes of Newbottle and King's Sutton with their hamlets are now united for all civil purposes. The church of St. James is a building of stone in the Norman and later styles and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and a low western tower containing 2 bells; in the south aisle is a monument to John Creswell esq. who died 21st May, 1704; the busts of himself and his lady, in white marble, rest upon a projecting table, above which is a shield of arms; in the chancel are brasses with effigies to Peter Dormer, 1555, his 2 wives and 19 children; a stained window was placed in the south aisle in the year 1867, by the late Samuel Priestley Salisbury esq. to the memory of his wife and two daughters; there is an old Norman font without any ornament whatever; the chancel retains a piscina of Early English date; the pulpit bears the date 1567; the church was restored and resealed in 1866. The register dates from the year 1553. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £170, net yearly value including 54 acres of glebe £230 with residence, in the gift of William Cornwallis Cartwright esq. M.P. and held since 1873 by the Rev. William Noble M.A. of Merton College, Oxford. Cartwright's charity of £2 5s. 4d. is for bread. The principal landowners are William Cornwallis Cartwright esq. M.P., D.L., J.P. who is lord of the manor, Frederick Jaques Myers esq. and John Haddon esq. The Manor House, a small structure, is situated near the church. The soil is of a brashy nature; sub-soil, limestone. The chief crops are turnips, barley, clover and wheat. The area is 1,684 acres; rateable value, £3,491; the population in 1881 was 514.

Astrop is a hamlet partly in this parish and partly in that of King's Sutton; particulars and residents are given with the latter.

Charlton is a hamlet in the parishes of Newbottle and King's Sutton, about three quarters of a mile south from the former place. Here is a Congregational chapel. At Charlton Hill is an ancient fortification and encampment called Rainsborough. Charlton Lodge, the seat of Frederick Jaques Myers esq. is situated south of the village. A sun of 169 12s. 10d. yearly derived from Consols left by a Mr. Gilkes of Charlton, and furnished by the Charity Commissioners who are now the trustees, is distributed in meat to the poor of this township at Christmas.

NORTHAMPTON.

NORTHAMPTON is the county town, municipal and parliamentary borough, head of a union and county court district and polling place for the Southern division of the county, 66 miles from London, on the road to Leicester and 69 by the London and North Western railway, 21 north-west from Bedford, 47 south-west from Huntingdon, 25 south-east from Rugby, 46 south-west from Peterborough and 46 from Leicester. The town is pleasantly situated on a gentle ascent from the northern bank of the river Nene. In the Saxon Chronicle it is written Hamtune; in Domesday Book, Northantone; it is probably of British origin; and on the division of the kingdom into shires was of sufficient importance to give its name to one of these. In the reign of Edward the Elder it was held by the Danes, and in the year 1010, after suffering severely from the desolating struggles between these invaders and the English, it was almost ruined by the Danish troops, who, in their ravages throughout the kingdom, burnt the town and nearly depopulated the adjacent county. About the year 1008 Northampton began to assume a superiority to the rest of the towns in the county, and from its central situation and the security of its fortifications it became the occasional residence of several of the kings; Henry I. in the twenty-third year of his reign, celebrated the festival of Easter here with great pomp and in 1137 assembled a parliament in which the English barons swore homage to his daughter the Empress Matilda, whom he appointed his successor. In 1637 the Court of Eyre for the forests was held here under Henry (Rich) Earl of Holland &c. as chief justice and head of the commission, assisted by a number of the judges and many of the nobility and gentry. During the Parliamentary war Lord Brooke took possession of the town, which he fortified for the Parliament; in 1675 it was nearly destroyed by a fire which was first discovered at noon, when a strong west wind arose which blew the flames to some thatched buildings in St. Mary street, and being carried thence to the back of the Horse market, spread its ravages to Derngate, nearly half a mile from where it began; so that by four o'clock p.m. upwards of 600 houses wherein dwelt above 700 families, were consumed, besides the parish church of All Saints; the damage was estimated at £150,000; the town, however, soon recovered from this calamity and the Earl of Northampton having obtained an Act of Parliament for rebuilding it the sum of £25,000 was raised by subscription and the King contributed a thousand tons of timber and seven years' chimney money collected within the town.

The town consists principally of two spacious and regular streets nearly a mile in length, which, intersecting each other at right angles, divide it into four nearly equal parts; the houses principally of stone are well built, and the town is paved and lighted with gas by a company incorporated by Act of Parliament. The water supply is in the hands of the Corporation, and very considerable extensions are now (1885) in progress, which when completed will ensure an abundant supply, even should the town double its present size.

The inhabitants received a charter of incorporation from Henry II. which was confirmed in several succeeding reigns and modified and enlarged in the 36th Geo. III.; under this charter the borough was governed until superseded by the Municipal Act of 1835, which vested the government in a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, with the usual assistant officers, under the style of the Mayor, Bailiffs and Burgesses of Northampton. The same Act divided the borough into three wards and provided it with a commission of the peace, under which the regular petty sessions and quarterly courts of session are held; the county assizes are also held here. The corporation also hold a court of record for the recovery of debts to any amount and for determining pleas and act further as the Urban Sanitary Authority.

The borough has sent two members to Parliament from the commencement of the reign of Edward I.; and the return of representatives for the Southern division of the county is made from this town. Northampton confers the titles of Earl and Marquis on the family of Compton. The municipal and parliamentary boroughs are not co-extensive; the parliamentary borough including in addition parts of the parishes of Dallington, Dunston, Hardingstone and Kingsthorpe. The Boundary Act, 1869, extended the borough to its present limits.

A branch canal was constructed in 1815 from the river Nene to the Grand Junction canal; the branch railway from Blisworth station on the London and North Western line to Peterborough passes through this town there is also a line to Market Harborough and Stamford and branching from this line is one which is the most direct road from London to York; the London and North Western loop line from Roade to Rugby runs through Northampton, thus making four lines between London and Rugby; there is also a line to Bedford connecting the Midland with Northampton; by these means a facility of communication is obtained with every part of the kingdom which has added much to the prosperity of this town. In 1881 railways of about 5 miles in extent were laid down from St. James' end, west of the town to the racecourse on the east, and from the Drapery in the centre to Kingsthorpe; the whole system was transferred January 1st, 1884, from the contractors to a company by whom it is now worked.

The town comprises the parishes of All Saints, St. Giles,

St. Peter and St. Sepulchre, each having a church, with the parish of The Priory of St. Andrew which has been formed into an ecclesiastical parish, all in the rural deanery and archdeaconry of Northampton and diocese of Peterborough. There were formerly seven parochial churches within the walls and two without, four only of which are now remaining; there are also other ecclesiastical districts which are not co-terminous with the old parishes, for which churches have been or are being built.

The church of All Saints is a spacious edifice situated in the centre of the town, rebuilt after the fire 1675, the ancient tower and the crypt under the chancel being incorporated in the new work: the nave forms a square, the centre of which is covered by a dome supported on four large Ionic columns: the chancel is without aisles, panelled in dark oak and on the east wall are two valuable pictures of Moses and Aaron by Sir Godfrey Kneller; the screen which formerly separated it from the nave was removed in 1865: the very large and fine old organ has lately been removed from the west gallery and placed in an organ chamber, built on the north side of the chancel: the ancient tower, originally central, is now at the west end, its lower stage is Norman and the upper part of the Decorated period; it is surmounted by a wooden cupola and contains 8 bells and a clock, with an illuminated dial attached to the western face of the tower, is a classic portico supported by twelve Ionic columns in front of which is placed a statue of Charles II. with an inscription reciting his benefactions to the town and the church. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent charge, £100; gross yearly value £150, including 2½ acres of glebe, in the gift of the trustees of the late Lord Overstone and held since 1877 by the Rev. Robert Bevan Hull M.A. of Brasenose College, Oxford, rural dean of Northampton, and Surrogate.

The church of St. Giles appears to have been originally a cruciform building without aisles, erected at the beginning of the twelfth century, but has undergone a series of changes which renders it difficult to trace its history: it presents remnants of various styles from the Norman period downwards: the most recent portion being the large embattled central tower built, it is supposed, in 1613, which has a low stair turret on the north-east, pinnacles with vanes at the angles, and contains 8 bells; the chapel in the south aisle is a beautiful alabaster altar tomb, supposed to belong to the family of Gobion and an octagonal font richly panelled, in the Perpendicular style: in 1857 the church was restored and enlarged under the direction of the late Mr. E. F. Law, when the nave was lengthened westward by the addition of two bays and a new north aisle was erected, the fine western Norman doorway being replaced; the nave has a clerestory, and there is a south porch and transept; there is a good Perpendicular screen, c. 1450, with panelling below and open tracery in the upper portion; during the year 1876 the noble Early English chancel was completely restored at a cost of about £3,000, and in 1883 a new reredos of Caen stone, English alabaster and coloured marbles was erected at a cost of £250, from the designs of Mr. Edmund Law of Northampton: the north and south walls were also covered with majolica tiles; there are sittings for 1,200 persons. The register dates from the year 1559. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £545; net £205 with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Rev. C. Simeon, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Richard Allen White M.A. of Trinity College, Dublin.

The church of St. Peter, situated near the western extremity of the town and contiguous to the site of the ancient castle, is supposed to have been erected by one of the Norman lords of this place, and is a building of stone in the Norman and Early English styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and an embattled western tower containing 8 bells: the Norman portions of the church, including the arch opening from the tower into the nave, and some curious ornamental work on the outside of the former is remarkably fine: continued eastward of the chancel is a small arched crypt: there are some ancient monuments: the church has been restored. The register dates from the year 1578. The living is a rectory with the chapelry of Upton annexed, tithe rent charge £400; yearly value £440 with residence, in the gift of the Master and Brethren of St. Katharine's Hospital, Regent's park, London, and held since 1873 by the Rev. Edward Nicolls Tom M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

The church of the Holy Sepulchre, supposed to have been built by the Knights Templars after the model of the church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem, is one of the few remaining round churches in the kingdom; it consists of chancel with lateral chapels, circular nave, surrounded by an arcade of eight Norman columns supporting plain Pointed arches, and an embattled western tower of Perpendicular date, with pyramidal spire about 116 feet high, containing 6 bells and a clock with illuminated dial: very extensive alterations were made some time since under the direction of Sir G. G. Scott: the chancel being extended eastward and the whole of the building east of the round part enlarged; the latter is now principally used as a baptistery, in the centre of which is placed a very beautiful font erected by members of the Diocesan Architectural Society as a memorial to the late Rev. Thomas James of Theddington, who took an active part in the restoration: in the church is a slab with effigies and inscription to George Coles of Northampton and his wives Sarah and Eleanor: he gave £12 yearly to the town, and died 1st January, 1640: this is one of the largest and finest existing brasses of late date, and is in perfect preservation; the three figures are represented as clasping each other's hands: below them are figures of 12 children, and under these two hands conjoined within a scroll border, and six rhyming lines referring to "the hand in hand." The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1571; marriages, 1566. There is a list of the names of the incumbents from 1226. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value £269, in the gift of Colonel Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay V.C., K.C.M.G., M.P. and held since 1879 by the Rev. Frederick Ferdinand Martin S. Thornton of Trinity College, Dublin, chaplain to the County Hospital, and acting chaplain to the Forces.

The church of St. Crispin, a chapel of ease to the church of the Holy Sepulchre, was erected in 1884, through the efforts of the present vicar, assisted by a committee of 300 working men, and is an edifice of local ironstone, with Bath stone dressings, in the Early Gothic style, consisting of chancel, nave, north aisle and a turret, containing 1 bell: there are sittings for 400 people: a large hall, of the same stone, is built across the west front of the church, and is used for parochial meetings.

St. Andrew's ecclesiastical parish was formed in 1842 from the parishes of The Holy Sepulchre and The Priory of St. Andrew. The church, erected in 1841, is in the Early English style, and consists of quasi-chancel, nave, aisles and a tower 66 feet in height, with pinnacles: there are sittings for about 1,000 persons. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1870; marriages, 1879. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £390 and £60 in lieu of a house, in the gift of the trustees of Miss Hyndman's charity, and held since 1885 by the Rev. George Whitehead.

St. Edmund's is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1846 from the parish of St. Giles and certain contiguous extra-parochial places under the provision of Sir Robert Peel's Act. The church, situated on the Wellingborough road, and erected in 1850, at a cost of about £1,000, is a cruciform structure, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, transepts and a tower, containing 8 bells: the reredos was erected by Mrs. Franklin in memory of her husband and sister: and the west windows and mosaic pavement are memorials to the late Mrs. Hughes, wife of the present vicar: there are sittings for 1,000 persons. The register dates from the year 1852. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £300, in the alternate gift of the Crown and the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1870 by the Rev. Nathaniel Thomas Hughes M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford, master of St. John's Hospital, Northampton, and hon. canon of Peterborough.

St. James' is a district parish formed in 1872 out of parts of Dinton and Dallington parishes: the church, situated in St. James' road, is a building of brick, in the Early English style, erected in 1868, at a cost of about £3,000, and consists of chancel, nave of four bays, with clerestory, south aisle, with chapel, and a western turret, containing 1 bell. The register dates from the year 1868. The living is a vicarage, yearly value £150, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Charles Edward Barwise, of Queen's College, Birmingham.

St. Katharine's is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1839 out of the parish of All Saints, and enlarged subsequently by an addition from St. Andrew's: the church, situated near the Horse market, and erected in 1840 and restored in 1866, is an edifice in a Modern Gothic style, consisting of chancel and nave and a small tower and turret on the south-west, containing 1 large bell: there are sittings for 1,000 persons. The register dates from the year 1840. The living is a vicarage, with an endowment of £134 a year and pew rents, net yearly value £400, in the gift of Hyndman's trustees, and held since 1882 by the Rev. John Brooke.

St. Lawrence is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1879 from those of St. Edmund and St. Sepulchre: the church, situated in Duke and Craven streets, and erected in 1877, at a cost of £7,800, is an edifice of red brick, with Bath stone dressings, in the Early Pointed style, and consists of chancel, nave of five bays, narrow aisles, chapel for week day services, north and south porches, and a turret containing 1 bell: it will seat 800 people. The register dates from the year 1879. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £300 without house, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1885 by the Rev. Robert Douglas Leonce Clarke M.A. of Corpus Christi college, Cambridge.

St. Michael's and All Angels' is an ecclesiastical parish formed in 1883 from that of St. Edmund: the church, situated on St. Michael's Mount, Kettering road, and opened in June, 1882, is a cruciform building of red brick, in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and west porch, and has free sittings for 630 persons. The register dates from the year 1883. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £175, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1874 by the Rev. Charles Gray M.A. of Queen's College, Cambridge.

The ecclesiastical district of St. Mary was formed in 1875 out of the parish of Hardington, and comprises Cotton End and Far Cotton.

The church of St. Mary, Far Cotton, situated at the junction of the Towcester and Abbey roads, and completed in 1885 from designs by Mr. M. H. Holding, architect, of Northampton, is a building of local stone, with Bath stone dressings, in a modified form of Early English Gothic, and consists of apsidal chancel with north aisle and vestry, nave with clerestory, aisles and north and south porches; only the lower portion of the tower, which is on the north side, is at present erected: there are sittings for 450 persons. The register dates from the year 1875. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £168, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Charles James Gordon M.A. of Pembroke College, Cambridge.

The ecclesiastical district of St. Paul was formed out of the parishes of Kingsthorpe and The Holy Sepulchre: services are at present held in a temporary iron church in Semilong, seating 450 persons. The register dates from the year 1877. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £250, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1882 by the Rev. Francis Henry Wood M.A. of St. John's College, Cambridge.

The Catholic diocese of Northampton comprises the counties of Northampton, Bedford, Bucks, Cambridge, Huntingdon, Norfolk and Suffolk.

The Catholic Cathedral of St. Mary and St. Thomas is a modern building, in the Early Decorated style, from designs by Mr. A. Pugin, the elder, and his son, Mr. A. W. N. Pugin, consisting of apsidal chancel, clerestoried nave of 6 bays and aisles: and has been erected at two different periods, the latest addition being in 1864: it is proposed at some time to complete the church, but this may involve the destruction of the work of the elder architect, an event which will be a matter of great regret: many of the windows, including those of the chancel apse, are stained: two of the three altars are adorned with carvings and tabernacle work: and in the chancel are two large pictures by Hesse, the well-known painter, so largely patronized by King Louis of Bavaria, whose works may be seen in the Royal Chapel and other buildings at Munich: there is also in the north aisle a fine head of Our Lord by a German painter, Seitz. The Bishop's residence in Marriott street, lately erected, is a handsome building of stone, in the Domestic Gothic style, with a cloister, intended ultimately to lead into the cathedral.

The Catholic Asylum for the Aged and for Destitute Children of both sexes, is situated at Nazareth House, Leicester road.

The Convent of Notre Dame, situated in Abington street, and erected in 1871, at a cost of £6,000, exclusive of the chapel, is an extensive building of brick, in the Gothic style, with a frontage of nearly 100 feet, terminated at each corner by a short tower with turret: the central porch is adorned with beautifully carved figures in stone, placed under canopies of the Virgin and St. Joseph: at the back of the Convent is a detached chapel in the Gothic style: about 100 young ladies are boarded and educated by the sisters of the Convent: and there is also a middle-class day school attached.

There are also places of worship for Baptists, Calvinists, Congregationalists, Wesleyan Methodists, Wesleyan Reformers, Primitive Methodists and Unitarians and a meeting house for the Society of Friends.

The General Cemetery, situated in the Billing and Wellingborough roads, was formed in 1849, at a cost of £5,000, raised by one thousand shares of £5 each: it is about 112 acres in extent, and contains one mortuary chapel.

A Free Grammar school was founded by Thomas Chipsey, grocer, of Northampton, in 1541, his original endowment being afterwards augmented by Cardinal Pole, and in the reign of Charles II. by Paul Wentworth: the present school, erected in 1870, at a cost of £3,000, is a building of brick, consisting of central schoolroom, with five class-rooms: under a new scheme framed in 1882 by the Charity Commissioners, certain charities of the town have been diverted for the purpose of founding free scholarships at the Grammar school for meritorious boys from the public elementary schools of the town: the present number of boys is 160: attached to this building are the Art and Science schools: the former was established in 1871 for instruction in painting, drawing and designing and has about 200 students of the artisan class.

The Blue and Orange Corporation Charity school was founded in 1753 for educating and clothing 46 boys; and Becket and Sargeant's school in 1735 for clothing and educating 30 poor girls.

The Hospital of St. Thomas the Martyr, originally founded in 1450 by the citizens and burgesses of Northampton, is now situated in St. Giles' street, and the present building was erected in 1834: there are at the present time (1885) fifteen in and sixty-seven out-pensioners, the latter receiving 5s. a week, and the former 6s. a week, together with fuel and gas, and an additional allowance of £1 5s. each annually on St. Thomas's day for clothing: the income of the hospital, derived from land, now amounts to £2,000 yearly.

The Hospital of St. John the Baptist, founded in 1137 by Walter, archdeacon of Northampton, for aged and infirm persons, has recently been placed under a new scheme, so that, while the pensioners are still maintained, the principal work of the charity now centres in a Convalescent Home, which has been established at Weston Favell: the yearly income is £1,515.

Sir Thomas White, lord mayor of London in 1553, by deed in 1566, gave certain estates interest for the benefit of this and various other towns, in order to provide sums of money to be lent as free loans to young men engaged in trade.

The principal articles of manufacture in this town are boots and shoes, of which great quantities are made for the supply of the army and the London market: a considerable trade is also carried on in the currying of leather: here are also four large breweries and some extensive iron foundries, several maltings and flour mills: there is a paper mill in the neighbourhood, and brick and tile making is also carried on.

The market days are Wednesday and Saturday, the last a very large one for cattle and sheep.

Fairs are held on the second Tuesday in January, 20th February, third Monday in March, 5th April, 4th May, 10th June, 5th and 26th August, 19th September, first Thursday in November, 28th November and the Friday before the feast of Smithfield market.

The Cattle Market, situated in the Cow meadow, on the south side of the town, was opened in 1873 and occupies an area of five acres: the sheep pens will hold about 5,000 sheep: the beast pens afford space for about 2,500: the pig market has pens for 500 pigs.

The Town Hall, situated in St. Giles' square, is a magnificent structure, in the Gothic style, from designs by E. W. Godwin esq. F.S.A.: the foundation stone was laid in 1861 and the building was opened in 1864: the principal front is adorned with eight statues, under canopies, representing St. George, St. Michael, Richard I. Edward I. Henry III. Edward IV. Henry VII. and Queen Victoria: the interior includes a large hall, is 81 feet by 37, at one end of which is a gallery containing a good organ: there is also a sessions court, and on the upper floor a council chamber and other offices.

The County Hall, situated in George row, and erected soon after the great fire of 1675, is a spacious and elegant structure in the Italian style, from designs by Sir Roger Norwich, and contains courts for the assizes and quarter sessions and a suite of rooms for transacting the general business of the county: in the hall, the ceiling of which is splendidly decorated, are fine contemporary portraits of King William III. and Queen Mary, Queen Anne, George I. and George II.

The Corn Exchange buildings, situated on the Parade, and erected in 1850 in the Italian style, from designs by Messrs. George Alexander and William Hull, at a cost of upwards of £10,000, and partly occupied as shops and offices: the corn market, a noble and spacious hall, is 140 feet long, 65 feet wide and 60 in height.

The Mechanics' Institution, established in 1832, has been dissolved and its library of between ten and twelve thousand volumes, including many rare and valuable works, besides a large collection of scientific apparatus has been transferred to the Museum.

The Museum, Free Library and Reading Room, erected under the provisions of the Free Libraries Act, is situated in the Guildhall road. In the Museum are preserved the relics which were found on the site of the Old Castle, and it has been further enriched by a magnificent collection of geological specimens, presented by the Marquis of Northampton, and a valuable collection of local geological specimens, presented by Samuel Sharp esq. F.S.A., F.O.S. There is also here a fine series of local antiquities, belonging to Sir Henry Dryden bart.: an ebony cabinet, formerly belonging to John Bridges, the historian of Northamptonshire, and afterwards to Miss Baker, and portraits (formerly in the Town Hall) of the Right Hon. Spencer Percival M.P. for Northampton in 1796; Sir Thomas White, Lord Mayor of London in 1553; Alderman White, mayor of the town in 1679 and 1680, and a very interesting portrait of John Bales, of Northampton, said to be aged 127, A.D. 1705: the Free Library consists of upwards of fifteen thousand volumes, and also possesses a Reference Department, containing many books of local interest: this has lately received a valuable addition, presented by Her Majesty's Treasury office, in the shape of 290 printed volumes of State records &c. The Reading Room is well supplied with newspapers, periodicals &c.

In the year 1839 an institution was established called the Religious and Useful Knowledge Society, and in 1851 premises were purchased in Gold street at a cost of £1,050; these premises have been considerably enlarged and beautified in the Italian style at a further cost of about £800: in addition to this the society has expended £1,000 in the erection of a large and handsome lecture hall capable of seating upwards of 500 persons: the architect was Mr. E. F. Law of this town. These premises are now leased to the Northampton Town and County Conservative Club Company Lim.

H.M. Prison, situated in Campbell square, is a spacious building of brick, erected from designs by the late Mr. W. Hull, at an expense of about £12,000, exclusive of £5,000 expended in the purchase of the land: it was opened in 1845, and is calculated to hold 220 prisoners, but considerable alterations and additions have been made during the last seven years, and others are still in progress.

Northampton is the depot of the Northamptonshire Regiment, late 48th and 58th foot (No. 48 Regimental District). The Barracks, situated on the Leicester road, were originally erected in 1797 for Cavalry, but were rebuilt in 1877-8, and converted into Infantry barracks: they consist of a series of plain brick buildings, with separate quarters for the commissioned and non-commissioned officers.

The Northamptonshire Militia, which forms the 3rd and 4th battalions of the Northamptonshire regiment, have their stores in Great Russell street, where there is also convenient space for training purposes.

The Post Office, situated in Abington street, built in 1872, is a structure of brick and stone, in the Italian Renaissance style.

The Empire Theatre, first opened in 1806, is situated at the end of Gold street.

The Opera House, situated in the Guildhall road, and erected in 1884, at a cost of £10,000, is an edifice of Ancaster stone, in the Classic style, from designs by Mr. C. G. Phipps F.S.A. The auditorium includes a spacious and comfortable pit covering the whole extent of the floor of the house, and is capable of holding upwards of 800 people: the dress circle above, which extends from the boxes on either side of the stage, is well fitted, and there are upper circle seats in the rear, and above these a gallery: in addition to the ordinary entrances, four in number, there are four extra means of exit, so that the house can be cleared in five minutes. The entire theatre will hold 1,700 people.

The Masonic Hall, situated in Abington street, was erected in 1875-6 from the designs of Mr. Edmund Law, of this town, at a cost of about £3,500, independent of the site, which cost about £1,670. All the Masonic Bodies in the county meet at this hall.

The Public Swimming Baths, situated in New Market road, were erected in 1876 by Messrs. Phipps, brewers, of this town, at a cost of about £2,000, and include a private bath; the water is supplied from the brewery in bridge street.

The General Infirmary, established in 1743, and situated to the east of the town, on a healthy and airy site, is a building of stone, erected in 1793 at an expense of £25,000, defrayed by subscriptions: it has now (1885) 144 beds, the average number of patients being about 1,792 in, and 8,073 out.

St. Andrew's Hospital for Mental Diseases, situated on the Billing road, is a fine building of white Bath stone in the

NORTHBOROUGH (or NORTHURON) is a village and parish in the Northern division of the county, liberty of Nassaburgh or Peterborough, union and county court district of Peterborough, rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 7½ miles north-west from Peterborough and 2 south from Market Deeping. Peakirk, on the Great Northern railway, a mile and a half south-east, and Helpstone on the Midland railway, 2½ miles south-west, are the nearest stations. The church of St. Andrew is an ancient building of stone, chiefly in the Decorated and Perpendicular styles, with traces of Norman and Early English, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south chapel or transept, south porch and a singular and lofty gable bellcot at the west end, supported by tall flat buttresses of the twelfth century, and containing 2 bells; the transept chantry, a structure of transition character from Decorated to Perpendicular, has fine windows, and some monumental arches and canopies, and contains monuments to the Cromwell and Claypole families; one tomb, dated 1594, is supposed to contain the remains of Oliver Cromwell's widow, who died here in 1665; there is also an inscribed floor stone to Martha, daughter of John Claypole esq. 1663; the chancel retains two piscines and a locker, and in the north aisle are brackets; on the wall of the south aisle are some frescoes. The register of burials and marriages dates from the year 1538; baptisms, 1586. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from glebe £320, net £280 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, and held since 1876 by the Rev. Alfred Cay T.A.K.C.L. There is a Primitive Methodist chapel here, erected in 1869. The remains of the manor-house, built by Geoffrey de la Mare in 1340, are extremely interesting; these consist of the ground-floor of the gatehouse and the hall of the house: a groined archway covered the gateway and postern, the corbels and part of the vaulting ribs still remaining: a doorway in the east wall led to a guard-room or porter's lodge, as well as to a stone staircase giving access to the story above: the old hall is now much concealed within by modern sub-divisions; but at the west end three original doorways still remain; these have ogee-arched heads enriched with crockets and the ball-flower ornament, and led to the kitchen, buttery and store-room: a staircase at the west end and another on the north side led to the rooms above: the hall was lighted by handsome square-headed Decorated windows on the north and south, and access was given by a doorway on the south: it still retains its original crocketed gable, culminating in an octagonal chimney at the west end, and a cornice enriched with the ball-flower ornament: the range of buildings westward of the gatehouse are of the first quarter of the seventeenth century: Cromwell's widow died in this house in 1665: it is now the property of the Hon. Mrs. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam, of Milton house, Peterborough, and in the occupation of Mr. John Stubs Nichols; it was formerly the residence of Mrs. Claypole, the favourite daughter of Oliver Cromwell, who died here and was buried in Henry VII.'s chapel at Westminster; there are also the remains of a very ancient bridge of 16 arches on the road to Peterborough. The trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam and the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough are lords of the manor and principal landowners. The soil is alluvial; sub-soil, clay and silt. The chief crops are wheat, barley, peas and beans. The area is 710 acres; rateable value, £1,504; the population in 1881 was 212.

ORLINGBURY is a pleasant village and parish giving name to the hundred, in the Northern division of the county, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Rothwell (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 4 miles north-west from Wellingborough, 4 south from Kettering, 10 north-east from Northampton and about 2 south-west from the Isham and Burton Latimer station on the Midland railway. St. Mary's church, occupying the site of an earlier structure, is a cruciform edifice of stone, in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, with vestry on the north, nave, transepts, south porch and a lofty central tower with pierced open parapet and crocketed pinnacles, and containing 5 bells; the large circular east window is stained; the four lancet windows of the chancel are also stained, and were the gift of the rector: in a recess on the north side of the chancel, is a recumbent effigy in alabaster, with carnail attached to the basinet, on the front of which are the words "ihc nazani"; from the arms on the surcoat, a fess between three lozenges, it might be assigned to a member of the family of De Orlingbury of the fourteenth century, but tradition current here points to it as being the effigy of "Jock of Batsaddle," who killed the last wolf in England: there are a number of mural tablets to the Young and other families: on the pavement in the south transept are four brasses to the Chybnale family, viz. Elizabeth Wingfield, wife of Thomas Chybnale esq. 1671; Elizabeth, wife of Godfrey Chybnale esq. 1673; Thomas Chybnall esq. 1673; and Godfrey Chybnall esq. 1678: nailed against the south wall of the chancel is a small brass inscribed to John, father of Henry Max, rector 1450; there

OUNDLE, a corruption of Avondale, is a market and union town, parish, head of a county court district and a polling place for the Northern division of the county, in the hundred of Polebrook, rural deanery of Oundle first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough; it is 97½ miles from London by railway and about 80 by road, 27 north-east-by-north from Northampton, 13 south-west from Peterborough and 8 north from Thrapston, on the Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway, which has a station half a mile distant. The town is governed by a board of Improvement Commissioners, consisting of 25 members, and is well paved, lighted with gas, and stands on an acclivity, which the river Nene, at a short distance, encompasses in the form of a crescent: the river is crossed by two bridges of nine arches, one to the north of the town, the other on the south.

The church of St. Peter is a large and ancient edifice in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, with south chantry, clerestoried nave of four bays, aisles, transepts, south and western porches and an embattled western tower, with turrets and an octagonal crocketed spire, rising to a height of two hundred feet: the tower contains 8 bells: the nave and aisles are Early English, and date from about 1220: the transepts are Early Decorated, the south transept having a crypt beneath it, with a groined roof: the chancel retains a piscina and sedilia richly carved, and the east window, erected in 1864, is stained, and was placed by the Rev. J. Nussey, late vicar, in memory of Edward Bellell esq. a benefactor; this part of the church belongs generally to the fifteenth century: the south porch, erected about 1440, by John Wyatt and his wife, founders of the guild of the Blessed Virgin, retains its original door and has a richly groined roof: the western porch, erected about 1390, is canopied, but has been much mutilated: the tower is Perpendicular, the lower storeys being panelled, and the belfry storey and windows richly ornamented: the pulpit, supposed to date from about 1550, is nearly a facsimile of one formerly in St. Michael's, Coventry: a stained window in the north transept was given in 1868 by the Grocers' Company, and another in the tower in 1874 by the Rev. John Creaser, late curate of Oundle: the reredos displays a representation of The Last Supper, incised in alabaster: there is a fine brass eagle lectern, dating from about 1443: the interior has been restored and re-seated in oak under the direction of G. G. Scott esq. The register dates from the year 1625. The living is a discharged vicarage, the income arising almost entirely from benefactions, gross yearly value from 263 acres of glebe £490 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1871 by the Rev. Charles Hopkins M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge, surrogate and rural dean of Oundle (first portion).

Jesus church, erected at the west end of the town, and consecrated July 29th, 1879, is a cruciform building of Casterton, Hollington and Corsham stone, together with the materials of old buildings which previously occupied the site, and is in the Lancet or primary Early English style, from designs by A. W. Blomfield esq. M.A.: it consists of chancel, nave, transepts and a central lantern, with rectangular projections at the angles of the crossing: four columns of red Hollington stone carry arches, from which springs the central lantern: this, at first, a square rises into an octagon, finished with a domical ceiling at a height of 50 feet from the floor, and is lighted by a range of 16 clerestory windows.

The Congregational chapel, situated in West street, is a building in the Gothic style, erected in 1864 on the site of a former chapel, dating from 1630. The Wesleyan chapel was erected in 1842, and re-seated in 1866, at a cost of £300. There is also a chapel for Baptists, and a room in a private house set apart for the use of Catholics, which is served from Peterborough.

The Cemetery, situated on the Stoke road, within a short distance of the town, comprises three acres, and has a mortuary chapel of stone, surmounted by a short spire; it was opened in 1850, at a cost of about £2,650, is very tastefully laid out, and under the control of a burial board of 9 members.

There is an important charity, founded in 1556 by Sir William Laxton, Lord Mayor of London in 1544, who left an estate in the City of London (which has largely increased in value) in trust to the Grocers' Company, to support a school and almshouses. The school, in the words of the founder, is "to be open to all who shall come to the school-house to learn," and the governors, in the endeavour to meet the wants of all, now support two separate schools on this foundation. Oundle school is a first-grade classical public school, and Laxton school a distinct second-grade or middle-class school, providing a more modern and commercial education. The old school-room and class-rooms, rebuilt on the original site about the year 1857, are now occupied by the Laxton school, and a boarding-house adjoining these is now (1885) in course of erection. New school buildings and class-rooms have recently been opened for the use of the classical school, and the erection of a new school-room, laboratory, library, sanatorium and boarding-houses is contemplated. There were at the commencement of this year (1885) 200 boys in the schools, of whom 146 were boarders attending the classical department; at present four of the masters receive boarders. There are four exhibitions of £50 yearly, each tenable by scholars at the Universities; the Company's junior scholarships, worth 45 guineas yearly, and tenable for three years at a boarding-house, open to all boys whether members of the school or not, who are under 15 years of age on 1st January, one being vacant every year; six scholarships of £32 yearly each, tenable while at school by sons of freemen of the Grocers' Company; 20 annual exhibitions of £10 each to be given to boys of promise, sons of parents of limited means; 3 local exhibitions of £20, £10 and £4 yearly respectively, tenable at Cambridge with the school exhibitions. The award of these scholarships and exhibitions as well as of several valuable prizes in money and books is made at the end of July. The master of the Grocers' Company, with other influential members of the Court, pays occasional visits to the school.

The Town hall, situated in the Market place, and built in 1826 by the late Jesse Watts-Russell esq. lord of the manor, for the use of the public business of the town, is a plain but substantial edifice of stone, and is used as a literary institute and for public meetings, the lower part serving as a butter market.

A Police station was built in 1877 at the west end of the town, at a cost of about £4,000, and consists of magistrates' room, dwellings for an inspector, a married and single constable and four cells. The petty sessions and county court are held here.

Oundle Fire Brigade, established in 1844, consists of eighteen men; Mr. W. J. Coaten, superintendent; the keys of the engine house are kept by Mr. Coaten and the overseer.

The charities in trust of the feoffees yield about £120 a year for public uses; since the charity of £15 a year, derived from £500 consols, left in 1832, and in trust of the vicar and churchwardens, is for fuel and clothes.

The Literary and Scientific Institute, established in 1856, occupies rooms in the Town Hall; the reading room and library of 500 volumes, are open on Monday, Wednesday and Friday evenings from 8 till 10 p.m.; there are now 80 members.

Sir William Laxton's almshouses in Church lane, founded with the school in 1556 and rebuilt in 1857, are very substantial and comfortable buildings of stone, situated near the school, and provide for seven poor men, inhabitants of Oundle, who receive from 4s. 6d. to 7s. weekly.

In 1611 a hospital for 18 aged women was founded and endowed by Nicholas Latham, rector of Barnwell St. Andrew, in North street; there are 15 inmates, each of whom receives from 4s. 6d. to 7s. per week; the total income of this charity amounts to nearly £600 yearly, and is under the management of J. W. Smith esq. J.P. and G. M. Edmonds esq. as trustees or bailiffs.

There are four almshouses for Protestant dissenters, founded by John Paine, in 1801.

The Oundle Quoit Club has a ground, the gift of the late William Williams Holloway, of Limehouse. The club is registered, and has now (1885) over 400 members.

Oundle Working Men's Club, in Church street, was erected in 1877, and has rooms for reading, lectures and entertainments, and a small library of 300 volumes: there are now (1885) 50 members.

King's Subscription Library, New street, is in connection with Mudie's Library, London.

The market is held on Thursday, and the fairs are on the 25th of February, for horses and cattle; Whit Monday and the 12th of October, for pleasure.

The court leet and court baron of Mrs. Watts-Russell, lady of the manor of Oundle, are held in October; the court of the Duke of Buccleuch &c. for the liberty and hundred of Polebrook is held in October. John William Smith esq. lay rector and possessor of the rectory manor of Oundle, holds his court occasionally.

Biggin, one mile west, the seat of Mrs. Watts-Russell, is an ancient mansion, which has been greatly added to at different times; it stands in a small park and is approached through a long avenue of trees.

In this neighbourhood are several mineral springs, strongly impregnated with iron, considered valuable for their tonic qualities.

The area of the entire parish is 5,300 acres; rateable value, £12,839; the population in 1881 was 3,073, of which 120 were in Ashton, and 118 officers and inmates in the workhouse.

ELMINGTON is a hamlet of this parish, situate to the north-east.

ASHTON is a parish of itself, but for ecclesiastical purposes has been consolidated with Oundle. Here is an endowed school called Creed's charity, of which the vicar of Oundle for the time being is, ex officio, one of the trustees. Area, 1,308 acres; rateable value, £1,907.

OVERSTONE is a scattered parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Spelthoe, union of Brixworth, county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Haddon (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 5 miles north-east from Northampton and about 3 north from the Billing Road station on the Northampton and Peterborough branch of the London and North Western railway. The church of St. Nicholas, situated in the park, a little north of the mansion, is a small edifice of stone in the Perpendicular style, built by John Kiplin esq. in the year 1503, when the old church, a Decorated structure, was pulled down, and consists of chancel with vestry, nave and a low western tower with pinnacles and containing 2 bells; the east window is stained; there are three mural monuments, one of which, to Mr. and Mrs. Stafford, is dated 1721. The registers date from the year 1680. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £320 with residence, in the gift of Col. Sir Robert James Loyd-Lindsay v.c., K.C.B., M.P. and held since 1857 by the Rev. Edward Jonathan Birch B.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The late Lord Overstone took his title from this place. PASSENHAM is a village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Cleley, union of Potterspary, Towcester county court district, rural deanery of Preston second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, one mile south from Stony Stratford. The Buckingham canal runs through this parish and the river Ouse divides it in some parts from Buckinghamshire. King by Mr. W. M. Teulon, of London, and built in 1861-2-3 and 4. is a handsome mansion of stone, standing on a broad gravel terrace in an undulating park of about 900 acres, which is situated in three parishes, Overstone, Sywell and Ecton, and is enclosed by a high wall six miles in circumference; from the north-west front of the house there are grassy slopes descending to an ornamental lake of 23 acres; the grounds are flanked by plantations and adorned with numerous groups of stately forest trees. Col. Sir Robert Loyd-Lindsay, in right of his wife, daughter of the late Lord Overstone, is lord of the manor and owner of all the land except the glebe. The soil is a red loam; subsoil, ironstone with some clay. The chief crops are wheat, pulse and roots. The area is 1,940 acres; rateable value, £2,909; the population in 1881 was 181.

Edward the Elder, son of Alfred the Great, is recorded by the Venerable Bede to have encamped here with his army in A.D. 921. The church of St. Guthlac is a building of stone in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel and embattled nave and a western tower with pinnacles containing 5 bells; in the chancel are seven stalls on each side richly carved with niches supported by Ionic pillars at the back of each stall, each niche bearing the name of an apostle or saint in gilt letters; the stained east window was the gift of Miss Day, of Stony Stratford, in 1867; the pulpit is finely carved; on the south wall of the chancel is a marble monument, painted and gilt, with bust, to Sir Robert Banastre knight, who died 15th December, 1649. The register dates from the year 1635. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £315, gross yearly value £750, including 200 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Viscount Maynard, and held since 1870 by the Rev. George Marie Capell B.A. of Pembroke College, Oxford. During some alterations at the rectory in 1873 a number of skeletons were found and are now placed in the museum at Bristol. There are several charities for the benefit of the poor now (1885) amounting to £60 yearly, derived from houses and land in Denshanger, and left by various donors; a payment of £2 2s. 8d. annually to the poor of the parish of Middleton in the county of York is made out of the revenues of this living. A portion of the forest of Whittlebury is in this parish. Passenham Manor is the residence of Thomas Byam Grounds esq. Frances Evelyn, now Lady Brooke, granddaughter of the late Viscount Maynard, who is lady of the manor, and the Duke of Grafton K.G., C.B. are the principal landowners. Adjoining the manor house are some huge barns erected in 1626. The soil is loam and gravel; subsoil, stone and gravel. The chief crops are wheat, beans and barley. The population in 1881, with the hamlet of Denshanger and part of Old Stratford and part of Puxley, remainder of which places are in Cosgrove parish, was 1,128. The area is 4,095 acres, which includes a portion of Whittlebury forest and several coppices amounting to about 1,000 acres; rateable value (exclusive of Denshanger), £1,871, Denshanger £4,297.

from Stony Stratford. The Buckingham canal divides the place into two parts. Dove House is an ancient cruciform building in good condition, supposed to have been built in the fourteenth century. Holy Trinity chapel of ease, situated at the west end of the village, erected in 1853, at a cost of £3,000, is a building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, nave and north aisle, with south porch and a turret containing 3 bells. Here are Baptist and Primitive Methodist chapels. The agricultural engineering works and iron foundry of Messrs. E. and H. Roberts are situated here and employ about 75 persons: lace making is carried on to some extent here.

Old Stratford is a hamlet in the parishes of Cosgrove, Furtho, Passenham and Pottersbury: the Buckingham branch of the Grand Junction canal runs through it and the river Ouse separates it from Stony Stratford.

Puxley (or POWKESLEY) is a hamlet $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north and within Whittlebury forest.

PASTON is a parish about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Peterborough, which includes the hamlets of GUNTHORPE and DOOSTHORPE, in the Northern division of the county, NASSABURGH or Peterborough union, and county court district, rural deanery of Peterborough first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, 1 mile north-east from Walton station on the Midland railway. The church of All Saints is a substantial edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with north chantry chapel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower, with spire relieved by two tiers of spire lights and containing 3 bells: there is a screen of Perpendicular date remaining: the tower and the spire belong to the transition period from the Early English to the Decorated; the body of the church is Perpendicular: the stained east window is a memorial to the Rev. Joseph Pratt M.A. a former rector of Paston-cum-Werrington, who died in 1876: there is a mural tablet with effigy to Edward Mountstevens, of Paston, who died 1635:

and the chancel also retains a piscina, sedilia, locker and bracket: in the north aisle is a mural monument to Francis John Low, 1788; and there are floor stones inscribed to John Slow, 1675; Frances Mapletoft, 1702; and Katherine Louthie, 1661: the church was thoroughly restored in 1882, at a cost of about £1,000, raised by subscriptions, and will seat 600 persons. The register, including Werrington until 1877, dates from the year 1653. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £400, net £310 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1876 by the Rev. William Andrew M.A. Hon. Canon of Peterborough and rural dean and formerly fellow and tutor of Worcester College, Oxford. The charities include six small almshouses on Paston Green, supported by an annual payment of £20 out of the estate of Frederick St. Lawrence Pratt esq. J.P.: there is an estate, value about £16 a year, for the repairs of Paston church: in 1635 Edmund Mountstevens left two guineas a year for a sermon to be preached on the 15th March in every year (being the anniversary of his death); he also left £1,000 for two scholarships in St. John's College, Cambridge, to be held by scholars chosen out of Peterborough school. Paston Hall, a brick mansion situated in pleasant grounds, is the seat of Frederick St. Lawrence Pratt esq. J.P. The Bishop of Peterborough and Frederick St. Lawrence Pratt esq. J.P. are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, Frederick St. Lawrence Pratt esq. J.P. and the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The soil is various; subsoil, clay, silt and stone. The chief crops are wheat, beans, peas, oats and barley. The area is 909 acres; rateable value, £1,494; and the population in 1881 was—Paston 112, Dogsthorpe 520, Gunthorpe 63.

Dogsthorpe, anciently called DODSTHORPE, was formerly a hamlet of St. John the Baptist, Peterborough, 2 miles north-east therefrom; a small portion of the hamlet is incorporated with the borough. Here are Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan chapels. The schoolroom is used as a Church Mission Hall; services are held at 6.30 p.m. on Sundays. The land is chiefly arable. The area is 2,130 acres and the population in 1881 was 520.

PATTESHULL (or PATISHALL) is a village and parish 3½ miles north-by-west from Towcester station and 4½ west from the Blisworth station on the London and North Western railway in the Southern division of the county, hundred, union and county court district of Towcester, rural deanery of Brackley second, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, situated near the Watling Street. The hamlets are ASTCOTE, DALSCOT, EASTCOTE and part of FOSTER'S BOOTH; the last-named is given under a separate heading. The church of the Holy Cross is a building of stone, in the Norman style, with some remains of presumed Saxon work, and consists of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch, vestry and a western tower containing a clock and 5 bells; there are piscine in the chancel and south aisle: and in the chancel is a stained window, inserted in 1876, by Marianne Richards, of Patteshull House: the church plate was given in 1663, by Alice, Duchess of Dudley: the church was partially restored in 1872, under the direction of the late Mr. Law, of Northampton, at a cost of £1,000. The register dates from the year 1556. The living is a vicarage, formerly in two mediocres, called the Upper and the Lower, together valued at £456 17s. but was consolidated into a single vicarage in 1878, in the gift of Mrs. Welch, widow of Rev. H. F. Welch, and held by the Rev. Thomas Eykyn. There are two Baptist chapels and one Primitive Methodist chapel. The staple trade is that of shoe making. The charities now (1885) amount to about £300 yearly, left by Lady Katherine Leveson, in 1670, and derived from land at Foxley, £45 of which is set apart for apprenticing two boys, and £40 for the support of not less than two and not more than four aged widows; the rest is distributed to the poor in fuel and money at Christmas. Patteshull House, the property of the Rev. Henry Lester M.A. is a brick building, situated in well planted grounds, about a mile from the village, on the road to Northampton. The principal landowners are Sir Thomas George Fermor-Hesketh bart. of Easton Neston, lord of the manor, the Howes family, of Northampton, and the Rev. H. Lester M.A. The chief crops are wheat, barley, cereals and some land is in pasture. The soil is various; subsoil, ironstone and clay. The area is 2,758 acres of good strong land; rateable value, £4,160; the population in 1881 was 930.

ASTCOTE is a small hamlet, pleasantly situated 3 miles north from Towcester and 4 south-west from the Blisworth station of the London and North Western railway. The Primitive Methodists have a chapel here, built in 1874.

EASTCOTE is a small hamlet 4 miles north from Towcester, half a mile from Patteshull and 4½ west from the Blisworth station. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1838.

DALSCOT is a very small hamlet in the parish of Patteshull, from which village it is about half a mile distant and 4 miles north from Towcester. CATCHREMS END is on the Towcester road.

PAULERSPURY with HEATHENCOTE.

PAULERSPURY is a large village and parish, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Cleve, union of Potterspur, county court district of Towcester, archdeaconry of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston second, and diocese of Peterborough, 3 miles south-east-by-south from Towcester, near the Watling Street. The church of St. James is an edifice of stone, consisting of chancel, with chapel on the north side, clerestoried nave, aisles, north and south porches and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells and a clock: the north chapel containing alabaster figures, in reclining postures, of Sir Arthur Throckmorton and wife, 1603; also a piscina, is Early English, the body of the building and chancel decorated and the tower Perpendicular: the chancel contains very fine sedilia and a piscina, and an altar tomb of stone, bearing two oaken effigies of a knight in plate armour, with surcoat, and a lady, representing Sir Laurence de Pavely kt. and his wife; he was living in 1399: the sides of the tomb are panelled and ornamented with plain shields; there is also a brass with the effigy of a priest, holding the chalice and wafer, and inscribed to Sir Henry Mylnar, parson, 1512: on the south side of the chancel is a memorial window to the late Rev. W. H. Newbolt D.D. for 36 years rector, who erected the stained east window and two others, and died in April, 1878: there are also five other stained windows, three of which, as well as the organ, were given by Isaac Lovell esq.: the nave and aisles were rebuilt and re-seated in 1843-4 and the chancel restored and a vestry built by the late rector, in 1854-5. The register dates from the year 1557. The living is a rectory, tithes rent-charge £863, net yearly value £773, including 64 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Warden and Fellows of New College, Oxford, and held since 1879 by the Rev. John Butler Harrison M.A. formerly fellow of New College, Oxford. Here is a Congregational chapel with graveyard attached, and Wesleyan and Primitive Methodist chapels. There are several annual charities, amongst which is Marriott's, of about £40 yearly, left November 29th, 1721, by William Marriott, of Paulerspury; and derived from land in this parish; of this amount £10 is applied towards the maintenance of the Church school, and the remainder is distributed in bread: the total value of other distributed charities is £140 yearly. Pillow lace is manufactured here to some extent. The Duke of Grafton C.O., C.B. Sir Thomas George Fernor-Hesketh bart. and George Shadden esq. M.A. who is lord of the manor, are chief landowners. Edward Bernard D.D. astronomer, linguist and critic was born here

PEAKIRK is a parish on the borders of Lincolnshire, with a station on the Great Northern railway, 5½ miles north-north-west from Peterborough, 3 south-east from Market Deeping and 8½ from London, in the Northern division of the county, Nussabnrg or Peterborough liberty, Peterborough union and county court district, and in the rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of Holy Trinity, which is a small but ancient and curious structure of Barnack stone, in the Norman, Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel with north chantry, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western gable bell-cote with semicircular openings for 3 bells, but having only 2: there are piscina and aumbries both in the chancel and south aisle: the south aisle, an addition, is Early English: the porch is of the same date, but the inner doorway is of rich Norman work: the arcade of the north aisle has three Norman arches, on circular pillars with square capitals: the south aisle arcade is Early English: the chancel arch belongs to this period also, but stands on Norman piers with richly moulded capitals: the stem of a decorated lectern of wood is still preserved in the vestry: there are mural tablets in the chancel to the Rev. B. Barnard M.A. rector, in 1815; Richard Cumberland M.A. 1737; and a stone inserted in the wall to William Greenhill, 1652: the windows, most of which are stained, were added by the Rev. J. J. James D.D.: in the churchyard are tombs to the Walton family, 1797-1833. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value from 170 acres of glebe £354, net £321 with residence, in the gift of the Dean and 2nd May, 1638. William Carey D.D. "The patriarch of Indian Missions" and the first Oriental professor of languages in India, was born here, 17th August, 1761. The soil is strong clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat, beans and some land in pasture. The area is 2,661 acres; rateable value, £5,299; and the population in 1881 was 1,141.

HEATHENCOTE is a small hamlet, in the parish of Paulerspury, situate on the Watling Street, about a mile and a quarter south-east from Towcester. The Duke of Grafton K.G. and Sir T. G. Fernor-Hesketh bart. are the principal landowners.

SCHOOLS:—

Church of England (mixed), erected in 1860-1, & enlarged by the Rev. W. H. Newbolt, late rector, at an expense of £1,000; it was further enlarged in 1879, when the schoolmaster's house was built, the additions costing about £700; there is a clock in the front of the school, given by New College, Oxford; the school has collective endowments amounting to about £40 yearly, derived from Marriott's, Nichol's & Lovell's charities; the interest of £500 a year is paid out of Mr. Lovell's charities in rewards or prizes to the most deserving boys; the school will hold 120 children; average attendance, 55; Stephen Smith, master; Mrs. Martha Smith, mistress. Infants', held in the Old Church schoolroom, which will hold 100 children; average attendance, 72

CARRIERS.—John Elliott, to Northampton, on sat.; Samuel Rogers, Northampton, wed. & sat.; Stony Stratford, fri.; & Isaac Fascutt, to Towcester & Northampton, wed. & sat

Chapter of Peterborough, and held since 1865 by the Rev. Edward James M.A. of St. John's College, Oxford. Walton's and Barnard's charities of £8 yearly are for fuel, but are subject to deduction for the repair of monuments and tombs belonging to those families. A little to the east of the church is an ancient chapel called "The Hermitage," which is all that now remains of a cell, founded here A.D. 716, and dependent on the Abbey of Crowland; the present structure dedicated to St. Pega (Virgin), was built by John de Wysbeck, abbot, as a college, about 1420; it has a trefolied cross on the western gable, and consists of chancel and a small nave with priest's door, it retains a double piscina, and has an east window of great beauty: the building is in the Geometric style of the thirteenth century: it was restored and almost entirely rebuilt in 1880, by Francis James esq. of Edgworth Manor, Gloucester, and is now used as a Sunday school. The Dean and Chapter of Peterborough are lords of the manor. The principal landowners are Mrs. Jane Vergette, Andrew Percival esq. Peterborough, and the trustees of the late Dr. Hopkinson. The land is flat, soil rich and productive; subsoil, gravel and silty. The chief crops are wheat, peas, barley, beans and potatoes. The area is 630 acres; rateable value, £2,656; the population in 1881 was 245.

PETERBOROUGH, WITH LONGTHORPE AND NEWARK.

PETERBOROUGH is an ancient city, parliamentary and municipal borough, a polling place for the Northern division of the county, the seat of a diocese and the head of the liberty of Nassaburgh or Peterborough, having separate jurisdiction under a commission of oyer and terminer, which is co-extensive with the liberty and a separate commission of the peace, the magistrates being nominated by the custos rotulorum of the liberty of Peterborough and appointed by the Crown; quarter sessions are held at the Sessions Court, and petty sessions at the same place on Wednesdays; the town is in the rural deanery of Peterborough (first portion) and archdeaconry of Oakham, and is the head of a county court district and poor law union; it is situated on the northern bank of the river Nene, which separates it from Huntingdonshire, at the south-eastern extremity of the county of Northampton, and at the junction of the four principal railways, being 81 miles from London by the high road, 102½ by the Great Eastern railway, 110½ by the London and North Western and 76 by the Great Northern; the Midland railway communicating with the city by the Leicester and Peterborough branch; it is also 12 miles south-east from Stamford, 13 north from Huntingdon, 41 north-east from Bedford, 42 north-east from Northampton, 36 east from Market Harborough and 24 west from Wisbech. The new bridge over the Nene at the end of Broad Bridge street is a structure of iron, erected in 1872, at a cost of over £6,000, and replaced an old wooden bridge which was then removed. The city is well paved and lighted with gas. The city, incorporated by charter, dated March 17th, 1874, is now divided into three wards and is governed by a mayor, six aldermen and eighteen councillors, and the corporation acts also as the Urban Sanitary Authority. The municipal borough comprises the parishes of St. John the Baptist, St. Mark, St. Mary and St. Paul, the hamlets of Eastfield, Millfield and New England, part of Fletton (Hunts) and part of Woodstone (Hunts). Peterborough sends two members to Parliament; the parliamentary borough, which was extended in 1868, now includes Minster close precincts, St. John the Baptist old parish, part of Fletton (Hunts) and part of Woodstone (Hunts).

Peterborough was anciently annexed to the diocese of Lincoln, from which it was separated at the Dissolution and erected into a separate see. The ecclesiastical establishment consists of the bishop, dean, four canons resident, the archdeacons of Leicester, Northampton and Oakham, twenty-four honorary canons, three minor canons, one being precentor and sacristan and the chancellor, all these offices being in the patronage of the bishop except the deanery, which is in the gift of the Crown; the minor canons are appointed by the Dean and Chapter.

The Cathedral church of St. Peter, from which the town derives its name, was the conventual church of one of the wealthiest and most important Benedictine abbeys in England, founded, according to the Saxon Chronicle, in the year 655, by King Oswy, of Northumbria, and Peada, son of Penda, King of Mercia, and with the exception, perhaps, of Lichfield, the first resting place of Christianity in central England. The site chosen for the monastery was at a place called "Medeshamstede" (the home in the meadows), on a rising ground above the Nene, and the work of building was begun in the presence of both the founders, who are also said to have wrought at it with their own hands. In 870, during an incursion of the Danes, the church was burnt and the monks slain, and the fabric remained in ruins until 966, when Ethelwold, bishop of Winchester, with the help of King Edgar, rebuilt the whole as a Benedictine monastery, and the new structure having been completed and the village in which it stood surrounded by a wall of defence, the name of the place was changed in 970 to "Burgh," and eventually from the dedication of the church to St. Peter, it was called as now, Peterborough. The abbey, which was mitred, continued to be ruled by its abbots until the period of the Dissolution, when John Chambers the last abbot surrendered it to Henry VIII. March 1st, 1540, and received a pension of £260, but in the following year the monastic church was made the cathedral of a new diocese and endowed with a third part of the property of the abbey, amounting to £733 yearly (equal to about £14,600 of our money), the remainder being assigned to the king and the newly-established chapter; Abbot Chambers was thereupon appointed the first bishop, and continued to hold the see until 1556.

The Cathedral consists of a Galilee porch, extending across the entire west front and flanked by spired turrets, western transept with towers, nave of eleven bays with aisles, great transept of three bays in each arm with eastern chapels, apsidal choir of four bays with aisles and a retro-choir or eastern transept; the foundation of the choir was laid 7th March, 1118, by Abbot John of Seaz, and it was consecrated in 1143 by Robert de Chesney, bishop of Lincoln; the eastern chapels of the transepts were built in the same style by Abbot Martin of Bec, 1133-5; the remaining portion of the transepts and tower (late Norman) by William de Waterville, abbot, 1155-77; who also erected two bays of the nave and the cloisters; Benedict, abbot, 1177-93, completed the nave (late Norman) and added the painted wood roof; the western transept (Transition Norman) was also probably his work; only one of the transeptal towers, that on the north-west, is complete; its upper stage (Early English) was added by Richard the Sacristan, before 1274, and till the close of the seventeenth century it had a wooden spire; in this tower hang 5 bells (including the great bell presented by Bishop Cusmerland about 1700) which are rung from the floor of the transept; the west front, a magnificent and unrivalled work of the purest Early English style, with its original wooden doors, was the work of Abbots Zachary and Robert of Lindsey, 1200-22; the spire on the south-west tower (Early Decorated) was built in 1320; that on the north west tower (Perpendicular) about 1470; and the church was consecrated October 4th, 1237; the central tower, now in course of re-construction, was reared by Abbot de Waterville, but three of its four stages were removed, and the design remodelled about 1370; the retro-choir, or "new building," now forming the eastern end of the cathedral, was begun by Abbot Ashton in 1438, and completed by Abbot Kirtan about 1495; the entire church is constructed of Barnack stone, a close-grained and most durable freestone from quarries near Stamford, which furnished large quantities of building material from a very early period until the close of the fourteenth century.

The west front, described by Mr. Fergusson as "the grandest and finest in Europe," consists of three majestic arches, 81 feet in height, supported by triangular shafted piers wholly detached from the western wall and surmounted by three gables, enriched with arcading and niches and each pierced by a circular or rose window; small spired turrets rise between the gables, and the whole is flanked on either side by square arcaded towers, crowned with spires and crocketed pinnacles; of the three great arches, that in the centre is narrower than the other two and is filled below with a fine porch or parvise of Late Decorated work, erected about 1370; it has an embattled gate and stair turrets on either side leading to an upper chamber now used as the chapter library, and lighted by a large Perpendicular window; an Early English vaulted roof connects the entire screen with the actual west wall of the cathedral, which is arcaded in three stages, the lowest being pierced with three large and deeply recessed doorways, and the uppermost and loftiest tier by tall windows with tracery panelling between each; the whole width of the west front is 156 feet, and this also is the exact height from the ground to the top of the spires which terminate the western turrets.

The western transept extending across the nave projects

one bay beyond the aisle on either side, its vaulting and arch mouldings are of Transition Norman character, much enriched; lofty arches, parallel with the aisles, support the western towers, but that on the south-west is still incomplete; the bay beyond the towers is finished on either side with a gable.

The nave is throughout Norman and nearly contemporary with that of Ely, completed in 1174, which it greatly resembles, but exceeds it in dimensions, although the great octagon at Ely gives to that cathedral an air of far greater stateliness and magnificence; the nave piers are generally cylindrical, with small shafts set against them, but some both at the east and west end vary from this design; all support well-moulded circular arches; the triforium consists of a range of wide circular arches, each embracing two smaller ones, divided by a single shaft; the clerestory has three circular arches in each bay, that in the centre rising above the others, with slender shafts supporting each; the south side of the nave is earlier than the north, and was no doubt finished first, in order to complete the cloister; between each bay single shafts rise from the floor to the roof, and these formerly upheld the rafters of the painted ceiling, which was originally flat, but on the reconstruction of the eastern and western arches of the tower in the fourteenth century it was made to assume its present angular coved form; this ceiling which is undoubtedly of the twelfth century, is painted in lozenge-shaped panels of unequal size in black and white, bordered with narrow lines of red, and displays within the lozenges figures of various royal and ecclesiastical personages, intermixed with very curious grotesques. The nave aisles have Norman vaulting, and below the windows, which are Late Early English insertions, runs an arcade of intersecting arches: the triforium is lighted by large Decorated windows, c. 1360: in the south aisle is a doorway opening into what was the ancient cloister, called "the abbot's door."

The central tower, the type of which it has been suggested still exists in the fine central tower at Castor, four miles from Peterborough, originally formed a lantern of four stages, but this structure subsequently proving too heavy for the loosely built piers to support, was taken down nearly as far as the crowns of the great arches and rebuilt about 1340, as a lantern of one stage only, in the Decorated style, with two windows on each side, enclosed by traceried arcading; the eastern and western arches were at the same time rebuilt in a pointed form, but the north and south arches opening to the transept remained, as well as the Norman pillars and capitals; the vaulting of the lantern was of wood; and at the angles, rising considerably above the embattled parapet, were high turrets, added by Dean Kipling, about 1798.

Each arm of the great transept consists of three bays, with three tiers of circular headed windows and a mural arcading beneath of these; the lowest the ceilings of both arms are of the same date as that of the nave, and are also painted in black and white, but in a plainer design; they possess, however, a higher interest in the fact that they remain in their original position and have never been raised; both portions of the transept have eastern aisles separated from it by massive piers alternately round and octangular; the eastern aisle of the north arm is also enclosed by oak screen work of Perpendicular date, and the east wall below the windows is hung with tapestry of the sixteenth century; in the north wall a Norman doorway opens to a staircase leading to the roof; here also are some Early English stalls with canopies, and on the east side are two closed arches which once formed the entrance to the lady chapel, a very beautiful building of the Early English period (1274) which rivalled that of Ely, but was demolished in the seventeenth century, in order to furnish materials for the repair of the cathedral; the eastern aisle of the south transept was divided into three chapels, dedicated respectively to St. Oswald, St. Benedict and St. Kynburga, by stone partitions, one of which retains a Norman arcade; the altars with brackets on each side remain; in the west wall of this arm a doorway of the Decorated period gives access to a small building of Transition Norman character, now used as a music school and chapter house.

The heavy organ screen of white stone displaced on the recent removal of the tower was erected by Dean Monk before 1830 and displayed a large central recessed arch with elaborate feathering and triangular crocketed pediment, flanked by pinnacled buttresses, rising above a trefoiled parapet; the space on either side was filled by canopied recesses of similar character; the existing stalls and woodwork are of the same date, but have also been temporarily removed; all the ancient fittings of the choir, including the organ and a superb reredos of carved stone, painted and gilt, and inlaid with silver plates, were destroyed by Cromwell's troopers in 1643. The arrangement of the triforium and clerestory resembles almost exactly that of the eastern transept aisles: the apsidal presbytery, though necessarily altered in order to connect it with the later retro-choir, is still a very fine example of a Norman apse, and may be advantageously compared with that of Norwich; it was originally divided from the choir by a Norman arch, of which only the pillars now remain; a modern screen in the Decorated style extends across the back of the apse, above which are three tiers of windows, most of which, though retaining their circular headings, are filled with Decorated tracery, and have modern stained glass of very indifferent character; the roof of the apse is flat and is decorated with a painting of "Our Lord in Majesty" surrounded by saints and executed in the time of Dean Saunders by Mr. John Clayton, of the firm of Clayton and Bell; the roof of the choir is of painted wood, with pendent gilt bosses, and dates probably from the latter part of the fifteenth century; between the ribs of the groining are painted medallions enclosing figures of angels.

The retro-choir, which now forms the eastern end of the cathedral, and is entered from the choir aisles, of which it is a continuation, forms a large parallelogram of five bays, in the Perpendicular style, and is, in effect, an eastern transept; its general details, and especially the beautiful fan-tracery of the roof, closely resemble those of King's College chapel, Cambridge, but the very fine stained glass, which once filled the windows, has wholly disappeared.

The principal monuments are the following:—In the south choir aisle, under a heavy Norman arch enriched with billet moulding is an effigy supposed to represent Abbot Andrew (1193-1200), vested and holding in the right hand his pastoral staff, in the left a book and treading on a dragon; here also are three other effigies of early abbots, said to have been brought from the destroyed chapter house, which opened from the eastern alley of the cloisters; two of these are of Early Decorated character and another mutilated figure is placed under the wall of the choir; under one of the arches at the back of the apse is a small monument of the early part of the twelfth century, consisting of an oblong mass of Purbeck or some similar marble, bearing on each of the upright sides six much worn figures, under a circular headed arcading, and apparently representing Our Lord and his apostles; the sloping top of the stone is rudely carved with interlaced work, leafage and birds; on the adjoining walls is a monumental sarcophagus, with reclining effigy, to Thomas Deacon, 1721, founder of a charity school here and a benefactor to the city: westward is a shattered monument erected by Sir Humphrey Orm, during his lifetime, for himself and his family, he died in 1721; behind the altar, in a recess, is the effigy of an abbot of Early English date, and near it are memorials to Richard Cumberland, bishop, 1691-1718; and White Kennett, bishop, 1718-28; against the lower wall of the apse are placed together fragments of different monuments of various dates, the Perpendicular portions of which belonged to the shrine of St. Ebbæ, the instructress of St. Etheldreda of Ely; near the south doorway of the choir, a plain slab of black marble marks the spot where the remains of Mary, Queen of Scots, rested from July 30th, 1587, until their removal and re-interment in Westminster Abbey, October 11th, 1612; near the grave of the queen was that of John Chambers, last abbot and first Bishop of Peterborough, 1541-57; beneath the north door, immediately opposite, still rest the remains of Queen Catherine of Arragon, who died at Kimbolton Castle, Hunts, January 8th, 1535, and was interred here with much state; above the tomb is a slab of blue stone, simply inscribed "Queen Catherine, A.D. 1536." On the north side of the great west door hangs a portrait of "Old Scarlett," the sexton, who buried both queens, and died in 1594, aged 98; it has annexed twelve rhyming couplets and above are the arms of the see. Of the six stained windows of the apse, two are filled with the fragments spared by the Parliamentary soldiery, the rest are modern; the communion table cover, worked and presented by the ladies of Peterborough and their friends, was executed from a design by Mr. J. Freedy, architect, and appeared in the Exhibition of 1862; a handsome white frontal, embroidered by Mrs. Argles, from a design by Mr. H. M. Townsend, architect, has been presented by the family of Canon Argles.

The best general view of the exterior of the cathedral is obtained from the north-east, where the whole length of the structure on that side is well seen, including the rich Perpendicular elevation of the retro-choir, the bold Norman apse towering above it, the tall gables of the transepts and the picturesque architectural group formed by the north transeptal tower and the fine spires and pinnacled turrets of the west front. The exterior of the apse is much enriched and at its junction with the choir is relieved by buttresses-turrets, capped with spires: trefoiled medallions enclosing demi-figures of kings and ecclesiastics adorn the Decorated parapet; the retro-choir has massive buttresses between each bay, on each of which is placed the seated figure of an apostle; the parapet, an elaborate and graceful work, bears the devices and initials of its builders and the monograms of Our Lord and the Virgin. The nave is 267 feet in length and 78 feet wide; the length of the choir is 117 feet; the extreme length of the building is 470 feet and the extreme width at the great transept 184 feet; the height from the floor to the painted ceiling is 80 feet and to the top of the lantern 135 feet; the breadth and height of the west front is 156 feet and the height of the lantern tower, lately taken down, was 150 feet.

The close, which surrounds the cathedral on the west and north, is approached from the west through a Norman gatehouse, the work of Abbot Benedict, 1177-93; the gateway is vaulted and groined, and the sides are relieved by arcing; the west front has been faced with Perpendicular work and the upper story, originally a chapel, dedicated to St. Nicholas, has been similarly treated; the window above the arch on the east side once formed part of the shrine of St. Ebba, already referred to. So sacred was the site of this cathedral considered, that every visitor, from the king to the beggar, was compelled, before passing through the gateway into the precinct, to put off his shoes and enter barefooted, for a pilgrimage hither was regarded as equivalent to visiting "The threshold of the apostles at Rome;" near the gatehouse, on the north-east, stands the chancel of the Carnary or alms-houses of St. Thomas of Canterbury, a building of the Transitional Decorated period, erected by Abbot Benedict and some time used as a grammar school; the nave having been pulled down in 1405 by Abbot Genge, to build the parish church of St. John; on the south side of the western portion of the close, and some distance eastwards of the western gatehouse, is the gatehouse formerly leading to the abbot's lodging, but now to the Bishop's palace; this is a structure of Early Decorated character, of two stages, the lowermost having a large and fine recessed arch, over which is a square mullioned window; the entrance is flanked by square shafted turrets with embattled parapets; in the centre of the gable and in the second stage of each turret is a canopied recess enclosing a statue: the knights' chamber over the gateway was the work of Abbot Godfrey de Croyland, 1319; immediately south of the nave of the cathedral is the cloister garth, still bounded by walls on the west and south; some of the arches of the original Norman cloister remain in the western wall, which has four doorways, once opening into an undercroft; at the south-west angle is a fine Norman doorway and in the south wall one of Early English date, together with indications of a cloister of the same period; of the third cloister, erected during the Perpendicular period, on the site of the earlier buildings, and destroyed by the Cromwellian soldiery, some portions of its lavatories remain on the south side; at a short distance south-east of the cloister are still standing the arcades of the hall of the infirmary, built by Abbot John de Caletto, 1248-67; portions of the chapel of St. Laurence, which extended eastward from the hall, the infirmary's table hall, adjoining the chapel on the north-east, and the sub-prior's lodgings (now the archdeacon's house), also remains; the prior resided in what is now the deanery. The cathedral burial ground, which surrounds the western half of the edifice, is beautifully planted with evergreen trees and shrubs; near the south-west angle are buried George Davys, bishop, 1830-61; Francis Jenne, bishop, 1864-68; Marianne, wife of Bishop Davys, 1858; John James D.D. canon, 1868; William Cape M.A. honorary canon, 1874; Owen Davys M.A. archdeacon of Northampton, 1875; and the Rev. Payne Edmunds LL.B. 1861; between the buttresses of the eastern wall of the south transept are numerous coped tombstones, some of which have crosses on the upper slab, but no inscriptions are visible. The cathedral registers date from the year 1615.

When the dangerous state of the great central tower was discovered in 1882, a contract was entered into in January, 1883, for its reconstruction, at an estimated cost of £13,073. The work of removal began on the 5th of April, 1883; and as the work proceeded it became evident that no expedient for patching up and trying to preserve the tower in its existing state would avail, lantern and piers being alike of the most wretched construction. At the foot of the south-eastern pier were found the remains of a Saxon building doubtless the church of the ancient monastery. In the foundation or interior of the eastern pier, a few fragments of Saxon moulded work were found, and one very interesting and richly carved fragment of a capital almost unquestionably Roman: this may have been brought from Caistor; but it is curious that no other fragment of Roman work has been discovered. The estimated cost of the additional work rendered necessary by the architect's report, recommending the taking down and reconstruction of the two western piers, was £5,797, besides the sum of £55,000 required for previous estimates, and in accordance with a resolution of the Restoration Committee on Nov. 7th, 1883, the contract was altered so as to provide for this work. During the removal of the only remaining portions of the central tower, traces of a Norman arcade were discovered and the complete stonework of one of the Norman arches removed in the fourteenth century was also found. In consequence of these discoveries Mr. J. L. Pearson R.A. the cathedral architect, submitted new designs, showing a restoration of the original Norman arches, a loftier tower formed by the restoration or replacement of the Norman arcade originally set over them: the next stage in the tower consisting of the fourteenth century windows and panelled tracery replaced as before; a lofty spire, rivaling Salisbury in height, was also suggested; these plans, approved by the committee, were rejected by the Dean and Chapter, who proposed as an alternative to insert the Norman arcade, but to retain the two fourteenth century arches of the tower. In consequence of the great diversity of opinion expressed by the most eminent authorities on these various proposals, the progress of the works was for some time interrupted, but it was eventually agreed to submit the controversy to the arbitration of the Archbishop of Canterbury and to abide by his decision. The Archbishop, after an exhaustive inquiry into the whole matter, recommended the reconstruction of the committee and that the matter should be referred back to such committee.

The city now consists for ecclesiastical purposes of four parishes, viz. St. John the Baptist's, St. Mark's, St. Mary's Boongate and St. Paul's, the last three having been formed out of that of St. John the Baptist, which was the original parish.

The church of St. John the Baptist, situated in the centre of the city, is a large and fine edifice of stone, in the Perpendicular style, consisting of an embattled chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles with chapels, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles, containing 8 bells and a clock with chimes; in the north aisle is a very beautiful monument in marble, by Flaxman, to William Squire, ob. 1826; there are mural monuments in both aisles to the Wyldbore family, from 1743 to 1781: this church previous to 1402 stood some distance south of the cathedral, but owing to frequent inundations was rebuilt on its present site and the building finished in 1407: the present edifice was restored in 1883, when the galleries were removed, an open oak roof constructed, the walls of the clerestory rebuilt, the interior refitted throughout with open seats and various other improvements effected, at a cost of upwards of £10,000: the east window has been restored and is stained: there are two other stained windows at the east end of both aisles, presented by James Pears esq. at a cost of £1,000: two more, the gift of members of the Broughton family, who also presented the two existing windows in the same aisle in 1883, are about to be erected in the south aisle: the pulpit was given by Mr. John Thompson: there are sittings for 2,500 persons. The register dates from 1558 and, except from the years 1644 to 1653, is perfect and in good preservation and contains some curious memoranda. The living is a discharged vicarage, net yearly value £465 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop, and held since 1875 by the Rev. Henry S. Syers M.A., B.C.L. of Brasenose College, Oxford, and surrogate.

St. Mark's parish was formed in 1858. The church, situated on the Lincoln road and erected in 1856, is a building of stone in the Early English style, from designs by Mr. Edward Ellis, architect, of Fenchurch street, London, and consists of chancel, nave of five bays, aisles, south porch, a north-eastern tower with trifoliate parapet and spire and containing 1 bell: the stained west window displays the arms of twenty-eight of the English sees and was presented by the late G. H. Wialley esq.: the east window was the gift of Mr. John Thompson and in the south transept is a memorial window to the Rev. J. S. Percival, late vicar: the reredos of stone and marble, the sedilia and credence, are from designs by Mr. H. M. Townsend, diocesan architect, and were erected in 1876, also to the memory of Mr. Percival: there are sittings for 1,000 persons. The register dates from the year 1858. The living is a vicarage, the rent-charge £30 with an endowment of £310 yearly from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, net yearly value £280 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1883 by the Rev. John Hilton Molesworth M.A. of Keble College, Oxford, who is a surrogate.

The parish of St. Mary Boongate, created by an Order in Council, dated 27th August, 1857, embraces an acreage twice as great in extent as that now attached to the mother church of St. John and a larger population. The church of which the first stone was laid by the late Bishop of Peterborough on the 30th of May, 1859, is situated at the end of the New road, on a site presented by the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam and is a building in the Early English Lancet style, from designs by E. Christian esq. architect to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and consists of apsidal chancel, nave of four bays, aisles and a north-western saddle-back tower; a turret over the north door contains 1 bell: the six windows in the apse are all stained; one on the south, to the memory of the late Earl Fitzwilliam, was erected by the present vicar: there is also a stained window in each aisle: there are sittings for 870 persons. The register dates from the year 1860. The living is a vicarage, net yearly value £300, including four acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, and held since 1856 by the Rev. William Robert Thomas M.A. of St. Catherine's College, Cambridge, and surrogate.

Here is a Catholic church, erected in 1856, and dedicated to the Holy Trinity and St. Peter; there are also Congregational, Calvinistic Methodist, Baptist, Primitive Methodist and Wesleyan Methodist chapels, and places of worship for Reform Episcopalians, Christadelphians and the Brethren.

The cemetery, situated in Eastfield road, consisting of 9 acres, was formed in 1850 as provided by the Peterborough Improvement and Cemetery Act of that year: it has two mortuary chapels and is under the control of a board of commissioners consisting of 7 members.

The King's (Grammar) School founded by Henry VIII. and now under the control of the Dean and Chapter, has recently been re-constituted under the Endowed Schools Act, as a first grade Public School. There are ten Exhibitions of the value of £10 each, and three Exhibitions to St. John's College, Cambridge, founded in 1635 by Edmund Mountepheer, of Paston, of the annual value of £30 tenable for four years, besides two Exhibitions of the same value tenable for three years at any place of higher education approved by the Dean and Chapter. From its foundation to the present year (1885) the school has been conducted in the building known as Thomas-a-Becket's chapel in the Minster precincts, but under a scheme approved by the Charity Commissioners, the present ground in Park road was purchased and new buildings, including a master's house &c. have been erected, from designs by J. R. Naylor esq. architect, of Derby, at a cost of about £9,000. The present number of scholars is 60, but the building will hold 140.

Deacon's School, originally founded by Thomas Deacon in 1719, for clothing and educating 20 poor boys, has been re-constituted under the Endowed Schools Act of 1869 and 1874 and was re-opened in 1881 as a Middle Class School. The scheme provides for three Exhibitions of £20 a year each, tenable for three years, at some place of higher education for pupils at this school. The present buildings in Crow lane were opened by the Bishop of Peterborough in 1883. The school is under the control of a Board of Governors, six of whom are elected by the fee-payers of the town charities and four by the corporation: the vicar of St. John is an ex-officio governor.

A School Attendance Committee of the Town Council was formed in January, 1877, and consists of twelve members.

St. Peter's Training College for schoolmasters was first opened in 1859, the present building, occupying a site of two acres, was designed by the late Sir G. G. Scott, B.A. and finished in March, 1864, at a cost of £5,500: it will hold 50 students and is intended for the supply of the dioceses of Peterborough, Ely and Lincoln and is governed by a committee of 20 members elected annually from these dioceses in equal proportions of laymen and clergy: the Bishops of Peterborough, Ely, Lincoln and the Chancellor of the University of Cambridge are patrons of the institution and the Bishop of Peterborough is its visitor: principal Rev. Charles Daymond M.A. assisted by a vice-principal and three tutors. Attached to the college is a practising school containing 200 boys, who are under the care of a head master, assisted by the college students and other teachers.

The Guildhall, situated in the Market place, is an ancient building of stone, erected in 1671; the upper portion which rests on an arcade of round arches and is used by the Corporation for their official business, the open space below serves as a butter and poultry market.

The Post Office, in Cambergate, erected in 1874, is a building of brick with stone facings in the Gothic style.

The Corn Exchange, erected on the site of the old theatre in Church street and opened in 1848, is a building in the Italian style, from designs by Mr. Hemmings of Birmingham, containing a spacious market room, available also for public meetings and lectures, and holding 1,000 persons: it is lighted from the roof.

The Public Dispensary, Infirmary and Fever Hospital in Priestgate was originally established in 1815; the late buildings consisted of a mansion, presented by the late Earl Fitzwilliam, and converted into an infirmary in 1848. These were burnt down in 1884, but have been reconstructed, at a cost of £44,500, from designs by Mr. Henry Milnes Townsend, architect, and now contain 50 beds; the average yearly number of patients is 180 in, and 3,000 out. The institution is supported by subscriptions.

The City Police Station is in Milton street, Newtown. The borough force consists of one head constable, three sergeants and seventeen constables. The Liberty police station is in Thorpe road; the force consists of one chief constable, one inspector, one sergeant and six constables.

The almshouses for the poor comprise 44 in Cambergate called the "town estates," and 26 in Westgate known as "Wortley's." The almshouses, as well as the general charities, which are very considerable, are under the direction and management of a self-elected body called feoffees, at present consisting of nine members only; the full number is 13 but vacancies are not filled up until their number is reduced to five. The inmates of the almshouses are admitted irrespective of sex and receive 30s. each yearly from the charities. There are also eight almshouses in the Minster precincts, which are part of the Cathedral establishment, and are supported from its endowments; they are occupied by eight aged women, each of whom receives £6 yearly.

The sessions house, formerly the Liberty Gaol, on the Thorpe road, but now used only for the trial of prisoners, is a building of stone in the Norman style, erected in the year 1842, at a cost of £12,000, from the designs of W. J. Donthorn, architect, of Hanover street, London; the front portion comprises the sessions court with the magistrates' room, jury room and clerks' offices.

The Union house, erected in 1836, is pleasantly situated in extensive grounds on the Thorpe road.

The Law Courts, situated on the New road and erected in 1873, are plain buildings of brick; the county court is held here and the court of probate and the offices of inland revenue are also in the same building.

Boroughbury Hall, in Boroughbury, a building erected in 1882, is used as a place of worship by the Christadelphians, as well as for lectures and classes &c. and will hold about 300 persons.

The Temperance Hall, an iron structure in Lincoln road, erected in 1883, will hold 375 persons. The former Temperance Hall is now used as a place of worship by the Brethren.

The Young Men's Christian Association, founded in 1863, has premises in Wentworth street, comprising an excellent library of 3,000 volumes and a reading-room well supplied with London and provincial papers and periodicals.

The Peterborough Book Society was formed here in 1730 for the promotion of literature.

The Drill Hall, in Queen street, built in 1868, is a plain brick building belonging to the G and H companies 1st Northamptonshire Rifles and is used for concerts and lectures; it will hold 600 persons.

St. Mark's Church Institute and Working Men's Club, in Wood street, has rooms for class instruction, reading, indoor games &c.; the attached grounds afford facilities for cricket and other outdoor sports. There is also a bath room; and refreshments are supplied.

The Theatre Royal and Fitzwilliam Hall were erected in 1877. The former is licensed for dramatic performances and will seat 1,100. The latter, used for concerts, assemblies and exhibitions will hold 600. The whole forms a fine building of brick with stone facings, situated in the Park road, and was erected from the designs of Messrs. Pye and Hayward, architects, of London, at a cost of about £5,000; it is the property of William Daniel Nichols esq.

The principal hotels are the Angel in Narrow Bridge street; the Great Northern, opposite the Great Northern railway station; and the Golden Lion, Broad Bridge street. There are assembly rooms attached to the Wentworth hotel in Wentworth street.

Two weekly newspapers are published in the town, the

'Peterborough and Huntingdonshire Standard,' 1d. and the 'Peterborough Advertiser,' 1d.; the 'Peterborough Express' is published twice weekly at one half-penny.

A park of twenty-one acres was opened in 1877 on the north side of the town, and is the property of the Peterborough Land Co. Limited.

The trade of this city chiefly consists of corn, malt, coal and timber and the manufacture of agricultural implements and the transit of live and dead stock and other agricultural produce to London and elsewhere by the various railways. The market days are Wednesday for live stock, of which there is always an extensive supply, and Saturday for live and dead stock and general produce; the markets have hitherto been held in some of the principal streets of the town. The cattle market stands on a piece of ground occupying an area of 5 acres; an Act of Parliament was obtained in May, 1863, and the market was opened in May, 1867, under the management of the Peterborough Cattle Market Company Limited; it holds 104 calves, 4,448 sheep and lambs, 520 pigs and 145 horses, together with market house and the necessary offices for salesmen. The fairs are St. Peter's on the 2nd Tuesday and Wednesday in July and Bridge fair the 1st Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in October; the one in July, for wool, cattle and horses, is held in the town; the October fair, held in some fields on the south side of the river, is for wool, beasts, sheep, horses, stock and general purposes.

In 1856-7 a general survey of the river Nene was made by eminent engineers for the purpose of making it navigable for vessels of 80 tons burthen from Wisbech and for the better drainage of the meadows from the periodical floods to which they are subject.

Westwood House is the residence of Henry Hampden Esq. J.P.

The Bishop of Peterborough is lord of the manor of Boroughbury and the Dean and the Chapter are lords of the manor of Peterborough. The Bishop, the Dean and Chapter and the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam are the chief landowners.

The neighbourhood of Peterborough is generally spoken of as being situated upon the lower oolites, and although the hard rock on which the soil of the district rests is invariably one of the members of the oolitic foundation, the subsoil in the neighbourhood of the town is gravel. The masses of gravel are interspersed with layers of fine sand, varying from a few inches to six or eight feet in thickness. Eastward of the town the fen lands appear, in some instances being covered by patches of gravel and in all cases resting on a tenacious blue clay, called Oxford clay, which is of considerable thickness, the peaty soil above it varying in different localities from one to twelve feet; while not unfrequently, before coming to the Oxford clay, two layers of peat are found with a stratum of brown clay interposed between them, showing that during the formation of the fens in this district the land was subject to incursions of the sea. In the town itself the gravel beds rest on a series of shales, clays and compact blue limestone, reaching to a depth of 60 feet and resting on a bed of white sand, which is the uppermost member of the Great Oolite. The beds above comprehend the cornbrash and forest marble series, the different layers of which are of varying and uncertain thickness and, as it were, dovetailed into each other in such a manner as to render the sinking of wells for a permanent supply of water a matter of considerable difficulty and uncertainty, so much so that in one position water may be obtained at less than 20 feet, whereas only a few yards distant it may be requisite to continue the sinking to more than double that depth, nor can any reliable estimate be formed as to the dip or direction of the retentive rock.

The area of the old parish of St. John the Baptist is 6,310 acres; rateable value, £84,016; the population in 1881 of the municipal and parliamentary borough was—

Longthorpe is an ecclesiastical parish, 2 miles west from Peterborough, formed in 1850 from the parish of St. John the Baptist. The church of St. Botolph is a plain building of coarse rubble, dating from the thirteenth century, and consisting of chancel, nave, aisles and a western bell cote, containing 1 bell: in the chancel is a piscina and aumbry: two other brackets and a piscina are in the south aisle and two brackets in the north aisle: there is a tablet in the south aisle to Frances, daughter of Sir Francis St. John bart. of this place, 1794: the church was restored in 1869, and will seat about 300 persons. The register dates from the year 1837, the former register being included in that of St. John the Baptist, Peterborough. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from tithe rent-charge £116, net £110, including 4 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam (whose father, the late Earl Fitzwilliam K.G. in the year 1850 endowed it with an income of £100 a year), and held since 1883 by the Rev. Charles Downman LL.B. of Trinity College, Dublin. Thorpe Hall, which stands in Thorpe Park, a small but beautiful demesne, is a handsome stone building in the Italian style, and was restored and two new lodges were added by the late Rev. R. W. Strong M.A.; it is the seat of Charles Isham Strong esq. J.P. Thorpe Tower, in the occupation of Mr. James Warwick, farmer, is a very ancient fortified place, dating probably from about 1200; on the north-east is a massive square embattled tower, with pyramidal roof, and supported by very heavy buttresses. At the Manor House is an ancient well, called "holywell," consisting of two chambers, from which a stream of water is continually flowing. The principal landowners are the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, who are lords of the manor, the trustees of the late Hon. George Wentworth Fitzwilliam and Charles Isham Strong esq. J.P. of Thorpe hall. The area is 1,300 acres; and the population in 1881 was 308.

PIDDINGTON is a parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Wymersley, union of Hardingstone, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Preston (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 5½ miles south-east-by-south from Northampton, near the road to Newport Pagnell. Horton station on the Northampton and Bedford branch of the Midland railway is 2 miles distant. The church of St. Mary is a building of stone in the Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with lofty spire containing 5 bells: the church was restored in 1877-8, at a cost of £1,300, raised by subscription, under the direction of Messrs. E. F. Law and Sons, architects, of Northampton, when the north aisle was rebuilt, the nave roof renewed and the tower efficiently repaired: further restorations are in contemplation, towards which Her Most Gracious Majesty the Queen has promised the sum of £300. The register, including Hackleton, records baptisms from 1574; marriages, 1574; and burials, 1573. The living is a vicarage united to that of Horton, in the gift of Sir George William Gunning bart. J.P. and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Tanner M.A. of Caius College, Cambridge. The Rev. Francis John Cockett, of St. Aidans, curate in charge, resides at Hackleton. Here is a Wesleyan Methodist chapel, and a Baptist chapel, holding 240 persons, to which a school-room and vestry were added in 1862, at a cost of £240. The Willoughby charity consists of £20 yearly for apprenticing, and includes Hackleton: there are other charities of £12 yearly for distribution; £6 ros. of this sum is derived from an allotment, granted by the Commissioners of Enclosure, in lieu of right to cut furze, and is distributed in equal sums of money, to all widows and to labouring men over fifty years of age: there is also a sum of £5, which is distributed to the most necessitous and deserving aged labourers of the parish. Col. Sir Robert Lloyd-Lindsay K.C.B., V.C., M.P. of Overstone, who is lord of the manor, Sir George Wm. Gunning bart. M.A., J.P. of Horton house, Drury Wake esq. J.P. of Pitsford and Mrs. Whitworth, are the principal landowners. The Crown has also considerable property here. The soil is marl and clay; subsoil, rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley and grass.

The area is 1,080 acres; rateable value, £1,677; and the population in 1881 with Hackleton was 886.

HACKLETON is a hamlet half a mile north-east, with a population in 1881 of 378; rateable value, £1,876. There is a Baptist chapel here, built in 1809. This hamlet has charities of £22 yearly for distribution. The building formerly used as an infants' school in this parish and erected by the late Rev. Sir H. J. Gunning bart. in 1866, was refitted in 1879, and opened as a club and reading-room, for the parishioners on small annual payments, under the auspices of Sir W. G. Gunning bart. J.P. who is also a liberal supporter. There is still standing in this parish a cottage, which was once the home of the Rev. Dr. Carey, the distinguished Indian missionary.

PILTON is a parish 3 miles south-south-west from Oundle, 3½ miles east from Barnwell station and 2½ south from Thorpe-Archurch, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Navisford, Oundle union and county court district, rural deanery of Oundle second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, on the west bank of the Nene. The church of St. Mary is an ancient building of stone in the Early English style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with spire containing 4 bells: the south doorway is a curious example of mixed styles of early date: a very beautiful stained east window and three on the south side of the chancel were added in 1862: the church was thoroughly restored in 1875, at a cost of about £1,500, of which the patron, Lord Lilford, contributed about £1,400, the remainder being defrayed by Lady Lilford, the rector and other friends; a new roof was placed over the nave, and the church re-paved and re-seated throughout. The registers date from the year 1569. The living is a discharged rectory, tithes rent-charge £180, net yearly value £173, including 3½ acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Lord Lilford, and held since 1870 by the Rev. Francis Greaves Hodgson M.A. of Exeter

PIPEWELL is a hamlet or liberty of about 25 houses, in the several parishes of Rushton, Desborough, Great Oakley and Wilbarston, situated 6½ miles north-north-west from Kettering and 2 north from Rushton station, on the Midland railway, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Rothwell, Kettering union and county court district and within the precincts of the Old Forest of Rockingham. The chapel of St. Mary, erected in 1881-2, at a cost of £600, defrayed by subscription, is a building of stone in the Norman style and stands very near the site of the Abbey; it consists of chancel and nave and an open bell cote containing 1 bell: services are occasionally held here by the Rev. William Robert Pallet Wandby, of St. John's College, Cambridge, and rector of Stoke Albany, who resides at Wilbarston. Pipewell Hall, the seat of Oscar William Holden-Hambrough esq. D.L., J.P. lord of the manor and sole landowner, is a large stone mansion situated in a well-wooded park of 16 acres, and surrounded by pleasant grounds. In a field near the present hall stood the abbey of Pipewell or De Divisis (two divisions), founded in 1142, temp. Edward I. by W. de Boutevilleyn, one of the largest abbeys of the Cistercian order in this country: it was dedicated to St. Mary, and colonised from New Minster, near Morpeth; at the time of its dissolution there were 13 monks, and revenues estimated at £286; a great council was held here in Sept. 1189. The soil is a mixture of red soil, clay and limestone; subsoil, ironstone. The land is pasture, arable and woodland. The area is about 2,070 acres.

RADSTONE is a small village and parish in the Southern division of the county, hundred of King's Sutton, Brackley union and county court district, rural deanery of Brackley third, archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north from Brackley station, $\frac{1}{2}$ miles south from Helmdon station and about 62 from London. The church of St. Lawrence is an ancient edifice of stone, in mixed styles, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, south porch and a low western tower with saddle-back roof containing 2 bells: the lower part of the tower is Early Norman, circ. 1150; the middle stage Early English, circ. 1250, and the upper part Decorated, circ. 1370; the nave and aisle are also Decorated, except the west window of the aisle, which dates from 1375; the east window and one other are stained: there is a Norman font. The register of burials dates from 1566; baptisms, 1568; marriages, 1666. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge from the lords of the manor £24, net yearly value £120, including 35 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of Merton College, Oxford, and held since 1877 by the Rev. William Surman Mansell T.A.K.C.L. The living was endowed with £200 private benefaction and £800 from Queen Anne's bounty. The vicarage house which is near the church was enlarged in 1862. The Warden and fellows of Merton College, Oxford are lords of the manor and sole landowners: the estate was purchased in 1870 from the Ven. C. W. Holbech M.A. archdeacon of Coventry. The soil is generally a cold clay; the subsoil is limestone. The chief crops are wheat, beans and grass. The area is 1,225 acres; rateable value, £1,228 14s.; the population in 1881 was 116.

RAUNDS is a parish and large village with a station on the Kettering and Cambridge line of the Midland railway about $\frac{1}{2}$ miles north-east from the village, which is $\frac{1}{2}$ south from Thrapston, 4 north-east from Higham Ferrers and 69 from London, in the Oundle division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers (second portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of St. Peter is a noble edifice of stone, in the Early English style with Decorated and Perpendicular insertions, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south chantry, south porch and a western tower with broach spire, containing 6 bells and a clock; the spire, rising to a height of 180 feet, was struck by lightning on the 31st July, 1866, and so severely injured that it was found necessary to take it down and rebuild it, which was done, at a cost of £1,731, raised by subscription: the lower stage of the tower, the interior of which has a screen, is groined; the font is a curious circular example, on a moulded pedestal: there is a monument with arms to

William Gage esq. of Magilligern, county Derry, Ireland, who bequeathed £10 annually for 40 years to the poor of this parish; and at the east end of the south aisle, on a large stone, near the entrance to the chapel, are effigies of a man and woman in brass with an invocatory inscription commemorating John Tawyer, who died 25th Jan. 1370, and Margaret, his wife, and below, figures of four daughters and a shield of arms; on an adjoining stone is the effigy of a woman, with those of four sons and five daughters, and a shield of the same arms: there is also a panelled altar-tomb, inscribed to John Wales, vicar, ob. 1596; the church has been restored, at a cost of upwards of £4,000, from designs by the late Sir G. Gilbert Scott B.A., and was re-opened in June, 1874; in the churchyard is the base of an ancient cross. The register dates from the year 1583. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value from 205 acres of glebe £200, net £220 with residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1880 by the Rev. Hugh Bryan M.L. of Clare College, Cambridge. There is a Baptist chapel and a Wesleyan chapel built in place of a former one in 1874, at a cost of nearly £3,000, and a Primitive Methodist chapel, erected in 1870. A Temperance Hall was built in 1859 and is used for lectures; it will hold 350 persons. Raunds is a place of considerable importance for the manufacture of shoes, which is extensively carried on by Messrs. William Nichols and Son, J. King Smith and Owen Smith. The charities, amounting to about £35 yearly value, are chiefly derived from land left by John Blaise, of Raunds, and are distributed in money on St. Thomas' day, to the poor of the parish. H.M. the Queen and Sir James Hay Langham bart. M.A. of Cottesbrooke park, Northampton, are lady and lord of the manor. The principal landowners are the vicar, Sir James Hay Langham bart. and Messrs. Thomas Nichols, J. K. Nichols, S. Brown, R. Rotton, T. C. Jeeves and Mrs. Sharman, with some smaller proprietors. The soil is chiefly clay, with some light scaly land; subsoil, clay; and in the neighbourhood of the village, white rock and ironstone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and roots. The area is 3,680 acres; rateable value, £9,374; the population in 1881 was 2,799.

RAVENSTHORPE is a parish and village in the Northern division of the county, partly in the hundred of Gulsborough, but chiefly in the hundred of Nobottle Grove, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Haddon (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough, 4½ miles north-west from Spratton station on the North Western railway, 8 north-east from Daventry, 10 north-west-by-north from Northampton, 7½ south from Welford and 75 from London, watered by a tributary stream of the Stowe brook. The church of St. Dionysius is a building of stone in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisle, an embattled western tower with small pinnacles containing 5 bells and a clock: the chancel was rebuilt in 1308, at the expense of Mrs. Bateman, of Gulsborough, on a smaller scale than before, and in an inferior style: in the church is a large and curious chest, covered with thin plates of iron, crossing at right angles: some good original benches remain, with square traceried ends. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1551; marriages and burials, 1539. The living is a vicarage, tithe rent-charge £80, net yearly value £250, with 107 acres of glebe and residence, in the gift of the Bishop of Peterborough, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Robert Nicholson Featherston M.A. of Jesus College, Cambridge. The vicarage house, standing close to the church, is a commodious building in a good garden. Here is a Baptist chapel, built in 1812. There are two charities, of which Lord Willoughby de Broke, the vicar and the churchwardens are trustees; these charities are derived from 14 acres of land, yielding an amount of about £22 yearly; and Palmer's charity, also derived from land, produces about £30 yearly. Lord Willoughby de Broke, who is lord of the manor, Mrs. Lantsbury, Mrs. Langton, Mr. John Clarke and Christchurch, Oxford, are the principal landowners. The soil is light red and some stiff clay; subsoil, clay. The soil is pasture and arable. The entire area is 2,871 acres; rateable value, £2,657; the population in 1881 was 593.

bears the date of 1619, which is the probable time of the erection of that portion of the edifice; a vestry was built, and an organ added in 1879, at a cost of £230, raised by subscription; in the chancel is a piscina and an ancient altar tomb, perfectly plain, and without ornament or inscription, said to be that of Richard Wake, of Hartwell, second son of Roger Wake, of Blisworth, and his two wives Dorothy, daughter of Sir Richard Dive, and Margaret, daughter of Thomas, Lord Grey and Marquis of Dorset; the upper half of an inscribed slab, found during some repairs to the chancel, bears the following legend "Orate pro Animâ Domine Matilde Mallipre quondam pri. . . ."

Animâ propicietur Deus, Amen, Amen:" the date is probably about 1,400; there are memorials to the Hoe and Henshaw families, 1706-72, and one to John Fawcett, alias Collin M.A. minister, 1618. The register dates from the year 1587. The living is a vicarage, gross yearly value £125, including 77 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Grafton K.G. and the rector of Ashton, and held since 1884 by the Rev. Frederick Robert Chapman Hutton B.A. of New College, Oxford. Here is a Baptist chapel, erected in 1725 and enlarged in 1874, and a Wesleyan chapel. The charities consist of an allotment of land of 11A. 3R. 16P. awarded by the Commissioners at the Enclosure in lieu of a piece of unenclosed land left by Catherine and Elizabeth Chival in 1708. The Feoffees' estate consists of four cottages and 10A. 2R. 12P. the rent of which is also applied to the use of the poor; the income of the two now (1885) amounts to £40 yearly. The Hide, or Hyde farm-house was formerly the Manor house, and belonged to the Abbey of St. James; it was granted to Richard Fernor esq. whose grandson, Sir Hatton Fernor, sold it to Stephen Hoc esq. in the reign of James II. The Duke of Grafton K.G. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. The soil is clayey; subsoil, limestone and rock. The chief crops are wheat, beans and peas. The area is 1,600 acres; rateable value, £8,903 6s. 11d.: the population in 1881 was 720.

ROCKINGHAM is a parish, separated from Leicestershire by the river Welland, 10 miles east-by-north from Market Harborough, 9 north from Kettering and 25 north-north-east from Northampton, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Corby, Uppingham union and county court district, rural deanery of Weldon first, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The London and North Western railway (Rugby and Stamford branch) has a station in the parish of Great Easton, Leicestershire, 1 mile north of this village which is called Rockingham station. The church of St. Leonard is a building of stone in the Decorated style, consisting of chancel, with south chapel, nave and north aisle, at the north-east angle of which rises the small tower, square below, with an octagonal upper story containing 1 bell; the chancel and south chapel were rebuilt in 1868, and the other portions restored and a vestry added in 1873, at a cost of £3,000, under the direction of Mr. Browning, architect, of Stamford. The register dates from the year 1552. The living is a rectory, title rent-charge £150, net yearly value £204, including 30 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of G. L. Watson esq. J.P. and held since 1877 by the Rev. James Bevan Gwyn M.A. of Jesus College, Oxford. The charities amount to £13 yearly value, derived from land left in 1720 by one of the Watson family. This village, situated on the declivity of a hill, in the midst of what was once Rockingham Forest, was a market town in the reign of Queen Elizabeth; on the top of the hill a castle was erected by William the Norman for the defence of the extensive iron works then existing in the adjacent woodlands; the tower and part of the body of the church were destroyed in the Civil War, during the siege of the castle, which was garrisoned for the king by its proprietor, Sir Lewis Watson, afterwards created Baron Rockingham, a title which became extinct in 1782. Rockingham Castle, the seat of George Lewis Watson esq. D.L., J.P. is situated in a park of over 400 acres, diversified by hill and dale and is well wooded; the present aspect of the castle at its entrance gates still recalls the idea of the military defences of past ages; the archway is flanked by two bastion towers with curtain walls extending on either side; passing through the archway the great court is reached, which comprises that portion of the castle erected in the thirteenth and sixteenth centuries and still inhabited. G. L. Watson esq. D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is clayey; subsoil, iron and lime stone. The chief crops are hay, wheat and beans. The area is 890 acres; rateable value, £1,665; the population in 1881 was 227.

ROTHWELL, in early times a town of some importance, is a parish 4 miles north-west from Kettering and 2 miles south from Desborough station and 2½ south-west from Rushton station, both of which are on the main line of the Midland railway, bounded on the north and north-west by the river Ise, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Rothwell, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Rothwell (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of the Holy Trinity is a fine structure in the Norman and Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles and a western tower with small pinnacles and a flat pyramidal roof with vane: under the south aisle of the church is a vault or charnal house, discovered about the year 1650, and containing the bones of many thousand persons, stacked in order, some of which are immensely large: the spire fell in the year 1657 and broke down two bays at the west end of the church: the south side of the chancel and the doorway leading into the tower are Norman; the chancel, as in a few other rare instances, has four sedilia, and on the eastern gable of the nave is a sanctus bell turret: in the church are several interesting brasses; the earliest is the effigy of a priest vested in a cope, his head resting on a pillow, supported by angels; at his feet is a prayer in Latin, and an inscription in Norman-French to William de Rothwell, archdeacon of Essex c. 1220; another has effigies of a man and his wife in civil costume, and is inscribed to Edward Saunders of Haryngton, first founder of the church or a chantry within it, 1514; and Johanna, his wife; the third is on the north side of the chancel and displays the kneeling figure of a man in ruff and long robe, with a quartered shield of arms, crest and mantling, and above, an invocatory prayer; below is a large tomb inscribed to Owen Ragsdale, the founder of the hospital, 1591; the chancel was restored in 1836. The register, including Orton, dates from July, 1708. The living is a vicarage with Orton annexed, gross yearly value £160 with residence, in the alternate gift of the Governors of Rothwell Hospital and of The Misses Hall, and held since 1855 by the Rev. Richard Morton M.A. of St. Catharine's College, Cambridge. Here are Congregational and Wesleyan Methodist chapels. The Congregational chapel was first founded in 1602. The ancient market house, begun between 1575 and 1580 by Sir Thomas Tresham of Rushton kt. and designed by John Thorpe, architect, stands at one side of a large open space opening out from the main street of the village, and though roofless is otherwise in good preservation; the building forms a parallelogram, with a rectangular projection on each face and a circular stair turret at the south-east angle, of which only the lower portion now remains, and is used as a lock up; the lower floor was intended as an open market hall and the upper floor probably as a town hall; the main design consists of two super-imposed orders, treated with considerable freedom and ingenuity, and highly picturesque in effect; the facing stone is of fine texture and great hardness, and the workmanship throughout excellent; the two features of the greatest interest in the building are the Latin inscription in the lower frieze, setting forth the reasons of Sir Thomas for erecting it, and the shields in the upper frieze and tympana of the arches; the latter, 60 in number, are well preserved, and include the arms of the families of Stanley, Russell, Mildmay, Hatton, Stafford, Throckmorton, Saunders, Ragsdale, Fulton and others: after the visit of the Royal Archaeological Institute to this place in 1878, a scheme of repair and sustentation was drawn up by Mr. Somers Clarke, jun. at the instance of its committee, but the effort, owing to the agricultural depression, has entirely failed. Jesus Hospital was founded by Owen Ragsdale gent. in 1593, for 10 old widowers; the Governors in 1833 enlarged the hospital, so that at the present time 26 widowers are received into the hospital, who are clothed and allowed 7s. per week; the income of the charity is now (1885) £830 yearly, derived mostly from land. Hunt's charity of £37 yearly is for distribution amongst the industrious poor; Agnes Hill's charity now of about £23 yearly, is distributed to 6 poor widows; Ponder's charity of £7 12s. 6d. yearly is distributed in flannels and blankets; Turville's charity is distributed in coals, and Cooper's charity is distributed in bread five times a year. A fair is held on Trinity Monday and the four following days for stock and pedlary. By a decision of the Enclosure Commissioners in 1767, the poor of Rothwell became entitled to £11 yearly from a piece of land called the "Rowell Poor's Land;" the poor, however, derived no benefit from this charity until 1833. Captain John Borlase Tibbitts D.L. &c. who is lord of the manor, and Charles Brown esq. are the principal landowners. The soil is composed of red land, clay and ironstone; subsoil, ironstone. The chief crops are hay, wheat and barley. The parish contains 3,438 acres; rateable value, £14,103; the population in 1881 was 2,755.

THORPE UNDERWOOD is a hamlet of this parish, situated a mile and a quarter from Rothwell. The area is 360 acres; and the population in 1881 was 18.

Parish Clerk, Henry Willis.

RUSHDEN is a large parish and village one mile south from Higham Ferrers and about 2 miles east from Irchester station on the Midland railway and 2½ south from Higham Ferrers and 2 miles east from Ditchford stations on the North Western railway, on the road to Bedford, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Wellingborough, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough. The village, which stands high, is lighted with gas, and was anciently a seat of the Dukes of Lancaster. The church of St. Mary the Virgin, formerly collegiate, is an edifice in the Early English, Decorated and Perpendicular styles; consisting of a choir, nave, aisles, transepts, north, south and western porches, and a fine tower and crocketed spire nearly 200 feet high, and containing a peal of 6 bells and clock; it was thoroughly restored in the year 1874-5, at a cost of about £4,700, it was also re-seated at a further cost of £300 and a new organ erected, costing from four to five hundred pounds; between the piers of the transepts are arches filled with pierced tracery of varied character; there is also some carved screen-work and in the chancel three Early English sedilia and a piscina; the church retains some ancient stained glass, a carved seat and other relics of ancient art: on the wall of the north chancel is a fine marble monument to the memory of John Ekins, of Rushden, ob. 1677: in a recess in the wall of the north chancel is the recumbent effigy, clad in plate armour, of Sir Goddard Pemberton kt. ob. 1616: at the east end of the north chancel are the kneeling effigies of Robert Pemberton, ob. 1608, and Mary, his wife, ob. 1609, the former in plate armour, and the latter in a loose robe with a tight-fitting bodice; below these, on the north side, are figures of four sons, and on the south side those of their daughters: a mural tablet on the north side of the north chancel is inscribed to Elizabeth, wife of John Ekins, ob. 1663: here also is an inscribed brass to the memory of Frederick Maitland Sartoris, who died in 1833. The register of baptisms dates from the year 1593; marriages and burials, 1559. The living is a rectory, gross yearly value £300 with residence, in the gift of and held since 1868 by the Rev. John Thomas Barker M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge, and Hon. Canon of Peterborough; the rectory house was built in the years 1870-1. A Temperance Hall was built in the year 1872, at a cost of £400, and will hold about 250 persons. A Wesleyan chapel was erected in the year 1873 and there are two Baptist chapels. Baptist Sunday schools were erected in 1834, at a cost of £1,000, and will hold about 400 children. Charities.—Maye's charity of £25 yearly derived from land left in 1631 by William Maye of Rushden, is distributed on May-day; Latham's charity of £3, derived from property in the occupation of Mr. G. F. Baker, of Barnwell mills, near Oundle, left in 1619 by the Rev. Nicholas Latham, vicar of Barnwell, is distributed in sums of 10s. each to six persons who have been unfortunate; and there is also a charity called "Bull money" of £3 yearly, derived from land in the village, occupied by Mr. T. Sanders, and distributed in money. There are four almshouses, erected in 1833, by his parents, to the memory of Frederick Maitland Sartoris, and supported by them. The inhabitants are chiefly employed in boot and shoe making. Rushden Hall, the seat of Frederick Urban Sartoris esq. J.P. is a handsome mansion in the Elizabethan style, situated close to the village and surrounded by extensive and well-wooded pleasure grounds. H.M. the Queen is lady of the manor. The principal landowners are F. P. Sartoris esq. J.P. and Messrs. Banks, Skinner, N. Fisher, S. Mason, T. Sanders, G. Denton, Mrs. Roberts and the rector. The soil varies from a strong clay to a light sandy land; the subsoil, clay, gravel and limestone. The chief crops are wheat, barley and beans. The area is 3,590 acres; rateable value, £10,271; the population in 1881 was 3,657.

RUSHTON is a village and parish 4 miles north-west from Kettering and 79 from London, with a station close to the village on the Midland railway, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Rothwell, union and county court district of Kettering, rural deanery of Rothwell (second portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The river Isc flows through the parish. There were formerly two churches in this parish, but the church of St. Peter was taken down in 1830. The church of All Saints is an ancient building of stone in the Early English and later styles, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, north aisle with chapel, south porch and an embattled western tower containing 5 bells; the church was restored in 1860, at a cost of £1,200, under the direction of Mr. Law, architect, of Northampton: in the church is the cross-legged effigy, in Purbeck marble, of a knight in ringed mail and surcoat, assigned to Sir William de Goldingham who held lands here, and died in 1296; there is also an effigy, the only one of the kind in England, to Sir Thomas Tresham knight and Lord Prior of the order of Knights Hospitaliers of St. John of Jerusalem; it exhibits him in the usual dress of the Hospitaliers, assigned to them by Pope Honorius III. viz. a long black mantle with a white cross flory on the breast, worn over the armour, and a sword belted round it; he died 1559. The register including Rushton St. Peter dates from the year 1625. The living is a rectory, tithes rent-charge £650, net yearly value £600, including 104 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of W. C. Clarke-Thornhill esq. J.P. and held since 1850 by the Rev. A. Hawkes M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. Rushton Hall, the seat of William Capel

Clarke-Thornhill esq. J.P., D.L. is a fine stone mansion standing in a well-timbered park of 360 acres; in a distant corner of the grounds, approached through long shady avenues of box and yew, is the unique triangular lodge, built by Sir Thomas Tresham, the chief of that branch of the Tresham family which long held Rushton hall as their principal seat; the building, in plan an equilateral triangle, 33 feet in length on each face, stands amid formal lawns dotted with evergreens and consists of three floors, each containing an hexagonal chamber, and lighted by three windows on each of the three sides; in the top floor is a fire-place, the only one in the building, and a chimney, whose supports are not visible, rises mysteriously from the centre of the edifice, which is entered by a doorway in the first floor, reached by a flight of steps; over the head of the door are the figures "55-55," as yet unexplained; and above these is a curious quasi-pediment, with the arms of Tresham and the legend "Tres. Testimohvm. Dant.," both tiers of windows are surrounded with shields of arms; the space above the windows and the gargoyles bear the initial letters of an inscription from the book of Revelations, iv. 8, and the frieze of the entablature is occupied with other inscriptions; every side of the structure has three gables, curiously crocketed and carved with emblems, all of which have a religious signification: the lodge appears to have been erected between 1593 and 1595; Sir Thomas Tresham was the grandson of the Lord Prior Tresham mentioned above, and his eldest son, Francis, was one of the conspirators in the Gunpowder Plot. W. C. Clarke-Thornhill esq. J.P., D.L. of Rushton Hall, is lord of the manor and sole landowner. The soil is a mixture of red loam, clay and limestone; subsoil, ironstone. The chief crops are hay, wheat, barley &c. The parish contains 3,102 acres; rateable value, £9,630; the population in 1881 was 417.

ST. MARTIN STAMFORD BARON (or STAMFORD ST. MARTIN) is a large parish adjoining Stamford, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Nassburgh, liberty of Peterborough, union of Stamford, county court district of Peterborough, partly in the municipal and parliamentary borough of Stamford, rural deanery of Peterborough second, archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, on the south bank of the river Welland which separates it from the county of Lincoln; the river is here crossed by a stone bridge of five arches. The Midland and Great Northern railways have stations here. The church of St. Martin, situated in the High street, is an edifice of stone in the Late Perpendicular style, consisting of chancel, nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles containing 6 bells; it contains some fine monuments of the Burghley family, amongst which is a canopied altar tomb, with stone effigy to William Cecil K.G. first Lord Burghley and Lord High Treasurer, ob. 4th Aug. 1598; there is also a mural tablet to William Wissing, portrait painter, ob. 1687. The register of baptisms and burials dates from the year 1572; marriages, 1582. The living is a discharged vicarage, gross yearly value £218, in the gift of the Marquess of Exeter, and held since 1843 by the Rev. Ellis Bowden Were M.A. of Queen's College, Oxford; the Rev. Robert Blair Maconochie, Chancellor of Caius College, Cambridge, B.A. is curate in charge. The Stamford Union House is in this parish. In this parish is Burghley Hospital, founded by William Lord Burghley, above mentioned, in 1597, for the maintenance of twelve poor men and a warden, also two schools, one for ten poor girls, the other for an equal number of boys, all of whom are clothed out of the funds of the charity. Fryer's charity includes six almshouses for as many widows of besedmen of Lord Burghley's hospital and of Truesdale's hospital, Stamford. Sums amounting to £30 yearly, from several charities, are distributed to the general poor. Burghley House, the seat of the Most Hon. Marquess of Exeter, situated at the south end of the park, is a magnificent mansion of freestone in the Tudor style, begun in 1575 by the Lord Treasurer William Cecil, Baron Burghley, ancestor of the Marquesses of Exeter and Salisbury, from the designs of John Thorpe, architect; the building forms a parallelogram, and includes a beautiful court and a chapel with spire; the walks are ornamented with grottoes; the park is studded with stately trees and divided into three portions, viz. the upper, lower and middle parks, of which the lower is open to the public; the middle park is used for grazing and game preserving, and the upper park contains a numerous herd of deer; the entire park is about a miles in length and 1 mile in width and contains about 1,500 acres: the rearing of foreign trout for the lakes, three-quarters of a mile in length, is carried on in the conservatories with great success. The Marquess of Exeter M.A., D.L., J.P. is lord of the manor and principal landowner. The soil is varied; subsoil, gravel and rock. The chief crops are wheat, barley, beans and peas. The area is 2,170 acres; rateable value, £4,767; the population in 1881 was 1,581, of which 1,171 are in the municipal and an additional 200 in the parliamentary borough of Stamford, and of the remaining portion 161 are officers and inmates in Stamford Workhouse.

WOTHORPE is a hamlet in this parish, with a population in 1881 of 109. Nearly the whole of the village is owned by the Marquess of Exeter and was formerly the property of the Abbots of Crowland. Wothorpe House, built by the Lord Treasurer Burghley as a house for the reception of visitors, is now ruinous: the greater part of the house was taken down in order to furnish materials for building the stables at Burghley park in 1753; the ruins are surrounded by a walled park, the property of the Marquess of Exeter.

SCALDWELL is a parish 2½ miles from the Brixworth station, 7½ north-by-east from Northampton, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Orleingbury, union of Brixworth, county court district of Northampton, rural deanery of Rothwell (third portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The church of SS. Peter and Paul situated on an eminence in the village is of stone in the Gothic style of the thirteenth century, with some portions of Early Norman date, and consists of chancel with aisles, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and a western tower with plain parapet and pinnacles, and containing 4 bells: the church underwent a thorough restoration in 1865, when the north and west galleries were removed, the tower arch opened, an organ chamber and vestry built, the church re-floored and seated with chairs, and the large east window filled with stained glass; a new reredos and choir stalls being also added: the cost of the restoration was £1,000, and the cost of lighting the church was defrayed by Sir C. E. Isham bart. as a memorial to his daughter, Isabel Vere, who died in 1858; the font is ancient and curious and has a very elaborate cover, made and presented by Charles Brown of this parish. The register dates from the year 1560. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £13, gross yearly value £250, including 147 acres of glebe, with residence, in the gift of the Duke of Buccleuch K.T. and held since 1880 by the Rev. William Osbert Clinton M.A. of Trinity College, Cambridge. Here is a Congregational chapel built in 1868. Palmer's charity of 8 acres, producing £30, is for distribution among the most deserving poor of the parish, and the poor's allotment of 4 acres, which now (1885) realizes £12 yearly, is distributed in coals to the poor on the first month in the year:

STANFORD is a parish and village on the borders of Leicestershire, from which it is separated by the Avon, 5 miles south-east from Lutterworth, 3 south-west from Welford, 8 north-east from Rugby, 13 north from Daventry, 17 north-west from Northampton and 80 from London, in the Southern division of the county, hundred of Guilsborough, union and county court district of Rugby, rural deanery of Haddon (first portion), archdeaconry of Northampton, and diocese of Peterborough. The Rugby and Stamford branch of the London and North Western railway has a station here, which is called Yelvertoft station. The Grand Junction canal also passes through the parish. The church of St. Nicholas is an edifice of local limestone and red Warwickshire stone in the Early Decorated style, consisting of chancel, clerestoried nave, aisles, south porch and an embattled western tower with pinnacles containing 5 bells: the lower portion of the chancel screen is original and was discovered on the removal of the hall and vicarage pews in 1878; the upper part and doors were purchased from Lutterworth church: a good perpendicular screen encloses the tower arch: the pulpit is partly constructed of fragments of screen work from Lutterworth: some ancient seats with a miserere remain in the chancel, and a single bench end in the north aisle: the embroidered velvet covering of the communion table is also ancient, and the chairs on either side have finely carved panels: the priest's door retains its ancient ironwork: the embattled portion of the tower is brick, the pinnacles stone and the whole is plastered: the gables of the aisles are also partly brick, and there are two debased pinnacles at the east end; there are some fragments of ancient tiles: the great glory of this church is its very fine stained glass, dating from before 1327 to the sixteenth century; the east window displays some royal heads, figures of bishops; in the centre, under a canopy, the Virgin and Child; some groups of members of the Care family in tabards in cinque cento glass; and the shields of Edward II.; his queen Isabella of France and Thomas Plantagenet or de Brotherton, eldest son of Edward I. and Earl of Norfolk, d. 1338; also Thomas, 2nd baron Wake, d. 1349; John de Mowbray, 3rd baron Mowbray, d. 1361 and Humphrey de Bohun, earl of Hereford and Essex, killed at Boroughbridge, 16th March, 1361; all of whom married into the royal house of Plantagenet: the side windows of the chancel date from about 1340, and the north-east window of the nave from 1340 to 1360; the south-east window is later: in the window east of the porch are the arms of Cecil, quartering Walcot and other coats, and in the north-west window those of Lovett: in the nave is an altar tomb with recumbent effigies in marble to Sir Thomas Cave knt, d. 1558, and Elizabeth (Danvers), his wife, with the Braye Lord J.P. The Hall

figures also of six sons and eight daughters; the sides of the tomb display the shields of both, with others; in the north aisle is a monument to Sir Ambrose Cave, brother of the preceding, and chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster to Queen Elizabeth, d. 1568, and at the head of it a quaint memorial to his daughter Margaret and her husband, Henry Knollys; in the chancel is a canopied tomb with marble effigy to Sir Thomas Cave knt. 1613, and his wife Eleanor (St. John), and near it a cenotaph to their son Richard, who died at Padua in 1606: one other anonymous monument bears a singular colloquial epitaph and the date 1640; and there is a marble tablet to an old servant of the Cave family; the church also contains a fine marble monument to Sarah, 3rd baroness Braye, who died February 21st, 1862, erected by her daughter Catherine, Countess Beauchamp; it includes a recumbent effigy of Lady Braye, and portraits in relief of three of her children, and the base is inlaid with upwards of 700 coloured stones collected by the Baroness from Tusculum and other Roman cities: the organ, once at Whitehall, was purchased about 1649 from Magdalen College, Oxford, but has been modernized. The register dates from the year 1607. The living is a discharged vicarage, united in 1876 with that of Swinford, Leicestershire, joint gross yearly value from glebe £360 with residence, in the gift of Lord Braye and the Rev. Edgell Wyatt-Edgell M.A. and held since 1875 by the Rev. William Henry Sandon M.A. of Wadham College, Oxford. The Baroness Braye bequeathed in 1858 £2,000 £3 per cent. Consols, the interest of which is to be divided yearly between eight poor widows of Stanford and of Swinford, Leicestershire. Lord Braye J.P. is lord of the manor and chief landowner. Stanford Hall, which stands on the bank of the river Avon in a park of about 150 acres, well stocked with deer, is a fine building of stuccoed brick, built in the reign of Queen Anne by Sir Roger Cave and is the seat of Lord Braye J.P. The soil is loam and clay; subsoil, clay. The chief crops are wheat and oats. The parish contains 2,051A. 1R. 1P. principally grazing land: rateable value, £3,499; the population in 1881 was 52.

STANWICK is a village and parish 2½ miles north-east from Higham Ferrers and 1½ north-east from the Higham Ferrers station of the London and North Western railway and 7 north from Wellingborough, in the Northern division of the county, hundred of Higham Ferrers, union and county court district of Thrapston, rural deanery of Higham Ferrers (first portion), archdeaconry of Oakham, and diocese of Peterborough, pleasantly situated on an acclivity near the Nene. The village is lighted with gas from Raunds. The church of St. Lawrence is an edifice of stone, in the Early English and Perpendicular styles, consisting of chancel, nave, south aisle, vestry and a western tower, with a beautiful octangular broach spire, rising to a height of 135 feet and containing a clock and 3 bells: at the west end are two small but very handsome stained windows, and in the south aisle is a stained window, erected in 1884, by Col. Cloté, to the memory of his wife: a reredos of marble was erected in 1884, by Mr. and Mrs. William Havens Rope, of this place, the sacarium repaved and other improvement effected, at a total cost of about £150; the interior was restored in the year 1856, under the direction of Messrs. Law and Sons, Northampton, at a cost of £1,300, partly by subscription, assisted by a grant from the Ecclesiastical Commissioners. The register dates from the year 1558. The living is a rectory, tithe rent-charge £8, net yearly value about £520, including 330 acres of land, with residence, in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, and held since 1882 by the Rev. James Tillard Bonner S.C.L., B.A. of New College, Oxford. There are Congregational, Wesleyan, Baptist and Free Methodist chapels. Needham's charity of £3 yearly, derived from 1A.
